However, preliminary talks with members of the American Legion showed its members were not in favor of having the memorial anywhere but the center island where it had been before. The island had been dedicated in April 1994 to serve as a memorial to all personnel uncounted from all wars.

But the Board of Selectmen asked Craig Miller of the Waterfield Design to draw a sketch of what the area could look like if it was moved to the corner of the street where the South Shore Community Center is located to give Legion members a better idea of what it might look like. Some members of the board thought it made more sense to have the memorial up off the street where people would be able to enjoy it a little more, and asked Selectman Merle Brown to have a talk with Thomas Wigmore, commander of the Sons of the American Legion, to explain the board's view.

However, Wigmore, sent a letter back to Haddad requesting the town return the POW/MIA memorial back to its original location when streetscape improvements are made to the downtown area.

Pedestrian station stopped in its tracks

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While the Board of Selectmen isn't completely ruling out the possibility of having a whistle-stop station added to the Greenbush line at some point in the future, the town does not want to include building an additional station into the current plans.

Because plans have already been finalized and the town doesn't have the funds necessary to cover the additional cost of a second station, the board decided it would be in Cohasset's best interest to send a letter to the MBTA. The letter will serve as a placeholder and will not preclude the town from adding an additional station in the future, should the needs of the town change, or funding becomes available.

"We intend to abide by the current mitigation agreement and we're not looking to change anything," said Selectman Ronnie McMorris.

The question of adding a second station, which would have pedestrian access only, came up at a meeting of the MBTA regarding the Rails with Trails project. Rails with Trails is a project that would allow pedestrians and bicyclists safe walking and biking trails along the train's right of way. Because Cohasset is the only town on the Greenbush line without pedestrian access to its station, Chairman of the Board of Health Steve Bobo thought the prospect of having an additional pedestrian-friendly station would help make the town more walkable. However, he said he was disappointed to hear a second station will not be an option at this time.

"I think it's deplorable Cohasset is the only South Shore town without pedestrian access," he said.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer asked Bobo if he would be satisfied if the town agreed not to preclude it as an option for the future, to which Bobo said, "That's all we need."

However, Joe Nolan from the MBTA told selectmen that even if the town decides to go ahead with a second station in the future, "we're not in any way proposing it's feasible." Adding a second station would affect the four-quadrant gates slated to be installed at the Pleasant Street crossing. In addition, even with a pedestrian station there needs to be a drop-off area for passengers, and some parking will still be required.

The whistle-stop station would have been located between Sohier Street and Smith Place, in the area of land between the Music Circus and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Nolan said that would virtually be the only area a whistle-stop could be added because of the topography of the land. Stations need an 800-foot stretch of relatively straight track without a street crossing, and much of the track in Cohasset has too many curves.

Weymouth. Because the show was held in a small town rather than in the city, those who attended were able to spend as much time as they wanted at each exhibit, and not have to worry about fighting the crowds.

The first flower show to be hosted in Cohasset in the last two years, members of the Garden Club say not only was "Literary License" a success for the community, it has opened the door for club members to participate in upcoming flower shows, and they could not be happier.

"We won so many awards it has entered us into the state flower show," said Byrne. She added the judges, who were from the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, suggested garden club members compile a book full of pictures of all the arrangements, to be sent to the Federation for the competition, so the designs of the day can be judged once more.

One of the most interesting arrangements, which won a blue ribbon for design, was created by Barbara Power. Her arrangement, surrounded by twisting, twirling gourds more than a foot in length, helped make her interpretation of "Pictures of Perfection," by Reginald Hill unique. "I was inspired by the gourds," Power said, adding she loves their winding shape and sage green color.

In the fall of 2003, Power went to the Appalachian Service Project pumpkin and gourd sale and saw the gourds for the first time, and was instantly drawn to them. "They come green like cucumbers, but I dried them for the winter and then had the fun of figuring out how they relate to each other," she said.

On the opposite end of the spectrum, Ann Pompeo's miniature arrangement full of pink, yellow and violet flowers, was under five inches high, and caught the eye of the judges as well.

In addition to the flowers, Byrne said the judges had wonderful things to say about the building that housed the arrangements, saying they thought the beauty of the library provided the perfect backdrop for the show.

"They thought it was such a beautiful place," said Byrne.

Throughout the planning process, which lasted just over a year, Byrne said everything went very smoothly. She added working with the library staff has been a wonderful experience due to their overwhelming support, especially as the date of the show drew near. While there aren't any plans to move forward with another show just yet, Byrne isn't ruling out beginning the entire process over in another year or so.

Luminaria bags are able to be purchased from team members who are participating in this year's American Cancer Society's Relay For Life being held on June 18 and June 19 at Cohasset High School. The Luminaria Event is held at dusk on the evening of June 18 and if you have never seen or participated in one, you should really try to attend. Around the entire track are paper bags that are decorated in honor or memory of a loved one and each one contains a candle. They are alphabetized and the candles are all lit. When it is almost dark, the lights are turned out and a lap is taking by all around the track in silence to honor and remember all those who have lost their lives to cancer or to stop and think about those who are battling or surviving this disease. Words cannot describe this event except to say that it is truly touching, emotional and beautiful all at once.

You may also purchase these bags through Jacqui Goyette-Vitello by calling her at 383-2668 or emailing her at pjvit@aol.com. The price per bag is a suggested $5 minimum and donations are always welcome beyond this amount. Anna Mary Stewart, a woman who fought long and hard and handled the Lumaria for 10 years lost her battle this past year and will be missed by all who knew and loved her. New consignment shop opens on 3A

Managers Andi Merrill of Scituate and Colleen Roth of Cohasset announce the opening of Sea Chest Consignments located on Rte. 3A across from Shaw's Plaza, at the Lapels Cleaners bldg. (side entrance).

They urge former consignees and newcomers on the South Shore to search their closets and china cabinets for unused china, crystal and silver as well as jewelry, silver trays, candle sticks, gardening and cookbooks as well as slacks, shorts, jackets, linens, handbags and lamps.

All funds support Road to Responsibility, a non-profit organization of Marshfield whose mission is to produce training opportunities to adults with disabilities. Their services also includes recreational, residential and employment for their clients.

Merrill says the shop features designer clothes and unique jewelry, Ralph Lauren and Laura Ashley luggage, Burberry raincoats, Dedham antique china, men and boys blue blazers, linen dresses and prom dresses.

Consigning hours are Monday-Friday from 10-11:30 a.m. Evening hours will be announced in the fall.

Since the shop is staffed entirely by volunteers, Merrill encouraged men and women to call 781-383-2293. Recent newcomers to volunteer include Annjean Moody of Cohasset and Nancy Archibald of Scituate.

Shop hours are Monday-Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday hours are 1 to 4 p.m.

Village shop takes art to new dimensions

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Art galleries typically showcase brilliant two-dimensional pieces, framed and hung on the walls for all to see. However, some galleries, such as the one owned and operated by Cohasset resident David Alexander, celebrate all forms of art, from those that are static, to those that move.

Adjacent to the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset Village, Alexander's shop, Art Moves, is a gallery that displays paintings and prints, but also takes art appreciation to another level. With colorful Asian bamboo and cloth kites hanging from the ceiling, model airplanes and sailboats assembled and ready to go, and various eclectic home furnishings waiting to add some spice to any home, Alexander says there is much more than paintings on a wall that can be considered decorative artwork.

"It's not just about two-dimensional art," Alexander said, adding some of the pieces in his shop, like the colorful hot-air balloons hanging from his ceiling, might not typically be considered art, but he can look at them and see beyond their being just a decoration in someone's home. "It sets the mood," he said of the various pieces of art in his shop, which have the ability to spark a conversation which other household furnishings might not, and that is what art is all about.

Alexander said he is always working toward adding interesting pieces to the collection in his shop. He works hard both traveling to different countries and investigating companies around the world that sell interesting pieces. "I literally scour the marketplace," he said.

Alexander has a beautiful collection of Ukranian Pysanky eggs, which are hand-dipped in dye to make very intricate patterns. Usually decorated around Easter, the eggs tell a story with their patterns, and Alexander said the Ukranian people often use them to commemorate special occasions, such as the birth of a child, or weddings.

David Alexander says art doesn't have to be two-dimensional. His shop Art Moves is on Ripley Road.

"This to me is what art galleries are all about — finding something to be excited about."

Alexander also has baskets made out of palm frons which are colored with vegetable dye by the Chaco Indians. One of the baskets in his shop has a long shoulder strap, which allows it to be slung over the shoulder, and Alexander said it could make a nice handbag for a woman. "It looks snappy when going out to dinner, but how hysterical is it that it's intended to hold poison darts," he said.

Other interesting items in his shop are the wooden Polish wishing boxes. Legend says any gift presented in one of the boxes is supposed to bring the recipient of the gift good luck. With various designs on the outsides, including the sun and the stars, Celtic patterns and various animals, there is one wishing box for every occasion.

But Alexander's art isn't strictly catered to adults. There are many pieces of art for children to enjoy as well, some of which are the most visible items when walking through his shop's front door. Hanging from the ceiling is a roughly four-foot long red and white Gee Bee replica model airplane. "It has gasoline fuel and a real mini-aircraft engine, and it looks like you could hop right in," Alexander said. Because he takes the time to assemble all the model planes he sells himself, there is no preparation required. "Except for maybe a run to the gas station," he said.

While the plane is one of the larger items a child may be interested in, there are some very small pieces of moving art children will be drawn to as well. On a small table set at the perfect height for children to really be able to take a good look, sits a menagerie of tiny glass animals. Children may pick out the animal they like best and place it in one of the tiny boxes laid out next to the display. Alexander said one of the best aspects of his job is watching as the children come in his shop and head straight for the animals, bursting with excitement over being able to choose one to bring home. "This to me is what art galleries are all about — finding something to be excited about," he said.

In addition to the three-dimensional art, Alexander said he also sells work created by some local artists as well as work of his own. While he has been creating his own masterpieces for years, it is a talent he said became somewhat idle until just recently. "I spent 20 years in the wine business," he said, adding at one point, he decided he needed to make a decision to either use his artistic talents, or keep them hidden. "I've been an artist all my life and went to school for it," he said, but until just over a year ago when he opened Art Moves, it hadn't been the focus of his career. While he says many people can do what they like and make a living, he wanted to do what he loves, and has found that in his Village shop.

When he's not busy tending to business at Art Moves, Alexander said he also has a boat building company that keeps him busy during the warm months. He also enjoys traveling with his family, including wife Cindy and children Kristin, 9 and Justin 14.

For more information on Art Moves, please call David Alexander at (781) 383-6383.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Stick with the facts

The time has come to allow Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean to go back to work without further ado. It is as simple as that.

We understand the Board of Selectmen in executive session is trying to come to some resolution to the police matter. Because the meetings are behind closed doors, we don't know what the holdup is and can surmise that it is tough to get five people to agree.

We've heard rumors that if the officers come back, a slew of others are going to walk out leaving us with a skeleton crew at best. We don't think the selectmen should be held hostage by that threat.

A quick perusal of the annual Town Report which details the total salary and wages of town employees – shows us that most police officers do quite well and are making in the $80,000-100,000 range.

And it is estimated that 35,000 people take the police exam through Civil Service every other year and aspire to be police officers in towns like Cohasset.

Walking out because one doesn't like a coworker certainly doesn't carry any weight in the private sector. No one should have to win a popularity contest in his or her job in order to keep it.

It's also important to point out, there are a number of officers who would welcome Sgt. Quigley and Officer McLean back.

In a small town where rumors can take on a life of their own, the only prudent course of action is to stick with the facts.

The fact is the officers have been on paid leave since Oct. 20, 2003 pending the results of the town's investigation and disciplinary hearings.

The fact is the town and officers agreed to a cooling-off period that ended a couple of weeks ago.

The fact is no mediation took place, although it was supposed to, during that time period.

The fact is the town election was held and the override passed during the hiatus from the police hearings. (Some feared the publicity surrounding the police hearings would hurt the override's chances.)

The fact is Mark Haddad, who served as the hearing officer, is no longer employed by the town and it is unclear if the police hearings would have to start over from the beginning.

The fact is over three full days of hearings, the town did not prove its allegations of abuse of police power and conduct unbecoming an officer.

The fact is the officers continue to insist they have done nothing wrong and want to return to work.

The fact is keeping the officers out is costing a lot of money including their salaries, legal fees, and overtime at the police department.

We think the toughest part of a decision is the decision itself. Once a decision is made, everyone can move ahead. Not all decisions are popular; sometimes the toughest ones get the most criticism.

The only alternative at this stage to putting the officers back to work is resuming the police hearings and we don't think anyone wants to do that. The time for deals and mediation has passed.

It's time to move on.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Financial affairs in Town of Cohasset

TO THE EDITOR:

The current situation with the Town Manager reminds me of the old story about the town drunk who voted to prohibit the sale of alcohol in his town, and then immediately moved to another town. In this case, I'm referring to the recent tax override — $400,000. Of course, this override was in addition to the "allowed" 21/2-percent increase, which was about $500,000, for a total fiscal 2005 real estate tax increase of $900,000.

In my March 29 letter to the Mariner, since this increase is not a one-time jolt, but is now in the tax base forever — yes, forever — I pointed out that this increase, over the next 30 years and assuming the average taxpayer could save or make 5 percent per year on these funds by, for example, paying down the typical 30-year mortgage with these dollars not paid out in taxes, has a real cost to Cohasset's taxpayers of $63 million.

The cost of the prior year's total tax increase (override + 21/2-percent "allowed") for a 30-year period was about $58 million.

We also realize that, unless voted down, we can anticipate another override for fiscal 2006 of the same magnitude — the "allowed" 21/2-percent increase plus at least a $400,000 override, or a third total increase with a 30-year total cost of about $68 million.

For these three years, for a home assessed at the Cohasset average of only $560,000, the 30-year real tax increase cost will be over $25,000. That's adult money! And that's only the increases! I suspect that by the end of this three-year period any senior, long-term resident living off a modest pension plus Social Security will have been driven out of town.

My point in again presenting these staggering tax increase figures is to support the following recommendations in searching for a new Town Manager.

1. Make it a job requirement that any Town Manager hired, if not a resident of Cohasset, must become (and stay) a resident of Cohasset within 12 months of being hired. It is so easy to spend other people's money and raise their taxes!

2. Look for a job candidate who has practical experience and a track record in developing an increased commercial (not industrial) presence to help increase the tax base. This can be done with no impact on Cohasset's fine character and unique culture.

3. Find a candidate who is willing to be transparent with full, non-misleading presentations of the town's fiscal/tax/budget affairs. If you feel this is not a pressing need, go back to the 2004 Town Meeting Warrant and read the first 7-8 pages. I wonder how many voters fully understood that the $400,000 override was in addition to a $500,000 tax increase that was already in the budget and did not require a specific vote to approve it per se.

4. Find a candidate who, in addition to mandatory educational and successful job experiences and accomplishments, views the position as having a major element of "financial controller." The candidate must have the ability to say "no" when monthly financial reviews show a department trending out of spending control and exceeding budget plan.

5. And, finally, find a candidate who, when the state and nation are in a recession, with unemployment soaring and state aid being slashed, does not assume that Cohasset voters demand that services be maintained, let alone increased, on a business as usual basis that ignores reality. Cohasset is not an island.

On a separate topic, I'd like to open the subject of considering that we revise the Town Advisory Committee from being all appointees to a mixture of at least five or six members being elected by the voters, and three or four being appointed. The elected members could serve staggered three-year terms as well as the appointed members. The chairperson should be one of the elected members.

Statistics on the recommendations made by the now all-appointed Advisory Committee clearly indicate a need for an increase in the representation of the spectrum of viewpoints that exist in Cohasset. Think what our U.S. Congress would be like if the sitting president appointed all of the senators and representatives. Clearly we would not have a representative democracy. That's perhaps an exaggerated analogy, but it makes the point. We surely have an abundance of talent and experience in Cohasset to provide top candidates for election.

Flower show was cooperative event

TO THE EDITOR:

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset held its successful Standard Flower Show, "Literary License," on May 12 & 13 at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. We extend our heartfelt thanks to librarians Jackie Rafferty, Judy Simons, and Sharon Moody and to all the Library Trustees, especially liaison Barbara Power, for enthusiastically welcoming our endeavor. The stacks and warmly decorated rooms provided stunning settings for our educational exhibits, horticultural displays, and floral designs. Using this venue drew many people to our beautiful library for the first time, increasing exposure for our club's community outreach as well as for the library.

In addition, we would like to thank Mary Larson and Michelle DuPuis for offering space and gracious accommodation in the Discovery Museum for our boutique which featured plants, baked goods, and local artists' works. This developing space adjacent to the library served our club and the public well.

Cooperative ventures such as these make the Town of Cohasset a special place to live indeed.

President Community Garden Club

Defending non-profits

TO THE EDITOR:

Leonora Jenkins is a little late in recommending that non-profit organizations serving the public from town-owned property pay for town services such as fire and police protection. A state law requires towns to extract an annual payment in lieu of taxes, so the financial burden is a lot more than $1 per year.

All such organizations should build up a capital reserve for major expenses such as replacement of roof, heating system, air conditioning equipment, furniture etc. Otherwise they must either engage later (maybe too late) in emergency fund raising or go belly-up. Appealing for relief from the town is not a desirable alternative, and in any case is unlikely to be timely enough.

Cohasset is a better place to live because of its many non-profit organizations such as the Lightkeepers, the Sailing Club, the Community Center, the Garden Clubs, etc. They survive economically because of countless hours of unpaid work by volunteers. The Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation is able to provide its attractive facilities at no charge to non-profit groups and at nominal charge for private functions of Cohasset residents primarily because we charge market rates (i.e. all the traffic will bear) for non-residents.

Our policies and practices have been developed by a board of directors that are mature, responsible, civic-minded, tax-paying residents of Cohasset. I think they have established a good balance between conflicting considerations. We are pleased that Ms. Jenkins realizes the value of our contributions, even though she seems to think they should cost more.

R. Murray Campbell, President
Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation

Hunger banquet

TO THE EDITOR:

The Hunger Banquet is finally scheduled for Friday, June 11. On this day Cohasset High School will have an extended lunch where the students will be divided into "haves and have nots" to symbolize the developed and less-developed countries of the world. The wealthy nations (about 20 percent of the students) will be eating a gourmet lunch in lavish conditions, while the majority of the school will be sitting on the floor eating a meager meal.

Energy-saving appliances should be a must in multi-unit developments

COMMENTARY

JACQUELINE AND DAVID WHIPPLE

Editor's note: Jacqueline and David Whipple sent the following to the Planning Board:

We feel fortunate to live in a town where citizens, volunteers, elected and appointed officials are very smart people who are hard-working, environmentally conscientious, and, in many instances, far-seeing. Two proven examples of the latter are the Water Commission and the Recycling Committee. The Growth and Development Committee should also be lauded, as well as the Conservation Commission and other conservation groups.

Now, news reports and a number of speakers on Earth Day have highlighted another challenge. Air quality, even here, is deteriorating. You probably are aware of the stories in the Boston Globe and the New York Times, the latter reporting (March 23, 2004), "Carbon dioxide, the gas largely blamed for global warming, has reached record high levels in the atmosphere after growing at an accelerated pace in the past year. Climatologists forecast continued temperature rises that will disrupt the climate, cause seas to rise and lead to other unpredictable consequences." The Third Assessment Report of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, an authoritative agency of the UN, predicts that if global warming continues at its present rate, sea levels can rise from 4 to 35 inches in an unknown amount of time.

As a seashore town, this must be of concern to Cohasset.

It particularly concerns us in view of the unknown number of multi-unit developments, affordable, market rate, and for senior housing, which are being proposed. They would contain hundreds of energy-consuming refrigerators, freezers, stoves, dishwashers, clothes washers and dryers, water heaters, furnaces or large-scale heating plants, possible air conditioning — all dependent on power sources, including carbon dioxide-emitting fossil fuels. Spokesmen for the power industry explain that our power here comes from a "mixed grid" that changes, but has been approximately 40 percent nuclear, 10 percent hydro, and the rest fossil fuels — not particularly "green".

As your members probably know, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Energy have set energy conservation standards for home appliances. Their joint consumer information arm (www.Energystar.gov) offers not only valuable information and comparisons of energy-efficient models of household appliances, but also, according to their website: "The DOE Building Technologies Program works to improve the energy efficiency of our nation's buildings through innovative new technologies and better building practices. In partnership with states, [and] communities .... works with state and local regulatory groups and others to improve building codes, appliance and equipment standards, and guidelines for efficient energy use."

We are not talking about hanging wash on the front porch as in Maine and Vermont or from balconies as in picturesque Italy or on boat clotheslines as in Asia, but we could offer the alternative of attractively screened outdoor drying areas, either individual or communal as part of overall design.

For example, it points out that many appliances [they recommend] beat the established minimum standards. "Most of the differences are on the inside, in the motors, compressors, pumps, valves, gaskets and seals, or in electronic sensors that make appliances "smarter". Even if two models look the same from the outside, less-obvious inside features can make a big difference. When buying an appliance, remember that it has two price tags: what you pay for it and what you pay for the energy and water it uses. ENERGYSTAR qualified appliances incorporate advanced technologies that use 10 to 50 percent less energy than standard models. The money saved on utility bills can more than make up for the cost of a more expensive but more energy-efficient model. (We would guess that developers would choose the cheaper model that looks the same). If just one in 10 households bought ENERGYSTAR heating and cooling equipment, the change would keep more than 17 billion pounds of pollution out of the air."

We don't know what power your Board has when it comes to specifications, permits, or contracts that would require the most energy-efficient installations in proposed multi-unit developments, but we hope you would or could enforce such a policy.

Doing this research, we discovered that, except for refrigerators, clothes dryers use more energy than any other household appliance. Of course we can't deny people dryers, but one of their energy-saving recommendations is "air drying" of laundry as an alternative when weather permits. We are not talking about hanging wash on the front porch as in Maine and Vermont or from balconies as in picturesque Italy or on boat clotheslines as in Asia, but we could offer the alternative of attractively screened outdoor drying areas, either individual or communal as part of overall design. Being a beach and harbor oriented town, it is logical we do need a place to hang wet bathing suits and beach towels.

"Air drying" would be a significant money-saving alternative, particularly for affordable units. Washing and drying of clothes represents about 10 percent of energy bills. We have learned that some existing developments in Greater Boston actually forbid the hanging out of laundry. In present circumstances this seems very environmentally-unfriendly. We hope such a policy will not be allowed in Cohasset We are a town with yachts, kayaks, and lobster pots in our yards — a reality scene — not an artificial place,

In conclusion, we also want to mention the possibility of communal laundry rooms where appropriate. We have a pieds-a-terre condo in River House, a 221-unit building at the foot of Beacon Hill, overlooking the Charles. Rather than small washers and dryers in every unit, there is a very cheerful laundry room with eight washers and 10 dryers, some "large load", perfectly adequate, according to the building manager, "because we have a lot of elderly and they don't have as much laundry as a young family."

Fortunately, our beautiful town is not yet congested or overbuilt and we know you are doing your best to keep it that way and to control what is built. Perhaps Cohasset can set a new precedent for "green" developments, as it has set an example of water supply management and disposal of solid waste through recycling.

This letter was sent simultaneously to the Board of Selectmen, Zoning Board of Appeals, Board of Health, Building Inspector, and Conservation Commission with a copy provided to the Mariner.

Graduation speaker time

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The commencement speaker at my college graduation was David E. Lilienthal.

There will be a brief pause while 90 per cent of you say, "Who?"

I didn't know either so I called the BU alumni office and they didn't know but they directed me to the Special Reports Division of the BU Library.

It took about an hour but finally the girl called me back with the answer. She even spelled Lilienthal for me. I thought I detected a note of triumph in her voice, like Salk announcing the discovery of his vaccine.

For the record, David E. Lilienthal was the chief of the Atomic Energy Commission under Harry Truman, which I suppose was quite a score for BU in the days before John Silber.

I don't remember what he said that hot June afternoon in Boston Garden because I was in too much of a hurry to get down to The Stable, our favorite watering hole on Huntington Avenue, with my friends.

All of which is a sneaky way of asking the question: Why do celebrities waste their time giving commencement day talks to kids who probably aren't listening, will forget what he or she said in a year and even his or her name a couple of years after that?

The only difference between speakers of Lilienthal's day and the current crop is that your modern yakker is more likely to be remembered for the number of protesters his appearance attracts and the causes they represent.

For instance, it comes to mind that when Barbara Bush, wife of then-President George XLI, was selected to speak at the Wellesley College commencement, the students themselves protested because she made it on her husband's name, not on her own.

You can bet the gays and lesbians, some married, some not, will be out in full force next Sunday at the Suffolk University graduation and it won't be to cheer on the guest speaker, Governor Mitt Romney, whose views on gay marriage don't coincide with theirs.

The University of St. Francis uninvited Nancy Snyderman, former medical correspondent for ABC, because a local bishop didn't like some comments she had made about an abortion procedure that was contrary to Catholic teaching.

When the University of Arizona let slide that it was considering President George XLIII as commencement speaker nearly 400 members of the faculty, staff and graduate students signed a petition claiming his appearance would be inappropriate.

Bush, the petition said, "will use the opportunity to promote his political candidacy in a key swing state." The White House suddenly decided that the President wouldn't be available that day after all. Louisiana State, the Air Force Academy, and Concordia College in Wisconsin had no such qualms.

John Kerry has already spoken at Southern University in New Orleans and will also deliver the commencement address at Boston College Law School toward the end of the month.

I don't know if the speakers get anything but maybe travel expenses and a couple of pops with the school president for their efforts but most of them get honorary degrees.

That and a buck will get them a cup of coffee in any café in the land.

HEALTH NOTES

Sewer districts could take center stage

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Wastewater plays a big part in the routine activities of the board of health. On May 6, Health Notes talked about the wastewater committee; its purpose and functions. One of the principal issues with wastewater has always been that if sewers are introduced into an area of a town, growth is in some way affected. The most recent example is the Central Sewer District where introduction of a sewer caused the sale and expansion of many homes on the hillside. Accordingly, the wastewater committee has been reluctant to recommend any plan which would really solve the town's wastewater problems because it would rapidly change the character of the affected neighborhoods. A possible solution to this problem has been under study by the sewer commission:

At the last wastewater committee meeting, an announcement was made by Ray Kasperowicz, sewer commissioner, that on its June 7 meeting, sewer commission would probably be discussing a draft submitted by the Town Counsel to hold a special Town Meeting to vote on three articles:

- A bylaw to provide the ability of the sewer commission to designate sewer districts in town. The bylaw would establish a method for Town Meeting approval of any proposed sewer district.
- Creation of a of Home Rule Petition to enable the town to decide, subject to Town Meeting vote, which districts will be sewered, and the criteria for connection thereto.
- Creation of a Cook Estate Senior Housing district, and consideration of any other districts which may be put forward.

The purpose of this initiative is to manage wastewater problems without seriously affecting normal residence turnover in any of the affected districts.

The purpose of this initiative is to manage wastewater problems without seriously affecting normal residence turnover in any of the affected districts. According to Ray, the initiative will make sure sewer access is provided to those districts where it is needed with preference given to existing residents over developers or those proposing new house construction.

An essential element of this plan is to devise an equitable way to pay for any necessary upgrades to wastewater management either on site or sewer. Establishment of equitability will probably be done by developing a process whereby low interest loans will be available on an equal basis for on site or sewer betterments. Also, those having adequate septic systems in an area scheduled for sewer development will not be required to connect to the sewer as now required by the State. There are real cost differences which are area specific between sewers of different types and onsite processing technology. These differences will be clearly presented to everyone requesting inclusion in a potential sewer district.

As noted in the May 6 article there are districts in town where every house sale must be accompanied by upgrade to an expensive state of the art septic system. Probably there are less expensive alternatives than on-site systems for several of these areas. It is important to adopt the most appropriate wastewater technology for every area of the Town. This process must be undertaken with dialogues between the sewer department, the board of health, other interested departments and the neighborhoods affected.

As this process goes ahead, we will try to keep readers abreast of this exceptionally complex process.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Free conference on senior housing

A free conference, "Housing That Works; A Conference for Older Adults Considering a Move" will be held Friday, June 4, from 10 a.m. – 3 p.m. at the Senior Center at Hingham Town Hall.

The full-day conference of lectures, workshops and a trade show will offer information about housing choices and ways to minimize the stress of moving. Seniors and children of seniors facing the possibility of a future move are invited to attend.

The morning session will consist of several panels: Selling Your Home – how to simplify the process, and Profiles in Housing – information about different senior housing options. Afternoon panels will discuss: Title 5 septic regulations ("It's in the Tank") and The Rent is Due - financing options for the various types of housing.

Following the panel discussions will be a free lunch and a tradeshow (1-3 p.m.) where conference participants will have an opportunity to meet representatives from many local senior housing communities, and professionals who provide services to help seniors have a stress-free move. In addition special raffle prizes will be offered from many local businesses.

The conference is sponsored by Cohasset Elder Affairs and the Hingham Department of Elder Services, with support from the Allerton House of Hingham, Linden Ponds at Hingham, and the Transitions Program of Home Center Real Estate in Hingham. Pre-registration is required by May 28. Call the Hingham Department of Elder Services at 781-741-1458 or Cohasset Elder Affairs, 781-383-9112.

FROM LETTERS, PAGE 8

The purpose of this Banquet is to raise awareness about the staggering facts of world and local poverty and hunger. This event is also designed to have the students of Cohasset Middle-High School create their own solution to overcome hunger in their community. Toward the end, we will be collecting goods for the Cohasset Food Pantry.

We hope everyone will support this program, and encourage others to do so; however, participation is voluntary. Students as well as members of the community may bring in canned goods on the day of the Banquet to further support this cause.

All about bridges, boats and Rte. 3A widening

HEDLUND REPORT

ROBERT HEDLUND

Currently, we have several transportation-related projects ongoing in our district. I know many of these projects affect my constituents, especially if you are a commuter, so I wanted to take some time to update you on a few of them. As always, if you have any questions or concerns, please give me a call at the State House (617-722-1646).

Fore River Bridge

Recently, I hosted a public meeting with various state and federal officials to express frustrations, ask questions and determine ways to reduce bridge openings and better notify residents of those openings. Officials on hand included: Gary Kassof, the Coast Guard's bridge program administrator for the Northeast; Scott Gebbie of Citgo; Michael Cameron, Richard DeSantis and Lonardi Philogene of MassHighway; and Captain Brian Salerno, marine safety officer with the United States Coast Guard.

At the meeting, the different factors that go into when the bridge is raised were explained. Many commuters did not realize the Coast Guard's involvement in the bridge openings. Federal laws dictate that boats have the right of way. It was also explained that the height of the old bridge combined with the need for the ships to navigate those waters at high tide and during favorable weather limit the scheduling options for passage under the bridge. It was announced, however, that over the next couple of months the old bridge would be dismantled, leaving only the higher temporary bridge. The temporary bridge has a higher clearance, meaning less bridge openings for sailboats and other private crafts. Citgo will also explore voluntary scheduling measures to further help the situation. The Coast Guard will look for ways to improve notifying MassHighway of bridge openings. Lastly, we need to look at securing federal money to dredge the river to make it deeper, therefore widening the window of opportunity tankers have to pass through the bridge, reducing rush hour openings. In my opinion most of the involved partners, especially Citgo, have been cooperative on this issue.

Back River Bridge

As the ranking member of the Transportation Committee, it was important for me to see the deck of the 61- year-old Back River Bridge replaced. The project is not tied to overall improvement efforts along Route 3A, but rather a state initiative to identify ailing bridges and replace them.

Obviously during the construction work, we will face some commuter challenges. Please know that I am fully committed to working with MassHighway and the contractor to alleviate, as much as possible, any traffic congestion. One action I have already taken is asking MassHighway to better synchronize the second light at Lowes during rush hour, allowing for a better flow of traffic.

The $3.5 million project will focus first on the northbound side. That work is scheduled to end in the fall. The highway department is then expected to open the bridge back up to four lanes of traffic for the winter, and then reduce lanes again next spring to replace the southbound side of the bridge.

Commuter boats

I recently held my third meeting with MBTA officials and the Transportation Secretary, Dan Grabaukas, in an effort to bring some equity to the Hingham commuter boat fare and parking fee structure. I continue to be encouraged by the Secretary's level of response to my concerns on behalf of the commuter boat riders.

As boat commuters know, the cost of commuting on the boat has increased drastically and at higher rates than alternative transit options in recent times. What used to cost boat riders $8 round trip now costs $14. I will continue to work hard to bring equity to commuter boat costs and help encourage ridership on this very valuable and reliable service to the South Shore. A long-term plan includes rezoning the Hingham commuter boat to be commensurate with the commuter rail fare structure. Different forms of public transit should not be pitted against one another

As part of my discussions with the T and the Secretary, we are looking into improvements to the Hingham schedule that would include a later return trip from Boston. And we had good news for commuter boat riders out of Hull. The MBTA has increased the number of commuter boats it runs each day from Hull to Long Wharf and Logan Airport in Boston. The T also plans summertime trips to Georges Island in Boston Harbor.

Humarock bridges

Recently, due to the effects of harsh winter weather, the Julian Street Bridge to Humarock was recently closed to vehicle traffic due to safety concerns. The Julian Street Bridge is one of two bridges that connect Humarock to Marshfield over the South River (the Sea Street Bridge is the other). Both bridges were on schedule to be replaced over the next couple of years, with each currently in the design phase. The Julian Street Bridge was originally scheduled to be replaced in 2006 at the earliest and was to be used as a detour while the Sea Street Bridge work was done sometime next year.

I am working with town and state officials to evaluate our options to hopefully finish the work to both bridges sooner rather than later. One possibility that I am working toward is combining the repair of both bridges into one project. The estimated cost of such a combined project would be around $6.5 million. I have communicated to the MassHighway Commissioner asking for financial help with the project.

Route 3 widening

Not too long ago we received notice that the Administration was reversing itself and had now decided to scrap their long-standing plans to widen Route 3 on the South Shore. State Officials used the construction of Greenbush as a reason to shelve the widening, claiming Greenbush would take enough vehicles off of Route 3. I disagreed and I asked eight of my South Shore (Route 3 corridor) colleagues in the Legislature to join me in writing to the Governor asking him to reconsider.

While we do not all agree on the decision to restore the Greenbush line, the nine of us are in agreement that it should not be used as an excuse to scrap the Route 3 widening. In the letter, I argued that by the MBTA's own estimates Greenbush would only eliminate 454 vehicles from Route 3 (south of Route 3/128 Braintree merge). In addition, the Route 3 peak traffic times often occur at time when Greenbush service is scheduled to be limited or non-existent, such as summer season and weekends.

As I await a formal response from the Governor's office, a meeting is scheduled with Secretary Foy and my South Shore colleagues so that we may continue to pursue this important project on behalf of the South Shore commuters.

Flushing of water mains continues

The Water Department is continuing to flush water mains, which started April 26, and will conclude May 31. Flushing will take place on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays between 9 p.m. and 2 a.m. The anticipated flushing schedule for the week of May 24, follows:

May 24 – North Main St. from Forest Ave. to Elm St.; Highland Ave. and Highland Ct.; Elm St., Margin St., Atlantic Ave. to Beach St, Beach St. and streets off these streets; Sohier St. from Ripley Rd. to No. Main St.; Ripley Rd.; Depot Ct.; and Smith Pl.

May 25 – Atlantic Ave. from Beach St. to Jerusalem Rd.; Nichols Rd.; Jerusalem Rd. from Atlantic Ave. to No. Main St.; Joy Pl.; Gammons Rd.; Redgate Ln.; and streets off all of these streets.

May 26 - Jerusalem Road from Forest Street to Atlantic Avenue and all streets off this section of Jerusalem Road.

Residents will be provided advance notification in the Patriot Ledger and Cohasset Mariner of the schedule for flushing each segment of the system. In addition, temporary street signs will be placed strategically around the affected area on the day of flushing. Notice will also be provided on the Water Dept.'s web site, www.cohassetwater.org and on the local cable access channel, Channel 10. Residents should monitor the web-site and the cable channel for schedule changes.

"Flushing cleans out sediment and deposits which may have accumulated in the water mains and is an important part of the continuing efforts to improve drinking water quality to our customers," said John McNabb, Chairman of the Water Commission.

Do not wash clothes during the time the flushing occurs. If clothing becomes stained it can be cleaned by using "Iron Out" which is available for free from the Water Department.

During the flushing program, some temporary discoloration of the water may occur. Run the COLD water faucet, preferably outside, for a short time until the discoloration clears. If your water is discolored, avoid using hot water until you flush your hot water tank by opening the valve at the bottom of the tank.

Call the Water Department at 781-383-0057 with any questions.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local senators' votes on three roll call and local representatives' votes on four roll calls from the week of May 10-14.

HOUSING AND CHAPTER 40B (H 4240)

House 153-1, gave near final approval to and sent to the Senate a bill making major changes in Chapter 40B— the state's affordable housing law. The current law essentially exempts developers from local zoning bylaws in communities in which less than ten percent of the housing is deemed affordable by the state if the developers agree to make 25 percent of the new units affordable. The bill makes many changes including allowing a city or town to reject developers' permits for a year if the community increases its annual housing stock by two percent over the prior year. It also allows communities to count all Department of Mental Health (DMH), Department of Mental Retardation (DMR) and Section 8 housing units and 50 percent of mobile homes and 75 percent of all assisted living units toward their ten percent requirement. Supporters said the bill is a fair compromise that would increase affordable housing in the state while also giving local communities some protection against aggressive developers as long as the community takes other action to increase its own housing stock. Opponents said that the existing law and the changes are both inadequate to address the crisis of the lack of affordable housing. They argued that a multi-tiered approach including the state, local communities, developers, citizens and community development corporations is necessary to address the problem. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against the bill).

House 42-112, rejected an amendment allowing a community to be exempt from all Chapter 40B requirements if it adopts a bylaw requiring that all new residential construction include at least ten percent of units that are affordable for households whose income is 80 percent or less of a region's median income. The amendment also allows communities to permit developers to meet the ten percent requirement by building the affordable units separately from the development, providing land to the community for construction of affordable units or paying into an affordable housing fund. Amendment supporters said this would give communities a simple and effective alternative to 40B and result in many affordable housing units. They argued that 40B has been a disaster that takes away power from local communities and benefits greedy developers who make exorbitant profits. Amendment opponents said that 40B has been successful in creating affordable housing. They argued that the amendment is weak and creates a very incremental process that would not address the housing shortage crisis. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment allowing communities to be exempt from 40B. A "Nay" vote is against it).

FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYERS (H 4708)

House 154-0, gave near final approval to and sent to the Senate a bill allowing funds from the state's Housing Stabilization and Investment Program to be used to fund the existing SoftSecond Loan Program for first-time homebuyers. The SoftSecond program reduces homeowners' borrowing costs by combining a three percent down payment with a conventional first mortgage and a state-subsidized second mortgage program. Supporters said this funding would ensure continuation of this 1991 program that has helped more than 7000 low and moderate-income families buy their first home. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

TAX CREDITS FOR LOW-INCOME HOUSING DEVELOPERS (H 4710)

House 153-0, approved a bill extending for another five years a 1999 program that provided $100 million in tax credits over five years to private and non-profit developers that build low-income housing projects. The credits would be used by developers to attract investors who would invest in the projects by buying the tax credits for about 80 cents on the dollar. Supporters, noting the high cost of rental units, said there is a great need for affordable low-income housing in the state. They noted that this program has produced tax credits for more than 1000 units of affordable housing since its creation in 1999. They argued it works better than subsidies and low-interest loans and would continue to produce results by creating jobs and thousands of units of affordable housing. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

MONEY LAUNDERING (S 2291)

Senate 39-0, gave initial approval to a bill making money laundering a state crime punishable by up to a 2.5 year prison sentence and/or $100,000 fine or a fine equal to twice the value of the laundered money. The measure applies to persons who hide the source of money that is derived from a criminal activity including drug trafficking, murder, kidnapping, robbery, extortion, prostitution, tax evasion and felony violations of environmental law. Supporters, noting money laundering is primarily dealt with by federal prosecutors, said that it is time for the state to step into the picture on this issue that now relates to homeland security and terrorists. They noted that the bill would allow state authorities to act on cases that do not reach a point in which federal prosecutors become involved. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

AUTO INSURANCE FRAUD (S 170)

Senate 39-0, gave near final approval to and sent to the House a bill making it a crime to engage in the practice of "insurance running" and for attorneys, doctors and others to hire a runner. Insurance runners procure clients in an attempt to collect money from insurance companies. The proposal imposes up to a 2.5-year prison sentence and/or $5000 fine on violators. Supporters said these runners often prey on uneducated and gullible people to help stage automobile accidents in order to defraud insurance companies and noted that these actions drive up auto insurance rates. They argued that while the practice is unethical, it is currently legal in Massachusetts. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

VETERANS' FLAG HOLDERS (H 2390)

Senate 39-0, gave near final approval to a House-approved bill making it a crime to destroy or remove a commemorative flag holder from a veterans' gravesite. The bill expands a current law that includes making it illegal to remove a veteran's grave marker, metal plaque or flag. Supporters said this expansion would close a loophole in the current law and ensure that veterans' gravesites are honored. The proposal needs only final House and Senate approval prior to going to Gov. Romney. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

Dispatchers claim sexual harassment deeply divided over the disciplinary action against two other officers, Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean, who have been on paid administrative leave since last October.

Both women's complaints will either wend their way through the MCAD process or Superior Court, depending on what they and their lawyers decide. Nothing has been proven at this stage and what is on file is one person's word against another's.

In a related matter, the town tried to deny DeWolfe being awarded unemployment benefits but was overturned by the state Division of Employment and Training. DeWolfe worked as a full-time dispatcher in Cohasset for 18 months and now has another job,

Then Town Manager Mark Haddad fired DeWolfe — who had received two prior, written reprimands about attendance problems — on Oct. 29, 2003 after she called Chief Robert Jackson to say she would be absent from her assigned shift due to child-care problems. The town also says DeWolfe had exhausted her sick time and by the time she was fired had used 20 days in that calendar year.

But one of DeWolfe's lawyers, Jill Goodman of Ciapciak & Associates in Norwood, says the reason given for firing DeWolfe was pretext — or to mask — the real reason which was the fact she sought stress leave due to a hostile working environment.

According to her attorneys, the Dept. of Employment and Training found the town's contention DeWolfe was fired because she failed to appear for her scheduled shift as preposterous because her letter of termination was delivered to her home before her shift was to start.

DeWolfe says nothing was done after she complained about Sgt. David Pomarico's "lewd and harassing conduct." She claims some officers watched adult-oriented cable channels at the police station and that Pomarico had a tendency to touch her in an inappropriate and unwelcome manner, by pulling her hair and bringing his face close to his. She says she did not feel safe in such an environment and was oftentimes alone with Pomarico.

In addition, there is a report that Pomarico showed off a photo of himself in the buff around the station following a recent vacation. DeWolfe did not see the photo herself, but another dispatcher and some police officers at the station allegedly did. The incident is detailed as part of DeWolfe's MCAD complaint. Her lawyers say Sgt. William Quigley reported the photo incident to Chief Jackson, and Officer James McLean reported it to Haddad, but no disciplinary action was taken, according to DeWolfe's complaint.

"We believe this is a clear-cut case of sexual harassment," Goodman said. "There aren't a lot of people there on the midnight shift – just Barbara (DeWolfe) and Pomarico. So it's her word against his, but we're sticking by hers."

But Attorney Leonard Kesten, who is representing the town, said there is no record DeWolfe ever told anyone about being sexually harassed. Kesten said there were also no documented complaints about inappropriate content on the premium cable-TV stations that were paid for by the police union. The only complaint was by Quigley who wanted the officers out on the street, he said. The premium TV stations were discontinued when Comcast took over and combined the bill for the Internet and cable-TV at the station, Kesten said.

Kesten also said DeWolfe did not see the photo of Pomerico. He said there were rumors about the photo but no documentation from someone who saw it.

"The chief asked around," Kesten said. "No one came forward, but we will look into it again."

Kesten claims DeWolfe's lawyers are using the Pomerico photo and cable-TV movies to sensationalize an otherwise routine case. "Before the story appeared in the Patriot Ledger, her lawyer called me to see if we wanted to negotiate and if so, there would be no interview with the paper.

"Without pornography in the station, this would never be a story and if it is, it's a small one," Kesten said.

Goodman, DeWolfe's attorney, said they did call Kesten to give him the opportunity to negotiate a settlement before they spoke with the paper but he would have nothing to do with it. She said they did not sensationalize any part of the allegations. "The press came to us," Goodman said. "We are just trying to help out a woman who was wronged."

Other complaint

Adrienne Davenport, who resigned on June 5, 2002 after about eight months as a full-time dispatcher, claims she left after "outrageous and false accusations" and the intimidation she felt in a meeting with three police officers, Sgt. Quigley, Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon and Officer Lisa Matos. Davenport claimed the officers did not let her respond to the allegations that she was observed by another officer kissing then Officer Brian Curran, the chief's son-in-law in the control room. She says the officers warned her to stay away from Curran in the future or risk being terminated. Davenport, who says she was outraged by the allegations, said she had become friends with Curran and his wife and children during her time on the job.

Quigley, Lennon and Matos are all named in Davenport's complaint for sexually harassing her by the false accusations of having an affair with a co-worker and for using their supervisory capacity to harass and intimidate her. She also charges then Town Manager Mark Haddad with sexual harassment and intimidation by sending the officers to question her. Davenport charges Chief Robert Jackson with aiding and abetting the harassment and for failing to stop it.

In a sworn affidavit, Quigley – who notified Haddad about the alleged behavior — states he thought the allegations of a fellow officer who witnessed the alleged kiss and flirting between Curran and Davenport were credible. The officer reported "feeling like the third wheel on a bad date" when on duty with Curran and Davenport, according to Quigley.

Haddad advised Quigley to call both Curran and Davenport to separate meetings to counsel them about their behavior while on duty. Quigley asked permission to have witnesses present.

The meeting with Curran went badly. He allegedly drew his gun from his holster prompting Quigley and Lennon to jump up and disarm him.

The meeting the next day with Davenport also went poorly, with Davenport threatening to quit, although Quigley states he told her she was not in trouble and that the warning as a "heads up" to limit her interactions with Curran to police business.

Davenport said the actions of the officers and Haddad created a hostile work environment resulting in her suffering from emotional distress and a loss of wages and benefits.

Curran resigned from the police department last September.

The MCAD's mission is to ensure equality of opportunity by enforcing the state's anti-discrimination laws including those pertaining to employment. Claims must be filed within 180 days of an alleged incident.

Oldest church to welcome newest married couples

Pastor officiates at same-sex weddings

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"Marriage for all is about civil rights but marriage is also about love and commitment."
— The Rev. Ken Read-Brown

While same-sex marriage in Massachusetts makes headlines across the country, the Rev. Ken Read-Brown of Old Ship Church in Hingham is quietly officiating at the nuptials of gay and lesbian couples.

He will officiate at four same-sex ceremonies this weekend, mostly in people's homes.

But this coming Sunday, Old Ship – which was built in 1681 — will be the setting for its first same-sex marriage. The event will be part of the worship service.

"Celebrating Marriage" is Read-Brown's sermon title on this first Sunday when marriage for same-sex couples is legal in Massachusetts.

Read-Brown says the couple, Abby Diamond and Mary Kissiday, are members of the church and formed a civil union in Vermont in 2001.

"They will once again exchange their vows, this time in a brief — yet legal — marriage ceremony," the pastor wrote in the church newsletter.

The two women say they also had a "totally un-legal ceremony" back in 1990 and it is now time to make their vows legal in Massachusetts.

"We are doing this to share this experience with all of you, and to thank you and Old Ship for your continued support of our relationship and civil rights for all," the women wrote in the church bulletin.

Read-Brown explained that First Parish Church at Old Ship is Unitarian Universalist, a denomination that has long worked to promote gay rights and the same-sex marriage issue in order to be recognized as a "Welcoming Congregation," in other words, a congregation which welcomes and accepts all people, regardless of sexual orientation.

He said while the congregation voted to welcome and accept gays, lesbians, bisexual and trans-gender people, it also welcomes people of all view points.

Read-Brown said the same-sex couples he is marrying have been together for years, in some cases 25 or more, and have deeply moving stories.

"Marriage for all is about civil rights but marriage is also about love and commitment," he said.

Read-Brown acknowledges that it may take time for society as a whole to embrace same-sex marriage, but he thinks that day will eventually arrive.

"Their families may look a little different, but then every family is a little different," he says. "But same-sex couples go to work, mow the lawn, join the PTO and pay taxes.

"America at its best is about inclusion."

school in the short amount of time they have been working together.

"Since we started, the major transition that's occurred is the change in speech. Kids have gone from saying, 'that's so gay,' to 'that's so stupid'," said Adam, adding the group is really glad to see students are making a conscious effort in their everyday language to be more accepting.

But it's been a long road to begin the club, as Gill said he wanted to make sure teaching staff, which would serve as advisors to the club, would have the proper training before leading the alliance. For the past three years, Gill and Guidance Counselor Ed Leonard have been working together to coordinate workshops for teachers, to train them in the proper ways to deal with incidents of homophobia. Once the teachers had been properly trained, the two felt they could move on to the next step of working with students.

But during the time the teachers were being trained, the wheels in Adam's mind had already begun turning. "I had thought about it a lot," he said, of beginning a group at school. After a photo exhibit titled "Shared Hearts," which depicted portraits of gay, lesbian and transgender subjects, came to town in May of 2002, Gill thought the timing seemed right, and Adam was glad to get involved right away.

Adam said as a freshman, he and two other students, both seniors, started meeting during lunch and began the GSA. While that tradition has continued to this year, Adam and the others say they would like to see more students participating.

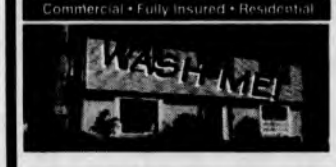
To raise awareness about the issues, as well as spread the word that there is a group in school that meets regularly to talk about issues dealing with sexuality, Katie said she and the group have made posters and hung them around the school. She said the posters have shown facts and figures about gay, lesbian and bisexual youth, including suicide rates, which she said can be higher for those questioning their sexuality.

"We're trying to get more people involved," said Katie, and by putting the information out there, it may generate more interest in becoming a part of the GSA, or at least get students to begin thinking a little more about the issues.

In addition, Leonard said two times a week, the entire student body hears a morning announcement that the GSA will be meeting during lunch, and that everyone is welcome to attend. "It helps people know we're still here, which is very important, even if you decide not go to," he said.

When not in school, Adam is very politically active and works with the Governor's Commission on Gay and Lesbian Youth. The Commission works together with the Massachusetts Department of Education and the Massachusetts Department of Public Health to create school and community based programs focusing on suicide prevention, violence intervention, and the promotion of zero-tolerance policies regarding harassment and discrimination against gay and lesbian youth. Adam said the Commission runs different seminars to promote awareness, and sometimes there are celebrity guest speakers. He said upcoming events include a rally at Copley Plaza in Boston, a concert with local bands at the Esplanade, and a college fair which showcases supportive schools.

Leonard said with all the work Adam does for the Commission, it is not uncommon for him to receive a mailing in his office at the high school which Adam sent out.



Those currently in the GSA say they would like to see more participation in the future from students in their own school, but will also be working to hold events with other GSA groups from surrounding communities.

$50K-plus Haddad settlement inked

but he feels an agreement was reached that is in the best interest of the town. Selectman Rob Spofford said the agreement had been finalized well in advance of Tuesday's meeting, but the board was waiting for the original signed copies before going public with the information.

Because the town will not be paying for another town manager for at least four months, the expense on the town for the settlement with Haddad is "insignificant," said Sullivan. Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley will receive some compensation for his additional duties, but it will not be equivalent to $50,000, Sullivan said.

"The bottom line is, as a community, we took quick action and we're moving forward," said Sullivan.

In the interim, Selectman Ronnie McMorris said there has been a very smooth transition with Buckley coming into the position. "I think he's doing a great job," she said, adding the town is running very well.

Haddad resigned May 5 for personal reasons, after holding the post of Town Manager for about seven years.

Revaluation notice to property owners

The Cohasset Board of Assessors will resume its ongoing revaluation effort as it prepares for recertification by the Department of Revenue for Fiscal Year 2005. During the next few months the assessors' staff will be physically inspecting residential properties in town. Due to the high volume of inspections, the staff will conduct daily door-to-door inspections as time permits.

The staff will perform an interior inspection, noting any changes on the property record card. The entire inspection will take just a few minutes. Measurement of buildings will be verified, if necessary. Digital cameras will be used to produce photos of the exterior of the building for the database.

Digital cameras will be used to produce photos of the exterior of the building for the database.

The assessors' staff will be able to produce proper identification. If the homeowner or a person over 18 years of age is not at home on the first call, a notice will be left asking the homeowner to call for an appointment.

The scope of this update is to test the quality of the town's database and make any necessary corrections.

Cohasset's Aidan Buick (#15) spins away from Scituate's Chris Connelly in recent Pilgrim Conference showdown. The Skippers won this game, and may need to be Scituate again to get back to the postseason.

Clean slate

CHS laxmen get back to .500 mark with back-to-back wins

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

It is now a four game season for the Cohasset High boys lacrosse team.

A couple of big road wins over Sandwich and Nantucket, last week, have moved the Skippers to .500 for the first time this season, at 6-6, and, more importantly, has given them a big boost of momentum and confidence.

"We're definitely headed in the right direction off of these two wins," noted Skippers first year coach Stu Curran. "We've gotten some players back from injury who are starting to settle in, and we're just playing much better lacrosse right now than we were early on."

The Skippers must now win two of their remaining four games to achieve a .500 season and thus qualify for the postseason. The good news is all four are at home. They'll host Milton today (4 p.m.), a much improved Scituate team (7-6) tomorrow, Nantucket on Monday and Canton on Wednesday to close things out.

"None of those games are gimmees, but that's the way we'd want it," said Curran. "We want to go in fighting hard. That will get us ready. If we can win, say, three of those four or even all four, we'll move up a couple of spots in the seedings and that will also probably be an indication we're playing pretty good lacrosse."

The MIAA will release seedings and pairings next weekend, with games for the Div. 3 tourney expected to get underway on Thursday.

Skippers 10, Sandwich 6

The Skippers bounced off of the bus after an hour long trip to put together a well balanced attack on Thursday. Junior attackman Jake Previte paced the offense with four goals and three assists, and senior captain Mike Rasmussen buried four as well. Midfielder Mark Davis had three assists.

The offense started a little slow, and the host Black Knights were able to take a quick 2-0 lead, but the offense eventually picked it up and the defense never wavered, according to Coach Curran.

Senior netminder Nick Murphy (nine saves) played well in net in back of a strong defense-- led by Conor Buick, Jeff Brown and Mike Devine.

Buick was once again asked to mark up the opposition's top scorer, and he once again did an outstanding job, holding said player to just one goal—and that came on a breakaway.

"We had a good overall effort, which is what we needed, because Sandwich is a quality team," said Curran. "We were sluggish out of gate, but we had enough firepower to get it done in the end. We just kept our motor going the whole time, and I think that eventually wore

Boys tennis team qualifies for postseason play for third straight year

By Lou Molinari
CORRESPONDENT

Blain Morin's tiebreak win on Tuesday catapulted the Cohasset High boys tennis team into the state tournament for the third straight year.

The young Cohasset team slipped past Hingham, 3-2, Tuesday, to improve its record to 9-5 for the season.

The Skippers magic win number nine assured them of no less than a .500 season record to open the door to qualification.

There's a good chance the Cohasset boys could finish its regular season of play with its best won and loss record in the three year tenure of head coach Kent Parrot. With four games remaining to be played, the Skippers could very well finish at 13-5.

Cohasset is 6-3 in South Shore League play, tied with Harwich for second. Undefeated Norwell leads the league.

The huge tie-breaking win, which is akin to extra innings in baseball, had Morin defeating Adam Olczek, 6-3, 4-6, 7-6.

"Blair put us over the top," declared coach Parrot. "At one point he was down 0-3, in the final match, and fought back big to come through with the win."

CHS girls tennis team picking it up down stretch

Emilie Sullivan and Corey Evans found themselves in a familiar position on Tuesday.

With Cohasset and Hingham splitting their other four matches, everyone's attention turned to number two doubles. During last year's state championship match, the Cohasset duo was in the same position and won.

This may be a new year and the stakes not quite as high, but the result was the same.

After losing their first set, 4-6, Sullivan and Evans dominated the second set, 6-0. They fought hard to take the third set, 6-4, giving Cohasset a 3-2 win against arguably the best team they have played this year.

Sullivan held serve to give her team a 4-2 advantage in that third set. After Hingham held their own serve twice, and Evans did the same, Sullivan was serving with a double match point.

Evans hit a couple of beautiful shots at the net to give the home team the win.

Cohasset's other two victories came in singles play, with Liz Stone and Chelsea Grossman both taking straight set victories.

Lady laxers getting healthy and back into postseason chase

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

A pair of big back-to-back wins on the road over Cape Cod Academy and Nantucket to close out last week has pushed the Cohasset High girls lacrosse team back into the playoff picture.

Paced by a breakout five-goal performance from freshman Lindsey Durkin, on Wednesday, the Lady Skippers managed to weather a red hot Cape Cod Academy goalie to take a 7-5 decision.

Seniors Nicole Turgiss and Meghan Marr had the other goals in the game, and the defensive unit as a whole came up big in front of sophomore netminder Joanna Hamilton (seven saves).

The road trip on Saturday was even longer (in fact, there was a boat trip in there too), but the game itself was far less dramatic, as the girls cruised to a 14-2 victory that got them back to the .500 mark for at least a couple of days at 6-6-1.

Star junior midfielder Lauren Rizzotti (bruised wrist) returned from a three-game absence to score a game best five goals. Turgiss scored three times, bringing her team best total to 33 on the year and her career total to 99 goals. Marr scored twice, while Durkin, sophomores Cassie Rosano and Mia Lieb-Lappen and senior captain

Major League Baseball Roundup – Week 3

The highlight of baseball usually is a great play in the field, a home-run hit or a great throw. This week, the highlight in baseball is an example of character and sportsmanship. In a very exciting match up with the Cardinals, A's rookie Derek Froio playing second base, with the bases loaded up with Cardinals, dove for a line drive and to most people, including the umpire it looked like he caught the ball. After he dove for the ball and rolled with it, the umpire called the ball caught, however Derek came up and said before the crowd, "I dropped the ball". Derek's act of sportsmanship, of doing the right thing, allowed the inning to continue. And that, baseball fans, is the highlight of the week.

Cardinals

On Tuesday, the Cards faced the A's. Well, "it ain't over till it's over", the Cards, were down by 10 runs heading into the bottom of the 6th. With their rally caps on, the Cards came back and scored 7 runs, giving the A's something to think about. John Kearney doubled, scoring 2 RBI's and Sebastian "Sea Bass" Braga singled with an RBI to lead the rally. Other highlights include a Vinnie Calorio throw to home, to throw an A out and and a great right field catch by Ian Porter with the bases loaded to end a scoring threat. Later in the week, the Cards faced the Rangers in an exciting matchup. Brendan Horigan led the Cards with 2 singles, a double and an RBI. The game was tied in the bottom of the 5th, and Alex Harper had a tremendous, behind the back, center field catch off a Ranger bat. Todd Emmanuello then struck out the next Ranger. Vinnie Calorio made a great stop at 2nd to end the inning. The Rangers and the Cards fought it out to a tie.

Pirates

The Pirates faced the Red Sox in a pitching duel. Tom Buckley and Chris Walsh shared the mound for the Pirates and held the hard hitting Sox to two runs. Robbie Hill was fantastic behind the plate in the bottom three innings. The Pirates play was consistent throughout the game, with solid efforts in the field, led by Sean MacCarthy in right field. Joe Leighton had a good night at the plate with a single that scored an RBI. Aggressive base running manufactured the runs necessary to beat the Red Sox, 5-2. In a losing effort to the Rangers, Patrick Lewis had the defensive play of the game, making a diving catch at 1st, with two Rangers in scoring position to end the third inning. On Sunday, the Pirates took an early lead against the A's, up 3-0 in the first inning. Robbie Hill was strong on the mound as he faced the hard hitting A's. Tom Buckley had an RBI single with the bases loaded to start the scoring. Derek Youngman doubled in the top of the third. The Pirates played solid, team ball offensively and defensively. Smart base running created scoring opportunities. Geoff Evans played strongly behind the plate, keeping the A's from scoring. A fourth inning rally by the A's erased the Pirates lead.

Rangers

In a "game of inches", the Rangers came out on top versus the Pirates 11-7.

Rookie Jamie Faber, got the win from the mound. Jamie shows great strength and composure in his pitching duties, as he faces some of the league's heaviest hitters. John Giuggo, quietly continues to perform at the plate, driving in four RBI's. Jeff Charles was solid at first base. With Pirates on base in scoring position for the tie, Jeff made a great catch to end the inning and the Pirates rally. Facing the Cards later in the week, with the lead going back and forth, the Rangers tied the mighty Cards. Christian Allard pitched three solid innings for the Rangers. Eamon Davis doubled for an RBI. Eric Wassel had a 2 RBI single. The Rangers finished the week, beating the Dodgers 9-0. Jamie Faber and Chase Stebbins pitched the shutout, without giving up any walks. Dean Driscoll tripled. Chris Allard was great defensively at short stop.

Athletics

The A's faced off against the Cards and played solidly. The A's were consistent at the plate, putting the ball into play. Smart base running allowed The A's to score. The defensive play of the game was a pick off from Brendan Doonan at catcher to John Maher at first to get the base runner out. Jake Kissick, Andy McKenna and Jack Murphy all drove in RBI's with strong bats. The A's held on, despite a Cards rally in the bottom of the 6th , to win 13-10. The A's faced the Red Sox later in the week in a thrilling matchup. Brendan Doonan had an RBI triple.

Other strong performances in the A's 7-5 win over the Red Sox include strong at bats by Jack Murphy with a single RBI, and lead off batter Mike Monaco. EJ Culhane was great at shortstop, making two great throws to home to prevent runs from scoring. John Plante in right field quickly fielded several line drives, preventing the Red Sox from gaining extra bases. In Sunday night action versus the Pirates, the A's found themselves down 3-2 through 3 innings. The A's bats came alive in the fourth inning, when Brendan Doonan got a single and stole second. Johnny Maher was at bat, and down 0-2 in the count, hit a shot to left field that drove in Doonan for the tying run and got him on third. Jack Murphy drove in the winning RBI with a single. Johnny Maher pitched the last three innings and had seven strikeouts.

Mets

The mighty Mets won both contests this week, behind slugger Robbie McCunney. McCunney had two homeruns in a matchup against the Dodgers. In both games (the other versus the Cardinals), good defensive play was critical for each win. Colin Tarpey has been solid in the outfield. Gabe Seksay has been key at first base, making several outs. Drew Cobin pitched well versus the Cardinals. Tommy Condon has been a cornerstone of strength behind the plate, keeping the opponents from scoring. Robert Jones shored up the offensive game with several big hits that drove in a few RBI

Last week

Dodgers

Through diversity comes strength and character. The young Dodgers, despite coming up short in the win column, get better and better each game. Veterans Chris Brown and Justin Yeager show strength on the field and at the plate with solid hitting. They show leadership in the dugout with this young team. Mitch McNeary has been impressive pitching. Terry McCormick is playing solidly in right field. Tyler Judge had several key hits versus the Mets. Johnny McGoldrick has been playing well in the field and at the plate. First year player Jake Wheelright is also playing well.

Red Sox

The weather, the fans, and the teams were all in perfect harmony for an exciting matchup against the A's. The A's scored quickly in the first inning.

But the excitement diminished. The Sox put two men on, and then, Jordan Berry came to the plate. First pitch, first swing and Jordan hit a shot over the fence in center field. The game was tied. In the bottom of the second inning,

Pete McKenna hit a strong single. Shane Cummings singled. Jodi Rosano had a base hit. Berry came back to the plate and hit a standup triple, scoring another RBI. The A's rallied back and took the lead. Jordan Berry then took to the mound in the 4th inning, and struck out the side. Jack Carrier had a strong base hit, then through aggressive base running found his way to third.

Unfortunately, the next batter grounded out to first to end the inning. Jodi Rosano played behind the plate when Berry was pitching, capably catching the fast balls Berry was throwing at the A's batters. The Red Sox couldn't hold on though, coming out on the downside of the 7-5 score.

Girls roll in four weekend games

Girls youth lacrosse report

The Cohasset girls youth lacrosse teams kept up their winning ways with dominant performances the weekend of May 15 and 16.

The Cohasset White team opened the weekend making up a game against South Boston at Deer Hill on Saturday, May 15.

Kaci Kucinski opened the scoring on a Kaleigh Teague feed less than two minutes into the contest, then scored again just seconds later, and Cohasset was off to the races. Kucinski scored twice more in the first half, and Hannah Burgess and Maddy Altholtz netted solo scores as Cohasset controlled the tempo en route to a 6-2 halftime lead.

After a fast South Boston rally made the score 6-4, Paige Smith converted a direct-free position for her first goal of the year. Cohasset then went into a passing game, with Kucinski finishing passes from Whitney Jaffe and Abby Faulkner for two more goals to put the game out of reach. Maddy Altholtz scored her second goal before South Boston netted a late goal to make the final 10-5.

Thomson Jaffe and Olivia Murphy combined for five saves in the Cohasset nets, and Lauren Blaze, Molly McElgunn and Dylanne Axelson turned several South Boston scoring chances into Cohasset fast breaks, playing scoop-and-run all afternoon long.

It was more of the same when the White team played Norwell at home on Sunday, May 16, with Cohasset racing out to a big lead and never looking back. While Amy Meikleham led the scoring with a hat trick, Kaleigh Teague and Whitney Jaffe each had had their first-ever two-goal games. Isabelle Franklin also netted two goals. Olivia Sullivan opened the day's scoring and Missy Sease added her first career goal, and Abby Faulkner had her second straight game with an assist - while playing defense - as Cohasset rolled.

As impressive as the offense was - and Cohasset played by a 5-pass minimum in the second half of the game, instead of the regular three - the defense was even better. Lauren Blaze, Dylanne Axelson and Lauren Hayes played terrific shutdown defense. When Norwell was able to get a quality shot, Thomson Jaffe was there for the stop, picking up seven saves and controlling the loose balls to preserve a 12-0 shutout.

Cohasset's other teams spent Sunday in Duxbury, routing the home teams.

Sophie Bertolami and Lindsay Allard each scored first-half hat tricks, as Cohasset dominated the game from the opening draw. Defender Mimi Mahoney converted a Bridget Cahill pass for her first-ever score, Allard fed Kathleen Kelly for another and Isabelle Franklin cashed in on an intercepted clearing pass to give Cohasset a 9-3 halftime lead.

The two teams played a much more even second half, with Hannah Burgess scoring twice to equal Duxbury's second-half total, while the defense of Mahoney, Michelle Berube, Jessica Fusco and Anna Michalowski never gave the Green Dragons much room to shoot. When Duxbury had opportunities, Whitney Jaffe snuffed them. She finished with seven saves in an 11-5 Cohasset win.

Cohasset's 15-U team (grades 7 and 8) completed the weekend's dominance with a lopsided 14-4 win in Duxbury.

Maura Barnes and Caitlin Mahoney led the way with three goals apiece, while Gabriella Flibotte and Katelyn Ryan each scored twice. Katie Gaumer, Madeline Leahy and Rebecca Evans each scored their first goals of the year, while McKenna Teague finished with a goal and an assist. Leahy, Barnes and Thomson Jaffe also picked up assists on the day.

The defense of Rebecca Evans, Natalie Hunt, Liz Tetrault and Amanda Masotta was dominant early in the game, and then moved to offense when the game became a route. There, they controlled the ball and kept it away from Cohasset's end, where all of the offensive players had gone.

After Thomson Jaffe manned the net in the first half, Madeline Leahy and Gabriella Flibotte both made their goaltending debuts in the second half, with Leahy stopping one shot and Flibotte six as time wound down.

Cohasset's 13-U teams will next face off at halftime of a girls varsity game on Spirit Night at the high school on May 21, and will play in Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League action again next weekend against teams from Hingham.

Cohasset White is now 3-0-1 on the year, while Cohasset Blue is 3-1 and the Cohasset 15-U team is 4-0-1

BOYS YOUTH LACROSSE REPORT

May 9

The White U11 squad traveled to Duxbury for a Mother's Day match. The boys came ready to play knowing that Duxbury always brings a strong team to the field. With Willy Brown anchoring the defense with inspired goaltending, the Cohasset boys matched Duxbury up and down the field in the first half. Duxbury found the net a few more times in the first half, with Cohasset missing the net on a number of good scoring chances. Score at the half was Duxbury up 4-1, with Derek Froio netting Cohasset's only score. The boys were energized heading into the third quarter, scoring two quick goals to close the gap to 4-3. Matt Michaud scored on a feed from Jamie Faber, and Andrew Fontaine added an unassisted tally. Cohasset's goalkeeper John Mills kept Duxbury at bay as the teams battled back and forth. Duxbury added two late third quarter tallies and led 6-3 after three periods. The fourth quarter was a continuation of fine offensive and defensive play from both teams. Duxbury added one more score and Cohasset responded with a goal from Jay Salerno with an assist by Blair McGowan. When the final whistle sounded, Duxbury prevailed 7-4.

The U11 Black team played a very close and hard fought game vs. Duxbury as well , but also came up a little short in 6-5 loss. Patrick Kearney had a great game overall with a goal and two assists to Chase Baldwin to give Cohasset a 3-2 half time lead. Chris Murphy was in goal the first half and made many tough stops and started many long breaks. The second half saw Murphy help his own cause by scoring a goal with an assist from Dan Barnes and Robbie Mahoney also lit the lamp with a nice fake and roll for his first tally. Jake Durkin was in goal for the first time this year and made some key 4th period saves. Charlie Neeves, Gus Helbock, Sarah Brown and Christian Allard played strong end to end as middies. Foster Eymer and Alex Hurd were strong on defense. In the passing department, Christian Davis,Kearney,Allard and Brendon Queenan all did well looking up the field.

The U13 Black Team enjoyed a muddy, well played and hard fought 7-5 victory over Marshfield with an all around team effort. Cohasset jumped out to a quick 3-0 lead before Marshfield settled down to tie the game at 3-3. Derek Youngman and Jack Murphy helped Cohasset control the game early by dominating the face-off battles. A big key for the boys has been solid goaltending and they were once again led by Sam Leahy in the first half and Jack Murphy in the second.

Taylor McQuade, Andrew Graham and Jack Nelson led the way on defense and did a nice job with initiating the transition game. The midfield was outstanding in transition which can be attributed to the boys aggressive play in winning ground balls. Terence Durkin, Andrew Littauer, Conor Queenan, and Jeff Durkin stood out with their determined two-way play. The Cohasset offense was led by John Kearney, Thomas Buckley, Justin Yeager and Andrew Whitney.

The U15 Blue Squad defeated Barnstable 10-6 on a rainy Mother's Day down on the Cape. Cohasset's ball movement and hustle proved to be too much for their opponent in what was a very physical match-up. After taking the half time lead of 5-2, Barnstable fought back to tie the game. The squad responded to this charge with a rally of their own by posting five more goals in the second half locking in a game winning lead. Sean Silvia netted two goals and played defense half the game. Charlie Mushin posted an assist. Teddy Galligan scored one while being well positioned on the crease. Matt Burgess added two more goals to his tally and assisted once. Charlie Czerkawski dominated face offs, ground balls, and opposing players trying to knock him off his feet while scoring twice and assisting once. Pete Ernst netted two more as he continues to show his presence on the field. Greg Gallagher netted one and showed great hustle winning ground balls. Owen Landon did a great job as usual at Midi. Jonny Wade, Justin Connors and RK Quebec showed their athleticism playing both ways while Jake Cuneo and Mike Bilodeau were systematically unbeatable on defense. "Big Jake" continues to baffle opponents with coast to coast clears. Wes Ulmer, though dust turned to mud, proved once again why he is one of the best goalies in the league

The U15 White team continued its dominance and winning ways by posting a lopsided win over a clearly overmatched Marshfield tribe to celebrate a very soggy Mother's Day victory. The face-off match up set the tone for the day as Mark Flibotte and PJ McCaw won 90% of the quick starts and turned their first into a goal with a nice fast break which led to the tally with less than 1 minute off the clock. Cameo appearances by Max Shipp and Olly Forrer provided some added thrills as both of these younger players not only supported a thin roster, but they both tallied goals and assists showing that the future of Cohasset lax is in good hands. Mark Flibotte was a scoring machine, registering 4 of the first 6 points as Marshfield was helpless to cover him and with pinpoint passing by Mike Grimm, Chris Mills, and Andrew Bell, the ball seemed to know where it was going when it reached Mark's stick. Nathan Porter recorded another stellar performance in the goal notching 8 saves, but never really being tested in the cage.

Cohasset High leading scorer Paul Previte (#20) spins away from a Hanover defender in recent Pilgrim Conference clash.

Lacrosse Spirit Night tomorrow

Tomorrow night, Friday, May 21st, is the annual lacrosse Spirit Night at Alumni field, Cohasset High School. The varsity boys will play 5- 7:00 PM against their southern Sailor rivals, Scituate. The varsity girls will end the night, under the lights, against Bourne from 7-8:00 PM. During the boys halftime, Mitch Brown will have a scrimmage for us with his and Kirk Bukowski's U 11 boys team. During the 1/2 time of the girl's game. Chuck Jaffe will have a scrimmage for us with his U13 girls.

We are requesting that all spectator lacrosse sticks be left at home in order to prevent injury to others and/or property damage. Parents-we also strongly suggest you take this opportunity for a family night and please accompany your children. Any youth lax player who shows up in uniform and is accompanied by a parent, will be admitted for free. Parents must pay. Admission is $4 for adults and $3 for children and seniors.

Soda, water, pizza and candy will be available for purchase.

The boys have won their last 3 games-on the road. Our defense has become extremely coherent under the leadership of our senior goalie captain, Nick Murphy. No one has been asked to work harder on defense, than senior Captain Conor Buick-game after game. Steve Davis, is trying his hand at face offs and receives huge support from senior captain Mike Devine, Casey Coleman, and Jeff Brown. Guys in practice who are pushing the starting "D" include key newcomers Cranden Leahy and Kevin Dinsmore.

On the offensive end, steady progress has been made by our top scoring attackman Jake Previte, along with the prowess of Mike Rasmussen, Jon Grimm and Aiden Buick. They have created more scoring chances over the past 4 games than we had in the prior month, and are showing themselves to be a force to be reckoned with.

As always, the very key to team success hinges on the grit. hustle and smart play at the midfield. Mark Davis has been the brightest contributor in his role as the top scorer on the midline. Other middies providing leadership include the ever steady Trevor Brady, Dwayne Morris, Ryan Tufts, Sam Steele, Rob Carpenter, and Jake Kovach. In the last several games, both Kovach and Brady have created 3-4 plays each that allow us to keep possession or hustle back to stop a fast break. Joe Durkin, side-lined with an injury, has been key for keeping stats, penalty times, and running the box.

With improvement evident after many days of tough practice, this week should be key towards a good berth in the tournament. Scituate will be coming to Alumni field with an attitude about showing us that they intend to win. Our boys are excited to play before our families and friends and recent or not-so-recent CHS alumns. The boys will have to focus with smarts, cohesiveness, and determination-one shift at a time, one play at a time, to take care of business.

On the girls side we have senior captain Nicole Turgiss (soon to be playing lax at Colby College) working on her 100th career goal. With Libby Meikelham out for the season with a knee injury, her team has had to step things up quite a bit. Co-captain Ashley Faber has been a huge leader for the girls this year as well as Megan Marr and Christen Reardon. They have also been missing the contributions of senior Jessie Guild who also has been injured.

Sophomore goalie Joanna Hamilton has been very efficient in the net as a stopper. Junior Lauren Rizzotti has also been huge for the team this year ripping goal after goal for the Lady Skippers.

So come and enjoy a traditional family event at our high school. It's a great night out for all. Help will surely be needed. Please call Lyn Previte @ 781-383-9723 if you are available and willing (and have a sense of humor).

CHS baseball team needs to win final five to earn postseason bid

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

It comes down to this: the Cohasset High baseball team must run the table to earn the first postseason bid in recent memory for the program.

That's right: five games and five wins are what's needed.

No small task, to say the least. Indeed, it's been ages since the last five game win streak on the CHS big diamond too.

However, second year Skippers coach Al Gallotta hardly sounds like a man resigned to the fact his team won't be playing in June.

"The schedule from here on out is pretty favorable for us," said Gallotta, who helped direct many an Archbishop Williams teams to the postseason during his previous 27-year coaching tenure. "I'm not giving up anything, and I don't think the kids are either."

There are two games in there apiece versus Sacred Heart and Holbrook, two sub-500 teams from a weaker Mayflower League. It's certainly not outside the realm of possibility to suggest the Skippers could sweep those four games. That would bring it all down to next Tuesday's showdown with South Shore League rival Mashpee, who haven't exactly been world beaters themselves.

He's lined up staff aces Ted Straugh and Mike Dooley to start on the mound in two of those games apiece, with Chris Bryan likely to earn the other starting nod.

"It won't be easy, but we've got something to play for," said Gallotta. "Hopefully, the kids repond to that."

Though the end results might not reflect it, the coach does indeed feel his players have been responding of late.

Carver 5, Skippers 3

The team lost a heartbreaking 5-3 decision to league rival Carver last Monday, despite outhitting the host Crusaders by a 13-8 margin.

"Our inability to hit in the clutch just killed us there," noted Gallotta.

Junior Ted Straughn deserved a better fate in that one, as he struck out 12 and walked just three while going the distance on the mound.

Four of the Carver runs came across in the fourth inning, with an error right in the middle of that crooked number being hung.

Senior shortstop John Andrade and junior catcher Louis Blanco each had three hits in the game. In fact, Blanco, the team's leading hitter by far (.450), was just a home run short of the cycle and knocked in two of the runs. Junior Matt Casey also had two hits.

Skippers 8, S.S. Christian 3

The Skippers swept the two game season series with South Shore Christian on Tuesday behind a strong complete game effort on the mound from senior captain Mike Dooley (five hits, six strikeouts). Dooley surrendered three hits and two runs in the first inning, but settled down from there to allow just two more hits the rest of the way.

The Skippers had just seven hits but, unlike the previous game, they put them together at the right time.

Casey had a key two-run homer that rolled well beyond the left fielder once it got over him. Senior captain Jeff Barrett had an rbi double and a sacrifice fly and junior Tim Piczak had two hits and an rbi.

The Skippers, who have been picking it up in the field over the last several games, committed only one error while recording 15 outs in the field.

"We've settled things down a lot in the field lately," said Gallotta, "especially in the infield, and Louis (Blanco) has really made himself into a very good defensive catcher."

The Skippers' primary infield has Barrett starting at first, John Downing at second, Andrade at short and Dooley at third. When Dooley starts on the mound, Pilczak generally moves in from the outfield to take his place.

Harwich 17, Skippers 4

The Skippers were simply no match for the perennially SSL contending Rough Ryders on the road Thursday. The hosts pounded out 19 hits against a couple of Cohasset pitchers to post the lopsided victory.

Suddenly hot hitting senior Tim Anton had two of the Skippers four hits in the game to improve his batting average to .364, second on the team to only Blanco--who, by the by, had a 2-run triple in this game.

"Tim has been an extremely pleasant surprise for us," said Gallotta of Anton, who had not played ball since his freshman year. "He's given us a boost offensively and played pretty well in the outfield too."

Anton starts most games in right field, but generally moves to center when Straughn starts on the mound.

down Sandwich."

Skippers 9, Nantucket 6

Saturday brought an even longer bus ride that was followed by an equally long ferry ride, but the determined CHS laxmen refused to be derailed.

The start was again slow, which Curran conceded might have had something to do with the travel. It also might have had something to do with a red hot Whalers goaltender, who faced 18 shots in the first half alone, and an exorbitant number of penalties. Skippers found themselves In the end, though, the Skippers simply had too much firepower,

"The game was called extremely tight by the refs and we wound up playing down a lot of the game," reported Curran. "As a result, we had some trouble getting into the flow of the game. Fortunately, we were able to convert on enough of our chances, though, which I think had a lot to do with our ball control game. We did a very good job of possessing,."

Previte came through with his second straight four goal, three assist output, and Rasmussen chipped in with three tallies. Aiden Buick and Sam Steele rounded out the scoring with one apiece.

The Whalers scored the game's first two goal, but the Skippers had gained control by halftime, taking a 5-3 lead into the break.

The Skippers scored one of their prettiest goals of the season early in the third quarter to go up by three and seemingly gain momentum for good. The play started when freshman standout Jeff Brown made a steal at the top of the Skippers defensive box, moved the ball quickly up field to Rasmussen, who then found Previte by the side of the net. Not surprisingly, many of the Whaler defenders were drawn to the offensively gifted Previte, and that opened Aidan Buick up for a weak side run and a quick flip from Previte that resulted in a one-timer into the open half of the net.

After the game, Coach Curran made a point to specifically laud Brown and senior face-off man Stephen Davis.

"Three or four times per game, , Jeff seems to come up with a play that simply defies his age," saud Curran. "He's a freshman in name only."

They're in again

Brian Lutenger, 6-3, 6-4, and the Skippers number two singles Neil Seery topped Matt Chin, 6-2, 6-3.

"We are especially proud of this year's team," noted Parrot, who is carrying a squad comprised by nine freshmen, one senior, two juniors and two sophomores). "This is our youngest team in three year. We may very well post our best record in three years with, surprisingly, our youngest team."

Cohasset is scheduled to play Cape Cod Academy today and follow that with a match up against Sacred Heart on Friday. The Cohasset team will close out its regular season with matches on Monday and Tuesday.

According to coach Parrot, Cohasset may know the tourney pairings by next Thursday or Friday.

Not only was coach Parrot excited over his team's tourney-qualifying win, he was also overjoyed with the results of the Cohasset girls tennis team, 3-2, winners over Hingham Tuesday.

The win got down to the second doubles, Cohasset working three sets for the win to improve its record at 13-1.

Ashley Faber rounded out the scoring with solo tallies. Faber also had a memorable assist, feeding a charging Rizzotti with a bullet pass for a pretty catch and fire goal.

"We seem to be coming together somewhat," said third year Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney. "We're developing some depth, with some younger players having been forced to step up while some veterans were battling injuries. And now we've got some of those veterans getting healthy. We should be just about back to 100 percent (healthy) by the end of this week, or at least a lot closer to it than we have been in a long time."

In addition to Rizzotti's return, the Lady Skippers also got back key senior defender Christen Reardon last week and junior standout Lisa Spirito is expected back from a leg injury by Friday. Senior Jessie Guild may also be nearing a return from a head injury, according to the coach.

"All of a sudden, we've got depth," noted Sweeney with a smile. "With all the players we've been missing the last few weeks, we've thrown some of our younger girls to the wolves somewhat, and a lot of them have really responded and made the most of their minutes."

The coach is referring here specifically to sophomores Lieb-Lappen and Rosano and freshmen Durkin and Caryn Garber, a forward by trade who has really stepped up defensively as a marking midfielder the last few games.

"Defensively, we're playing as well as we have all year," said Sweeney. "Ashley (Faber) continues to be just a force at both ends of the field. The same goes for Miranda (Lanzilotti), and Danielle Hajjar has really picked it up too. We've got a lot of new faces back there this year. It took a little while, but they all just seem to be clicking with each other now."

State power Duxbury knocked the Lady Skippers one back of the magic .500 mark on Tuesday with a lopsided 20-7 win, but Coach Sweeney likes the prospect of his team winning three of its final four games to finish with a winning record and thus qualify for the state tourney.

All four of these games will be at home, and three of them are against teams the Lady Skippers have already beaten. Cape Cod Academy will be in town this afternoon (3:30 p.m. start), Hanover on Monday and Nantucket on Tuesday to close out the regular season. The Cohasset girls handled Hanover, a first year varsity program, in go round number one with about the same ease they did Nantucket. The fourth game on the remaining slate will be against state tourney bound Bourne tomorrow (4 p.m. start).

"I'd like to think Hanover and Nantucket are games we should win, but Cape Cod Academy is the one that really makes me nervous. They have a very good goaltender, and she could get hot and just carry them. To be honest, I'm a little surprised we were able to score seven times against her last week. If it hadn't been for Lindsey (Durkin) really stepping up big, we'd have been in big trouble right now."

A loss this afternoon would force the Skippers into a situation where they would need no worse than a tie with Bourne tomorrow, followed by wins over Hanover and Cape Cod Academy, to squeak into the postseason.

"I really don't want to put ourselves in that kind of situation," said Sweeney. "Bourne has been playing a lot of very good teams tough."

Duxbury 20, Skippers 7

The Skippers managed to score seven goals, more than most have been able to against the vaunted Lady Dragons. The main highlight from this one on the Cohasset sidelines, though, was Turgiss netting her 100th career goal. The senior became just the third girls in the history of the program to surpass the century mark.

Team scoring leaders

This historic tally was also Turgiss' 34th goal on the season, putting her wel lout in front on the team scoring chart.

Despite missing three games to injury, Rizzotti, a junior, checked into action this week second on the team in goals scored with 26.

Senior captain Faber was third on the team scoring list with 23 points (13 goals and a team best 10 assists).

Durkin, with just five varsity games under her belt, already has 12 goals.

Softball team's progress obvious to anyone watching closely

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Yes, the Cohasset High varsity softball Team ranks fifth in the South Shore League with a mediocre 5-9 record. Yet, below the surface one can sense much brighter skies ahead.

Sure, a 14-0 record would be nice, but not every team can be league champion. Only two years in the league, Deb Bostwick has carefully shaped a team ready to compete. With each player showing improvement every game, Cohasset can anticipate more victories down the road.

Take Thursday's game against Harwich as an example: an 11-0 Harwich victory. Once again, looks are deceiving. Compare this score to the 19-3 loss in the Skippers last meeting with Harwich, and we look this time like the world champion 1918 Red Sox.

The girls progressed not only in the score, but in their play as well. Sophomore Melissa Crowley-Buck got on base three times, accompanied by Casey Anderson (2 for 4) and Alida Tanghlerini (2 for 3). From the first pitch to the last, the Skippers crushed line drives in every direction. Unfortunately, many potential hits soared right into the glove of a fortuitously placed Harwich athlete. Nonetheless, the Lady Skippers hitting reflects their countless practice swings.

And the Skipper defense? With grade-A pitching, Katie James held the Rough Riders to two runs for three innings. Some questionable calls behind the plate partially explains the nine combined Harwich runs scored in the fourth and the fifth frames.

A dazzling double play by shortstop Danielle Pinkus made the score even more questionable.

Catcher Casey Anderson showed optimism about the game: "If it weren't for two rough innings, I feel we could have walked away from this game with a win"

Glimpsing into the future, the Skippers will face off with Sacred Heart twice and Holbrook once to end the 2004 season. With a new pitching machine being installed at Freedom Field, the girls' hitting could possibly earn them a spot in the 2005 South Sectional tournament.

Reflecting on the season, Coach Deb Bostwick said: "The girls have great enthusiasm and a competitive spirit."

he also expressed appreciation for the patience and loyalty of the fans.

"The girls recognize that greatness happens over time. The girls and I are being patient and striving every day to reach a new goal," Deb Bostwick sagely stated.

"Our potential is limitless," she said. "This year's team contains great ambition and impressive ability. These are the keys to success."

Net gains

playing doubles the last several matches, had some strong, aggressive winners from the baseline and took it to the net when necessary. For the year, the sophomore has lost only one match.

Stone, meanwhile, won in typically dominating fashion, taking a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Hingham's Megan Doyle in a match that lasted about half an hour.

In addition to team play, the junior has spent her last two weekends playing in the south sectional of the MIAA individual tournament. This Saturday in Norwell at 10 a.m., she will square off against Brookline's Katrina Elder-Bush for the sectional title.

Stone said that those extra matches have only helped her when it comes to team play.

"Each match got tougher and tougher as they went along," she said. "It helps because you're toughened up from all those matches."

After the Hingham match, Cohasset coaches Gigi Meehan and Kathy Prevett noted Stone's adjustment from her usual hard-hitting style to a more patient approach, which they said was a key in her match against Doyle.

"She's smart enough to know what style to play against certain opponents," Meehan said.

While humble about her own achievements, Stone credited Sullivan and Evans for their ability to perform in the clutch.

"When it comes down to one match like that, it can be even harder to watch it than it is to play it," Stone said. "But we're confident because our second doubles team is awesome under pressure."

Last week, Cohasset clinched the South Shore League title with a 4-1 win over Norwell. Stone and number two singles Holly Graham both won in straight sets, with neither girl losing more than two games in a set.

Evans and Sullivan won 6-0, 6-2. The team of Grossman and Courtney Caron, who advanced to the semifinals of the individual tournament before bowing out, beat a tough duo from Norwell, Kathryn Anker and Carly Arena, 6-2 and 7-6 (7-2).

Meehan said a major part of her team's success is its ability to focus on that day's match.

"We take things one match at a time. We just never look too far ahead," she said.

Against Duxbury on Monday, Cohasset won 3-2. Stone and the doubles teams of Caron/Grossman and Sullivan/Evans dominated in straight-set wins.

Going into yesterday's match with Mashpee, Cohasset was 13-1 on the season as they gear up for another run at a state title.

Lady tracksters place third at SSL meet

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Paced by their customary quality depth, the Norwell High girls track team placed third at the annual South Shore League meet on Monday.

Competing at Cohasset High, the Lady Skippers scored with 11 top six placements, including three firsts, two seconds and three thirds.

Carver, to no surprise, ran away with the event, finishing with 186 points to claim the title of undisputed SSL champs. The Lady Crusaders swept all comers during the regular season, going 6-0 in league and 10-0 overall. Mashpee finished a distant second (129.5 points), followed by Norwell (92), Abington (76.5), Cohasset (65), Harwich (42) and Hull (29).

Senior captain Jen Buckley was the main point-getter, taking first in the mile (5:36.8), second in the javelin (98-07), and was also a part of the winning 4x800 relay team (11:14).

Junior Mary Silvia was likewise a part of that 4x800 win and took second place on her own in the 800 (2:29.2).

Junior Nicole Whitney was another multi-event placer, taking third in the 200 (27.8) and fourth in the triple jump (31-02.25).

Junior Lindsey Kennedy took third in the 100-meter sprint (13.8).

Showing some noteworthy potential were freshmen Sarah Malone and Alyssa Minman. These first year CHS tracksters finished 1-3 in the freshman 400 sprint with times of 1:08.5 ad 1:09.8, respectively.

In addition to taking a first in the 4x800, Cohasset relay squads also placed fourth in the 4x100 (58.3) and sixth in the 4x400 (4:55).

The Cohasset girls will get just one last chance to either qualify for the state class D meet or improve on their qualifying marks, that coming at this Saturday's South Shore Principals meet right back at Norwell High.

Derby chorus delights Cohasset seniors

By Carl Schwaber
SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

The Derby Academy Upper School Chorus recently performed at the Cohasset Elder Services Senior Luncheon, which was held at the Cohasset Community Center. Margaret Casey, who coordinates entertainment for Cohasset Elder Services, first approached Derby music teacher Pam Johnson four years ago, inviting her to bring a group of students to sing at the Senior Luncheon. The event was quite a success, and Mrs. Johnson and her troupe have appeared annually ever since.

The 12-person chorus first sang several selections from this year's repertoire, including such numbers as "Heart and Soul" and "You've Got a Friend in Me." After distributing lyrics to everyone in the audience, chorus members initiated a group sing-along of four old vintage tunes: "Tip Toe Through the Tulips;" "Tea for Two;" "Blue Room;" and "April Showers." (Outside, meantime, the rain was coming down hard.)

Two women in attendance have granddaughters currently enrolled at Derby. Isabel Kelley, who gave the students a tour of the Cohasset Community Center building, is the grandmother of eighth grader and chorus member Alexandra McKelvey, of Norwell; Mary Griffin is the grandmother of fourth grader Deven Koswick, of Cohasset.

The students presented carnations to each of the 30 attendees and staff members, a token of the gratitude they felt for the opportunity to sing that day in such a friendly environment. "It's a wonderful, relaxed setting," says Pam Johnson, "and these folks are the most appreciative audience we perform for."

Chocolate bundt cake made with natural cocoa

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Chocolate Bundt cake has come to mean a box of devil's food cake mix, a package of instant pudding, shortening or margarine, and maybe an egg or two. I wanted to make it from scratch and turn out a cake that was moist, rich and dense.

Most of these cakes use both cocoa powder and chocolate. First I tested natural vs. Dutch processed cocoa. I found that the natural cocoa was a better match for this recipe due to the likely inclusion of sour cream, a common ingredient. Next, I wanted to compare cocoa that was combined with boiling water to cocoa simply mixed in with the dry ingredients. As the Cook's test kitchen often discovers, cocoa powder that has been mixed with boiling water has a fuller chocolate flavor. I found a half-cup of cocoa to be about right and 3/4 cup of boiling water was perfect. (This water also helps to make a moister cake.)

As for the chocolate, I tried using unsweetened, semisweet and bittersweet chocolate in the cake. Even with extra sugar the unsweetened chocolate didn't work. It gave the cake a bitter edge. I thought bittersweet worked very well and the semisweet would be an acceptable substitute if you can't find bittersweet. Six ounces was the right amount. As for sour cream, it adds richness, moisture and balances nicely with the chocolate. I found a cup of sour cream provided the best contribution. All-purpose, not cake, flour was necessary to support all of the chocolate and 1 3/4 cups was called for.

Baking soda is a great leavener for this cake since it has plenty of acidity. I did try a combination of powder and soda, but the soda alone did just as well. The batter is heavy, and took a teaspoon of baking soda for the best lift. I tried using oil in the Bundt cake, a common ingredient in older recipes. The oil made the cake greasy, wet and heavy. On the other hand, the butter was flavorful and moist. I used 12 tablespoons for our cake, or 1-1/2 sticks. Most cake recipes call for granulated sugar. A recipe in Cook's, however, calls for 2 cups light brown sugar. I ended up preferring 1 cup of white and light brown, which gave the cake a slightly lighter taste, which I preferred. As for the eggs, five whole eggs was a winner.

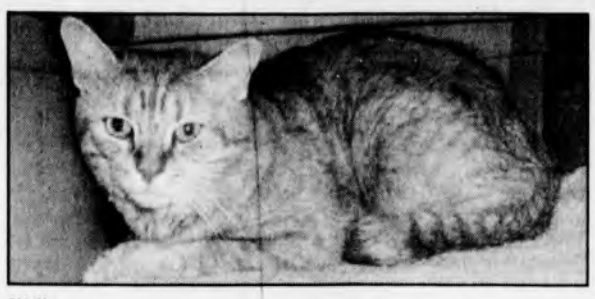
As for method, I coated the pan with butter. I found the best way to bloom the cocoa powder and melt the chocolate is by adding the boiling water to both. The mixture can be whisked into a smooth emulsion if left to sit for a couple of minutes and it saves you from melting the chocolate in either a double boiler or microwave. Otherwise, the cake comes together as you would expect — cream butter/sugar, add eggs, alternately add dry and wet. I baked the cake at 350 degrees. If baked at 375, the outside smelled and tasted a bit burnt. If baked lower than 350, the cake simply takes longer. The cake bakes up rich and chocolatey and with the decorative pan there is no need for frosting. A simple dusting of confectioner's sugar is a good addition, or maybe some very lightly sweetened whipped cream.

CHOCOLATE BUNDT CAKE

This is one case in which natural, not Dutch-process cocoa, is a winner. The butter ought to be 65 to 67 degrees and take on a malleable, putty-like texture. You can warm unwrapped cold butter at 10 percent power in the microwave for one minute. Check and continue heating if necessary.

1/2 cup natural (not Dutch-processed) cocoa
6 ounces bittersweet or semisweet chocolate, chopped
3/4 cup boiling water
1 cup sour cream
1 3/4 cups all purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
12 tablespoons (1 1/2 sticks) unsalted butter at cool room temperature plus additional butter for the pan
1 cup sugar
1 cup light brown sugar
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
5 large eggs at room temperature

1. Apply a thin coating of butter to the interior surface of a standard 12-cup Bundt pan. You may use a pastry brush to help coax the butter into the crevasses. Heat the oven to 350 degrees and adjust a rack to the center position.



2. Combine cocoa and chocolate in a medium heatproof bowl. Add boiling water and let sit for five minutes. Whisk until smooth and shiny and let cool to room temperature. Stir in sour cream. In a separate bowl, whisk together the flour, salt and baking soda.

3. Place butter and sugars in the bowl of an electric mixer fitted with the flat beater. Beat on medium high until very light and fluffy, about three minutes, scraping down the sides of the bowl as necessary. Add the eggs, one at a time, beating for about 30 seconds after each addition, again scraping the sides of the bowl as needed. Add the vanilla and beat for 10 seconds. Add 1/3 of the flour mixture along with 1/2 of the chocolate mixture. Beat on low until the dry ingredients are moistened and repeat with the remaining ingredients, ending with the flour, and beat until the ingredients are just incorporated. Beat on high for 30 seconds to thoroughly mix batter. Pour into prepared pan and bake until the top springs back when gently pressed and a tester comes out clean, about 45 to 50 minutes. Let cool in pan for 10 minutes and then invert onto a rack, remove pan and cool completely. Serve with a light dusting of confectioner's sugar and/or with lightly sweetened whipped cream.

First Parish selects a minister

On May 2, the Reverend Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull was overwhelmingly elected to be the next Settled Minister of First Parish (Unitarian-Universalist) in Cohasset. She will become the 19th minister of this historic church since its first minister was ordained 284 years ago, in 1721.

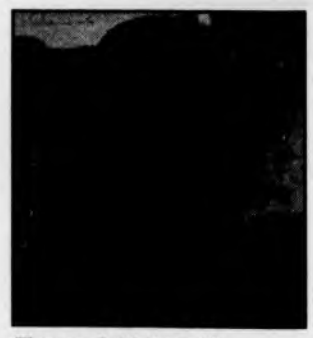
Carlsson-Bull comes to Cohasset from All Souls in Manhattan, where she has been assistant minister for the past seven years. All Souls is one of the Unitarian-Universalist Association's largest and most influential congregations, especially known for its social justice and social outreach programs.

Her ministry will officially begin this summer, on Aug.15 with regular Sunday Services, church school and choir starting on Sept. 12. Carlsson-Bull brings special expertise in social outreach, justice advocacy, religious education, preaching, and pastoral counseling. She intends to reach out to Cohasset's growing population of younger families, and invites anyone interested in sharing ideas to do so via letters or emails to the Church office [23 North Main St, Cohasset 02025; revjcb@firstparishcohasset.org].

She has been president of the Metro New York UU Minister's Association [representing more than 50 churches from Connecticut to New Jersey] and has been active at the national level for the UUA, serving as a founding board member of the Association's Trauma Response Ministry. She is also on the UUA's Commission on Social Witness. During the first days after 9/11/01, Carlsson-Bull was one of the Unitarian Universalist chaplains on the scene, providing spiritual care both at Ground Zero and at New York City's Family Assistance Center.

Reverend Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull

Prior to becoming a Unitarian Universalist minister, she spent almost 20 years in non-profit ventures addressing education, the arts, and improving the quality of community life throughout New Jersey. Carlsson-Bull has a Ph.D. in developmental psychology from Yeshiva University and a master's of divinity degree from Union Theological Seminary, New York City.



Cohasset's First Parish church (built in 1741) on the Town Common is one of the oldest continuously-used churches in the country. It is also one of the most-photographed. Officially called The Meeting House, it has a rich history: from its pulpit, the Rev. John Browne read the Declaration of Independence to the townspeople and issued a call to arms; less than a century later, the Rev. Joseph Osgood became known an outspoken abolitionist and an early leader in public school reform (Cohasset's Osgood Elementary School is named for him).

First Parish became officially "Unitarian" (believing in the oneness of God) in 1824. In 1961 Unitarians merged with the "Universalist" tradition (believing in a loving God who condemns no one and saves all). Unitarian-Universalism is a liberal religious faith, believing in the inherent worth and dignity of every person, supporting one another in individual spiritual exploration, and living out its principles of justice, equity and compassion in the larger world.

Today, First Parish offers a variety of programs to respond to diverse spiritual interests. Its recently-renovated Parish House also contains the Carriage House nursery school, open to all, with priority given to First Parish members. Additional details on First Parish's programs, facilities and publications can be found on its website: www.firstparishcohasset.org.

Carlsson-Bull and her husband, Dan Bull, have three adult daughters all living in the New York City area. She is particularly attuned to the vitality and the serenity of our surrounding ocean, and has been known to take early morning swims to start her day. Carlsson-Bull and her husband expect to relocate to the South Shore in late July-early August.

Sarah Woodard speaks at Abbey

Sarah Woodard, a member of an intentional community called Jubilee House, is one of the original founders of the Center for Development in Central America (CDCA), a group which promotes education, health-care and economic development among the poor in Managua, Nicaragua. Woodard was at the Abbey Conference Center for two sessions, April 22 and 23, and spoke on "Outsourcing and Ownership: Justice in the Global Community."

Each year Woodard makes the trip to the states to sell the artwork and crafts of Nicaraguan artists and to tell the story of the development work of the Jubilee Community. She showed slides of the various micro-loan businesses they have helped establish as well as pictures of the health clinics they have built.

Sarah Woodard (in black) shows Nicaraguan pottery to Tim Welzert, Ted Gaiser and Peg Gager.

She spoke passionately against CAFTA, a trade agreement between the United State and several Central American countries. Woodard also appeared at Boston College and Harvard during her visit in the United States.

'Celebrate the Family' at Mormon Church

The world can be a scary place for families today. Members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints plan to share some of the family strengthening programs that have been used by its members for the past 80 years with Boston's South Shore Communities on May 22, between 1 and 5 p.m.

"We recently completed a major addition to our building at 379 Gardner St.,, in Hingham", says Bishop Leif Erickson, of Norwell. "As a congregation, we wanted to think of a way to celebrate this milestone with the community at large. We decided that we would 'celebrate the family' by sharing programs that are important to our church that can easily be used by members of all faiths to strengthen families."

Open house attendees will be taught how to organize and conduct regular weekly family activity nights with their own families during presentations that will begin every half-hour. A non-denominational, non-political, multicultural manual featuring stories and visual aids from around the world can be taken home as a gift and a guide. For information contact Holly Andrus at 781-749-2661.

The Center, which is staffed by volunteers, is a branch of the world's largest genealogical records depository in Salt Lake City, Utah. Volunteer staff members offer free technical assistance to those who would like to begin or continue family genealogical research. Materials can be borrowed from the central library and used in the Hingham Branch location for a small fee. The Library features access to genealogy websites on the Internet and a large number of indexes are available on site. "It is tremendously satisfying to uncover your roots and learn more about where you come from," says Center Director, Joan Chatfield of Norwell. "According to American Demographics Magazine, genealogy is the second most popular hobby in the United States, after gardening." "We are fortunate," says Family History Consultant Coordinator, Jennifer Ashley, of Hull, "to have such an enthusiastic group of volunteers available to help people get started."

The open house will also feature brief presentations on how to organize and conduct weekly family activity nights. Further questions should be directed to Holly Andrus at 781-749-2661.

Daniel Sheldon Lee book signing May 26

The Hingham Public Library and Buttonwood Books & Toys welcome Hingham author, Daniel Sheldon Lee, discussing "Buzzards Bay: A Journey of Discovery" on Wednesday, May 26, at 7 p.m. at the Hingham Public Library.

"In 1984, the U.S. government declared Buzzards Bay "the last pristine embayment on the East Coast of the United States." Unlike the Chesapeake and other bays near major population centers, Buzzards Bay remains relatively unspoiled to this day. Hingham author and environmentalist Dan Lee wants to keep it that way. Lee believes that developing a strong sense of place in the minds of those who live on Buzzards Bay is critical to ensuring its survival into the future. "Buzzards Bay: a Journey of Discovery" is a compelling collection of essays blending history and science with personal encounters and reflections, somewhat in the manner of Paul Schneider's recent book on Cape Cod, "The Enduring Shore." ...Commonwealth Editions.

Daniel Sheldon Lee has been swimming, boating, and fishing on Buzzards Bay since he was a child. A graduate of the University of Vermont, he has contributed nature writing to the "Cape Cod Times" and other regional publications while serving as editor-in-chief of "The Osprey", an environmental journal.

He lives with his wife and son in Hingham. Free and open to the public.

Robert Parker has long been acknowledged the dean of American Crime Fiction. "Double Play" represents a break from the mystery genre and another segue into historical fiction. "Double Play" is receiving rave reviews from critics including a starred review from Publisher's Weekly. Born and raised in Massachusetts, Parker attended Colby College in Maine, served with the Army in Korea, and then completed a Ph.D. in English at Boston University. Times changing at town schools

Transportation is also a challenge

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school committee says it will need input from parents from now until the end of the school year, to help it make some very difficult decisions pertaining to changing start times at the school and transportation.

"In some cases, it might be an advantage for a younger student to have an older student from their neighborhood or family riding the same bus.
— Chartis Tebbetts, school committee

While studies have shown later start times for schools have a positive effect on teenagers, the committee is not sure whether it will vote to make any time changes just yet. However, if any time changes do occur, members say it makes the most sense to keep the middle and high schools on the same schedule because they are in the same building, which could in turn require students from both schools to ride the same buses in the morning.

However, the reorganization of schools, which will bring sixth graders up to the middle school, has been centered around the idea of having the middle and high schools operate as two separate schools under one roof with little to no contact. If grades six through 12 are all beginning and ending their day at the same time, the committee says keeping the students separate during transportation may not be an option. Because the town has a limited amount of buses and many older students with licenses opt to drive to school, two separate bus runs which cover the same area will most likely not be feasible.

Fired animal control officer names town, Haddad in lawsuit

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Fired animal control officer Paul Murphy is suing the town and former Town Manager Mark Haddad for unfair termination.

When Haddad "cleaned house" at the police department last Oct. 20, swept out along with Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean was Murphy, who was not protected by a union or Civil Service. Murphy worked in town for five years and was reappointed annually in each of those years.

Murphy — who was presented with a terse one-paragraph termination letter that did not include a reason for his being fired — said he was escorted off town property in a police car without the ability to collect his personal belongings.

This is the third complaint to surface in recent weeks involving personnel matters and the police department. Two former civilian dispatchers have filed complaints with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination (MCAD).

"We think he has a strong case. You can't be terminated for expressing your views."
— Jill Goodman, attorney

Murphy's complaint may be too late for MCAD, which must be filed within a certain time period of the incident, but he plans to proceed with legal action by filing his complaint in Quincy District Court.

The 65-year-old Hingham resident claims he was deprived of his "clearly established right to free speech" when he was penalized for expressing "his views on a matter to public concern to the assistant owner of a business while off duty from his appointment as animal control officer." He expressed his opinion that the police chief was not meeting expectations, according to the complaint.

Haddad is no longer employed by the town. Chief Robert Jackson, who has continually declined to comment on ongoing police matters, is on vacation this week.

Murphy, who told the Mariner in a February interview that he "wants his job and reputation back," has retained the law firm Ciapciak & Associates of Norwood, the same firm that is representing former dispatcher Barbara DeWolfe in her sexual harassment complaint.

Murphy's attorney, Jill Goodman, said Murphy is suing for violation of his first amendment rights, wrongful termination, and for violation of a state law that makes his appointment an annual

Haddad's contract is released

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While the employment contract for former Town Manager Mark Haddad has now been made public, an amendment to his employment agreement — negotiated behind closed doors, that could spell out what the Board of Selectman and Haddad agreed to regarding Haddad's abrupt resignation — will continue to remain private for the time being.

Haddad's contract, which was renewed about two years ago, is a public document, Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said. It was not immediately available to the public and press last week because of conflicting information from Town Counsel.

"Eventually, everything will be available."
— Michael Buckley, acting town manager

Buckley said after discussing the issue with Selectman Ronnie McMorris, he contacted Town Counsel again and was advised the contract could be released.

However, the amendment that apparently contains a negotiated agreement between selectmen and Haddad is not being released because Town Counsel says it is still subject to "pending litigation."

In addition, the minutes for the executive sessions held May 4, 11, and 18, during which time the board apparently discussed Haddad's resignation, have not been released. The minutes have not been transcribed and therefore, have not been approved by selectmen, Buckley said.

"Eventually, everything will be available," he said.

Selectmen said Haddad, who was hired in July 1997 and started that August, abruptly resigned

Talent shines on Arts Night

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"Discovering the artist in you," was the theme of the night, as Osgood School opened its doors to students, parents and friends for its first Arts Night celebration.

Hosted by the Osgood School Parent School Organization, and supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, activities encouraged children to explore their natural artistic abilities, which was by no means limited to what they could accomplish on paper alone.

"It's not just about painting and drawing," said Osgood PSO member Nancy Whelan, who worked with the PSO to coordinate the May 19 event. She added, to be artistic, children can have singing talent, be wonderful poets, or have musical ability, and might not necessarily draw the best picture in the class, and that is what Arts Night strives to instill in those who attend.

The night of celebration was part of Arts Month at Osgood, which has run throughout the month of May. During the school's celebration, students from different classrooms have been reading poetry over the loudspeaker during the morning announcements.

To help children explore their talents, local dancers from the Boston Ballet School in Norwell gave performances in the gymnasium, including interactive performances with student participation. Students from the Boston Ballet school gave both classical ballet and flamenco performances. But dance from the ballet school was not the only form of movement offered. Physical Education teacher Kevin Dykas celebrated rhythm and

Planning Board office hours set

Beginning June 7, the Cohasset Planning Board Office will be open Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. This revised schedule of hours will be in effect until Sept. 7. The Planning Board phone number is 781-383-3517.

Red Cross Blood Drive is Wednesday, June 2

The Red Cross has scheduled the next Cohasset Community Blood Drive for Wednesday, June 2. The Blood Drive will be at St. Anthony Parish Center at the corner of South Main St. and Summer St. from 1-7:00 p.m. As in the past, baby-sitting will be provided from 3-5:00 p.m. Ample parking is available.

The best way to give blood for the first time is to come with a friend who is experienced in the donation process. New donors usually find the procedure easy and painless and most come back regularly to donate. "The biggest obstacle seems to be overcoming that initial fear," said Cathy Pray of the Red Cross. "That's why we're counting on our regular donors to help by bringing a friend to this blood drive." The Red Cross area community of which Cohasset is a part requires over 1,600 pints of blood per day to meet usual demand for blood and blood products. It is a challenge to collect enough blood to meet the needs of hospital patients year round. Every blood donation is an opportunity to help an accident victim, a surgical patient, or a child battling leukemia, to name a few.

Most people can give blood through the American Red Cross. Potential donors must be at least 17 years of age, in good health and weigh over 110 pounds. In most cases, donors may give if they are on medication, but should know the names of these medications.

The Red Cross always counts on a good turnout when it visits Cohasset so please respond, if possible, when a volunteer from one of the church, civic, corporate or social organizations calls. New donors are welcome and especially needed. To register and make an appointment for donating at a specific time or if you have any questions, please call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 781-383-1290. You can also call the Red Cross at 1-800-448-3543.

King Jewelers could move to new location

After 43 years of business in Cohasset, owners of King Jewelers, currently located in Cohasset Plaza, are looking to branch out and purchase their own building. Valerie and Victoria King of King Jewelers came before the Planning Board Wednesday with plans to raze and rebuild at 812 Chief Justice Cushing Highway and move their business a little closer to the Scituate line.

"We've been here forever. This is where our customers come from and we love it here," said Valerie King, adding she and her family are very excited about the prospect of being able to expand their business and remain in town. The Kings will come before the Planning Board again at their June 2 meeting.

Total costs in for harbor dredging

The total cost for dredging at the harbor, as reported by the US Army Corps of Engineers, was $1,454,185 including design and construction. The local cost for the commonwealth and the town was $83,677. The non-federal contribution was $142,587. Because Cohasset contributed 25 percent of the non-federal contribution and the Office of Environmental Affairs contributed 75 percent, the amount the town will be refunded for the project is $14,727.

Cohasset Walgreen's workers help Scituate soldier in Iraq

By Matthew J. Gill
MGILL@CNC.COM

Kathy Hess was overwhelmed by the generosity of Walgreen's employees who purchased $500 worth in supplies to send to her son, Rohn and other soldiers serving in Iraq.

Kathy Hess had a simple question when she walked into Walgreen's in Cohasset one day last month.

"Do you know where the foot powder is?"

The response she received in return was far more than she expected.

Kathy's son Rohn Hess, who's currently serving in Iraq with the Army's First Cavalry, 82nd Field Artillery unit, recently sent his parents a list of snacks and supplies that would make his time in the Middle East more bearable.

Toothpaste, shaving cream, and foot powder ranked high on Rohn's list and Kathy had stopped into the local store to purchase the items.

When Kathy asked about the foot powder, and mentioned the product-purchase came as a direct request from her son in Iraq, Walgreen's Assistant Manager Terry Ciolkosz escorted Kathy to the appropriate aisle, and asked her to write out a longer list of products Rohn and his fellow soldiers could really use.

On Monday — six weeks after that first visit — Ciolkosz called and told Kathy to return to the store because Rohn's order was ready to go.

Ciolkosz and a handful of his co-workers decided they would pool together their resources, and foot the bill for Rohn's foot powder — eight bottles to be exact — and a massive cart-full of other supplies.

Kathy said she cried when she saw the cart which included at least six packages each of Doritos, peanuts, beef jerky, Altoids, and packs of gum. The philanthropic pharmacy also donated a considerable amount of hygiene products including ten toothbrushes and toothpaste tubes, numerous packs of razors, soaps, and shaving creams.

When Kathy left the store, she said she had a difficult time managing the cart which was overflowing with supplies.

The entire bill — which Kathy speculated must have totaled approximately $400 - $500 — was underwritten by six Walgreen's employees.

"I [was] shocked," said Kathy who plans to mail off all the goods as soon as she can package them.

"I never asked for this. They even put in two electric razors."

During a call Tuesday, Ciolkosz said he and his co-workers just wanted to help out.

"We just got what we could," he said.

What started out as a purchase for foot-powder for her soldier son turned into a giant care package.

Marine major to speak on Memorial Day

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Rain or shine, you can be assured that hundreds of local citizens will gather at Veterans Memorial Park on Monday for Cohasset's traditional Memorial Day observances.

The annual event that includes a parade down North Main Street to the Common and onto Elm Street and the harbor is always a draw in this small town that has lost more than of its share of soldiers, sailors and airmen over the years.

The Veterans Honor Roll — which will eventually include those to served in all the nation's wars — is still evolving into one of the finest tributes anywhere and demonstrates the esteem in which Cohasset holds its veterans.

The stone monument provides the backdrop for the ceremony that will include featured speaker Major John B. Atkinson II, U.S. Marine Corps.

Maj. Atkinson, 34, who is assigned to the Pentagon, graduated from Cohasset High in 1988 and grew up on Highland Avenue where his parents still live. He graduated from Boston College in 1992 and holds a bachelor of arts degree in political science.

"It is quite an honor and rather humbling to be asked to be this year's Memorial Day keynote speaker," Atkinson said. "It does not seem that it was that long ago that I was a young boy standing along the parade route and later playing 'Taps' myself."

Atkinson said growing up he looked forward to Cohasset's Memorial Day parade every year with great excitement and reverence.

"I am convinced that this parade, and all that it represents, in no small measure inspired me to answer my calling to selflessly serve our great nation as a United States Marine."

The parade arrives at the harbor at about 11:45 a.m. but the day's events actually begin much earlier, the from 8 p.m. Sunday to 6 a.m. Monday, a Legion member will keep vigil at Veterans park. Then at 7 a.m. at the George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118 on Summer Street hosts the annual veterans' breakfast. From the Legion veterans march up to the old Paul Pratt Library where they board buses for the North Cohasset Cemetery and honor roll. The buses arrive at Woodside at about 9:30 a.m. that includes visiting the Gold Star Mothers Memorial. Then it's on to Beechwood Cemetery. The veterans join the parade that includes local bands, scouts, a contingent from the Daughters of the American Revolution, and veterans at the Music Circus parking lot at about 10:30 a.m. The parade marches to Central Cemetery at Joy Place, then down North Main Street to the Common, the POW/MIA Memorial, and onto Elm Street and the harbor, arriving at about 11:45 a.m.

WWII dedication Saturday at 2p.m.

At 2 p.m., Saturday the American Legion Post is hosting a free reception during the dedication of the World War II Memorial in Washington, D.C. The event will be televised and shown on the TV at the Legion. Sandwiches and refreshments will be offered starting at 1 p.m. Please call 781-383-9657 if you plan to attend so the Legion can get a headcount.

due to personal reasons on May 5, from the position he had held for roughly seven years. In a press release issued May 18, selectmen stated Haddad would receive a structured settlement of $50,000 as well as health insurance coverage for the next six months.

Buckley said the cost on the town's side to cover Haddad's insurance is roughly $800 per month; Haddad will continue to pay 30 percent of the total cost, or roughly $345 a month. The $50,000 is being paid for accrued benefits, including vacation and sick time, and is roughly what Haddad would have received for six months of his salary. At the time of his resignation, Haddad's salary was roughly $110,000.

Haddad signed his most recent contract with the town on March 5, 2002; it was slated to expire on June 30, 2005. One provision of the contract, and his previous contract, stated he would agree not to seek or accept any other employment during the first 2-1/2 years, with the exception of the Town of Andover, should that position be advertised. Andover is Haddad's hometown and is not currently looking for a Town Manager.

According to the contract, Haddad was entitled to vacation with pay for four weeks during each of the three years of the contract.

Regarding sick time, the town's bylaws state all full-time employees may accumulate sick leave at the rate of one and one-quarter day for each month of employment, or 15 days per year. Unused sick time may be accumulated up to 120 days.

Buckley said from memory, he recalls Haddad only having taken two sick days and five vacation days this year, but that "both were rare. He didn't take much time off," he said.

While Selectmen said Haddad is being compensated for accrued vacation time, none of the Town Hall union employees are permitted to carry over unused vacation time into the next fiscal year.

Although specific steps to be followed are spelled out in Haddad's contract should he have been fired, there is nothing in the contract outlining what benefits he would be entitled to in the event he resigned from his position. Selectmen continue to be mum on any specifics about why Haddad quit, prompting some residents to question why Haddad resigned and why he received any compensation.

According to the contract, had Haddad been terminated by the town before its expiration and was still willing and able to perform his duties under the agreement, which could have happened if the town had decided to do away with having a Town Manager in the middle of his contract, the town would agree to pay Haddad a lump sum cash payment equal to six months salary, plus the value of benefits and deferred compensation, earned sick leave, vacation, holidays, compensatory time and other accrued benefits to date.

Had he been fired for cause, the town would have no obligation to pay any severance.

one. He was fired about six months before his appointment would have been up for renewal.

"We think he has a strong case," Good man said. "You can't be terminated for expressing your views."

Goodman blamed Murphy's termination on politics. "It seems like anyone who speaks up to the town manager or against the police chief gets fired there," she said.

Haddad told the Mariner on Oct. 20 — the same day he placed Quigley and McLean on paid administrative leave — he fired Murphy due to numerous complaints.

But Murphy, who also works part-time as the animal control officer in Norwell, said he was never told of any complaints about his work or given any progressive discipline. In fact about two years ago, Haddad made Murphy "inspector of animals." The additional duties increased his hours from 20 to 25 hours per week.

As part of his job as animal control officer — a post that pays about $15,000 a year — Murphy kept detailed records of every call and what action was taken.

"If there were complaints about my work," Murphy said in the February interview, "then Haddad failed in his responsibility to call me in and tell me about them. Neither Haddad nor Jackson ever sat down with me to say 'we've had complaints — what's going on?'

"They never called me in — it was just a cold turkey termination and I was never been given a reason why."

But Haddad did call Murphy in around Oct. 14 to reprimand him for allegedly "bad mouthing" Chief Jackson at Robbins Garage, Murphy recalled.

Murphy denied spreading rumors as everything he said was his opinion and was also common knowledge.

He said his phone calls to Haddad asking why he was abruptly fired were not returned.

Revaluation notice to property owners

The Cohasset Board of Assessors will resume its ongoing revaluation effort as it prepares for recertification by the Department of Revenue for Fiscal Year 2005. During the next few months the assessors' staff will be physically inspecting residential properties in town. Due to the high volume of inspections, the staff will conduct daily door-to-door inspections as time permits.

The staff will perform an interior inspection, noting any changes on the property record card. The entire inspection will take just a few minutes. Measurement of buildings will be verified, if necessary. Digital cameras will be used to produce photos of the exterior of the building for the database.

The assessors' staff will be able to produce proper identification. If the homeowner or a person over 18 years of age is not at home on the first call, a notice will be left asking the homeowner to call for an appointment.

The scope of this update is to test the quality of the town's database and make any necessary corrections.

Music Circus won't solve Cook wastewater dilemma

Leaching field location in limbo

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Representatives from the town and Northland Residential are in the process of narrowing their wastewater discharge options for the Cook property, and the Music Circus parking lot is one alternative that can be crossed off the list.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said although the Music Circus is no longer an option, "there are some other possibilities," that will be pursued, and the town is aiming to have a definitive wastewater plan for the Cook property which is at the top of Sohier Street, by the end of June.

When soils tested on the Cook property were deemed unsuitable for accommodating an on-site septic system for the 14,000 gallons per day the development will generate — Northland Residential, the company working with the town to develop the Cook property, began investigating alternative solutions to their wastewater problem with the town's help. Soil evaluations were conducted behind the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, and that option is still being explored, but because the library is seven-tenths of a mile away from the Cook property, draining wastewater from the Cook site to the library would require laying pipes down Sohier Street that would mean digging up the road. Northland also filed an application for municipal sewer which was denied by the Sewer Commission.

Last Wednesday, John Cavanaro of John Cavanaro Consulting witnessed the next phase in the exploration process as observation holes were dug in the Music Circus parking lot. He said while some good soil material was found, they also encountered groundwater at "fairly shallow levels." He said nine-foot test pits were dug on site, and in some areas water was found at depths of less than four feet.

"If you put a very large system on site, you would very likely need a mounded system, which could potentially affect the parking lot," Cavanaro said. In addition, he said a good portion of the parking lot is in the flood plain, which further complicates matters.

Health Agent Joseph Godzik, who also witnessed the testing, said he agreed that the soils look good but he also believes the water table is too high to accommodate a regular wastewater system. "It's certainly possible, but how promising it is, is another question," he said, adding only by conducting a hydro-geologic study can the potential size of the mound be determined, and raising the entire parking lot to keep it level will affect the flood plain. He added there would be serious problems to overcome in order to make the site work.

Because the Cook development would discharge roughly 14,000 gallons per day, it will need a groundwater discharge permit which requires Department of Environmental Protection approval. Groundwater discharge permits are required for any developments discharging more than 10,000 gallons per day.

Because of the library's close proximity to the Sohier Street and Ellms Meadows well fields, members of the Water Commission and their engineer question whether the DEP would grant a groundwater discharge permit for the project. Kevin Klein of Norfolk Ram, the water commission's consulting engineer, explained that in order to be able to tell whether the site would affect the well fields, a hydro-geologic study must be conducted. During that process, the flow of water would need to be studied to determine how it moves through the soil. To leach at the library, the travel time of water from the leaching field to the wells would have to be two years, and preliminary tests indicate that will not be the case.

While Klein said "it is possible" DEP could grant the permit, it most likely would not. The DEP could set up an additional set of treatment guidelines the project would have to comply with and condition the permit on those guidelines being met, but that would cost more money. It would also be very difficult to provide the levels of treatment necessary on the site to make the leaching up to DEP standards.

The town originally had planned to pass papers on the property with the Cook Estate heirs this July. An amendment to the purchase and sale agreement dated March 15, 2004 granted the town an extension until Oct. 31 of this year. After that date, the town may request two additional 30 day extensions, but must pay $20,000 for each 30-day period. The agreement also says the town should apply for a discharge permit by March 31, 2004, or at a time mutually agreed to between the town and the heirs of the estate. Sullivan said at this point, "We haven't talked with the family per se, to see if they would consider any more extensions."

Voters at the 2003 special Fall Town Meeting allocated $4.5 million for the purchase of the 22-acre parcel of Cook-owned property, which was then marketed to developers. Northland Residential's bid was accepted by the town, and the developers will eventually purchase the Cook property from the town as well as the adjacent 8.7 acres of town property for $5.4 million for senior housing. There will be a double closing, transferring the property from the Cooks to the developer. The Cook project will be filed under the town's Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw, which allows developers to build more than is usually permitted in exchange for building senior housing. The bylaw was passed by voters at the November 2002 special Fall Town Meeting.

Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said he currently does not have the total figures for the amount of money the town has spent to date on the Cook project, but said he is working on compiling that information. However, he said during every round of testing, each time the town sends representatives like Godzik out to a site or lends the DPWs backhoe to dig the observation holes, it is costing the town money.

Cedarmere development looks into on-site septic

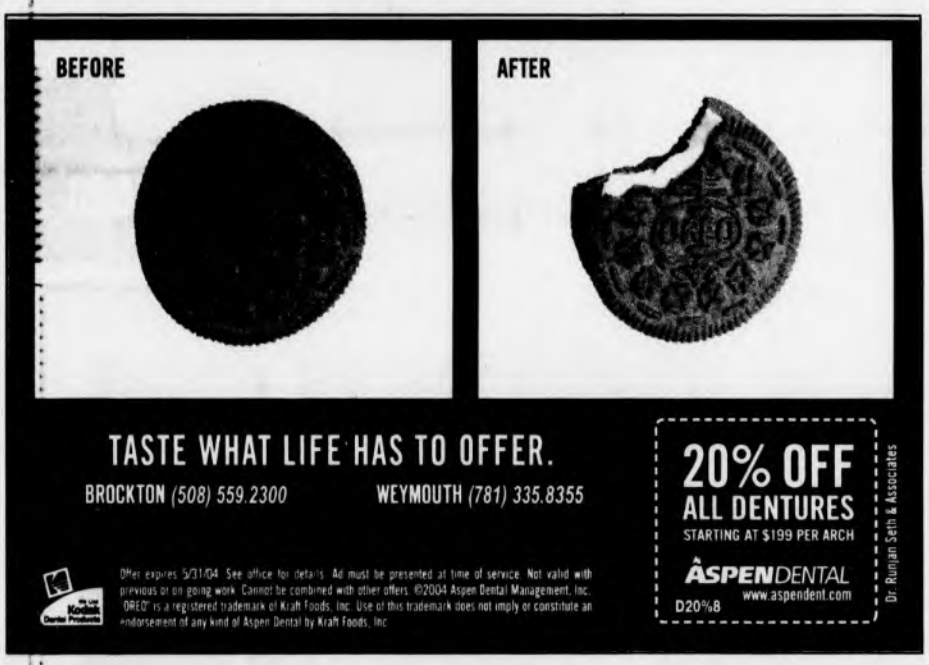
By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While Cedarmere developers will continue in their quest to tie in to town sewer, the developers have a back-up plan for an on-site system that will satisfy one of the conditions for their special permit.

Cedarmere developers applied last summer for a special permit to build under the Senior Multi-family Residence Overaly District, which was approved by the planning board in January with conditions. According to the bylaw, developers must show adequate plans for on-site disposal of septic waste or a sewer hook-up from the town, and the planning board has ruled developers now have both.

David Calhoun, one of the principals for the project, presented the new information to the planning board last week and while he said a sewer connection is still the optimal solution for the development, as it will require no re-design of the current Cedarmere plans, he feels the on-site system is a viable alternative.

"This will be a zero discharge system."
— David Calhoun, Cedarmere



Calhoun said the treatment plant that would be on the Cedarmere site would be very similar to the treatment plant Cohasset has, but on a smaller scale.

Kelli Calhoun, David's wife, explained the system will pre-treat the water then send it to an evaporation mechanism that will be housed on site. She said the building which will house the evaporation tanks will look similar to a two-car garage. She said there will be two evaporators, one of which will be used strictly as a backup.

"This will be a zero discharge system," David Calhoun said, adding because no water will be expended, the project will not need a groundwater discharge permit.

Kelli said their new alternative is an "innovative solution," but that the lawsuit against the Sewer Commission will remain in place. Cedarmere contends the town has enough capacity for their senior housing project to tie in to the town's sewer lines, and has filed a suit against the town and the Sewer Commission.

Since early summer, the Cedarmere team, consisting of David and Kelli Calhoun of Sheldon Road and Tom Ragno of Lexington, and their consultants, have sought feedback from town boards and their consultants, and abutters on the proposed senior housing development, and the team eventually were granted a special permit.. The project was first to be filed under the town's new Senior Overlay District bylaw. The project is slated for 41-acres on the former Hayes Estate off Beechwood Street on the east side of 3A, and is planned to consist of 105-units of both affordable and market rate apartments and condominiums for seniors 55 and older.

Times changing at town schools

Tebbetts said if the schools have separate bus runs for middle and high school students but have the same start time, there could be one bus driving down the street picking up students for the middle school, with another following right behind picking up high school students, and that doesn't make sense. She also said she would think more problems would arise between students of the same age rather than with older students picking on the younger ones. "In some cases, it might be an advantage for a younger student to have an older student from their neighborhood or family riding the same bus," she said.

Member Adrienne MacCarthy agreed and said the high school students are the people many parents call when they need babysitters, and they are the people parents send their children off to in the summer to teach them how to sail or play sports, and they can be very good role models for the younger students.

However, member Jamie Williams said the recommendation of the task force was to provide separate buses for the middle and high school students, and many people felt comfortable with that. "It's the exposure to topics of conversations," both on the bus as well as overhearing conversations on cell phones, and the exposure to the way some older students act and dress that some parent's don't feel comfortable with, she said. "I fully advocate a middle school culture unto itself."

School Committee Chairman Rick Shea said he would like to hear from Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill who might be able to give more insight as to how things are currently running on the buses. "Seventh graders have been riding with the high school students for years, he can tell us how that's gone," Shea said.

In an interview after the meeting Gill said, "In general, it goes very well." While he said there have been occasional incidents on buses with older students picking on younger ones, overall, "the older kids tend to watch out for the younger ones and take them under their wing." He added he believes the eighth graders, who would be the oldest in the middle school, would be less likely to display bullying behavior toward their younger schoolmates with ninth and 10th graders watching out.

Gill said with any school where there is "inter-mingling" between the students, there will be positives and negatives to the situation. "We believe the advantages outweigh the disadvantages," he said. He said while it's always possible a younger student could be exposed to a conversation they wouldn't otherwise hear, he believes the large majority of students in Cohasset are good kids and set a good example for the younger ones.

The reorganization will shift grades in the schools, and next fall Osgood is planned to house students in kindergarten through grade two, with third graders to move over to Deer Hill. Fourth and fifth grade students will remain at Deer Hill, but sixth graders will move up to the middle-high school. Students in grades nine through 12 would still be considered high school students. The move is intended to make better use of the town's newly renovated schools

In the event the start times are changed for the schools, the middle-high school will be delayed by 30 minutes, for a new start time of 7:50 a.m. and the day will run until 2:36. Deer Hill will start earlier at 8:10 rather than 8:35, and their day will run until 2:10. No changes have been proposed for Osgood School and it would continue to run from 9:05 a.m. until 3:05 p.m.

The School Committee will discuss the issues of start times and transportation at their June 3 meeting and encourages concerned parents to attend. The meeting begins at 7 p.m. and will be held in the middle-high school library.

Proposed schedule for the 2004-2005 school year movement with some line dancing, which Whelan said was a big hit when it was first presented during physical education classes. Dykas therefore decided to bring back the activity for the night, much to the delight of his students.

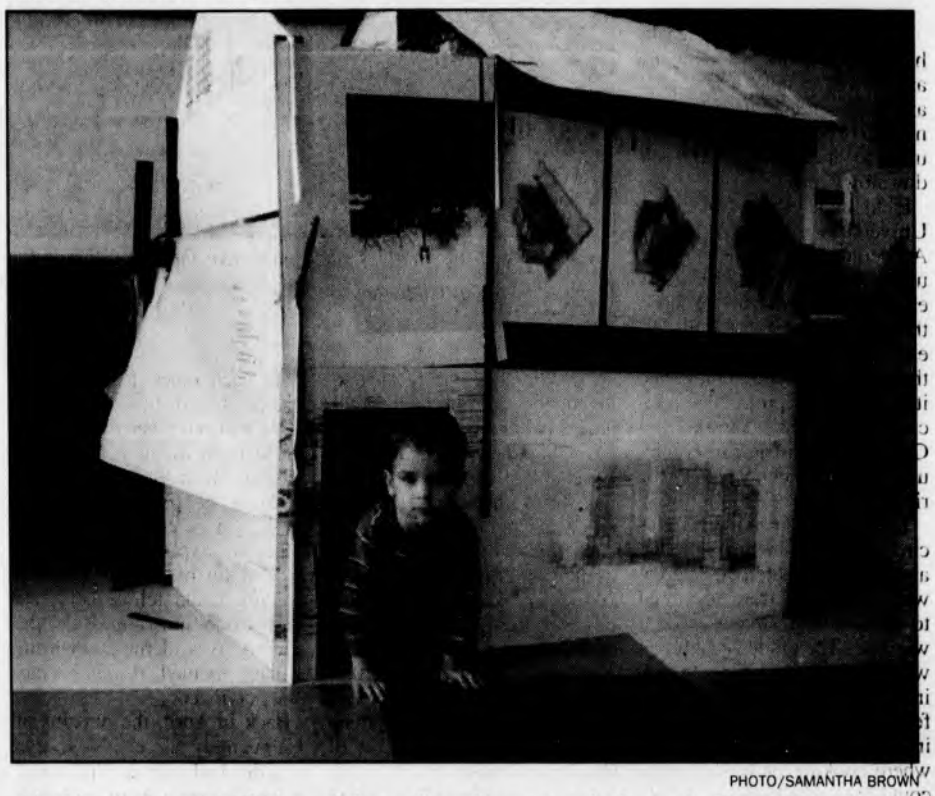
For students who prefer to work with their hands, art teacher Betsy Ogden gave demonstrations on the pottery wheel. In the hopes of creating an all-school ceramic sculpture, Ogden allowed each student to create their own ceramic piece, which was then added to the others to form one unique sculpture.



In addition, members from the high school, middle school, and Deer Hill bands were on hand lend their instruments to the cause — literally. While the bands did perform for students, they also offered up their instruments to what Whelan describes as a "musical petting zoo," allowing the younger students to take a closer look and actually touch the instruments.

"So many times children will hear about what an oboe is or a cello, but they will have no idea what it looks like," said Whelan, but by seeing what they look like close up, the children can get a real sense of the instrument.

For those who preferred to explore art in the two-dimensional sense, Scituate artist Mat Brown, chief creator and illustrator of Building #19's popular cartoon ads was on hand to help children explore their artistic talents in the drawing arena. While every student might not have the ability to draw like Brown, "Every single one of them has the ability to draw," which Whelan said was stressed during the lesson.

In the computer labs, students were allowed to test out graphic design software while having some musical accompaniment. For those who like to design with more tangible objects, an interactive booth was set up in the cafeteria for budding architects. Children were all given a piece of blueprint paper to draw their designs, then built their creation out of cardboard.

Whelan said this was the first time the school has held an arts night, and it provided a wonderful opportunity to promote the arts in school. She said it was a wonderful way for the PSO to help fulfill their enrichment commitment to the school, as well as the perfect way to wrap up the month long arts celebration.

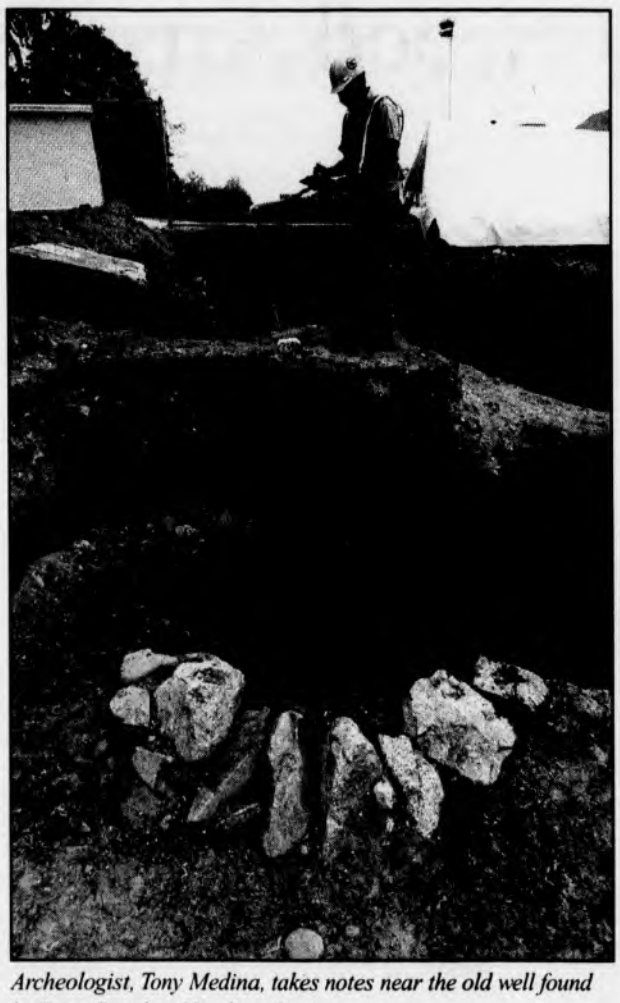
Indian living surface unearthed in Hingham Square

Artifacts found under rail bed

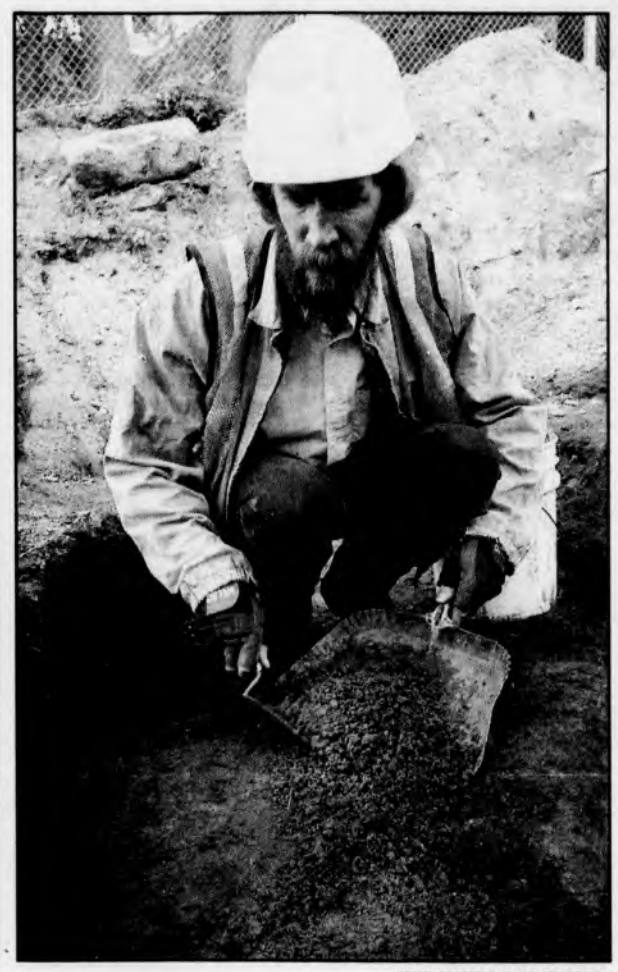
By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

For the untrained eye, it just looks like dirt. But to archeologists, what is being unearthed in Hingham Square continues to create excitement.



The living surface includes circular stains in the soil that archeologists believe depict where saplings were anchored to provide the structure for a wigwam.

Stains on the earth buried by hundreds of years of soil and fill are starting to paint a picture of an Indian settlement on a terrace near an open Town Brook which used to meander through the downtown area.



Field archeologists from the University of Massachusetts Archeological Services have uncovered a living surface several feet beneath the fill along the old railroad bed. While the excavation halts further work in the area on the train tunnel and its companion project — relocating Town Brook — Greenbush construction continues along other parts of the right-of-way.

The living surface includes circular stains in the soil that archeologists believe depict where saplings were anchored to provide the structure for a wigwam. The circles, where the wood decomposed, are some six inches in diameter and are a different color than the surrounding soil. There's also a dark stain where cooking or food storage could have taken place.

Plans over the next few weeks are to completely study and document the site before the bulldozers cover it over. Living surfaces, like the one uncovered in Hingham, are non-portable artifacts and therefore, by their nature, cannot be removed.

Archeologist, Tony Medina, takes notes near the old well found by Town Brook in Hingham Square.

STAFF PHOTOS/ALAN CHAPMAN

Field archeologist, Terry Stigers, scrapes a layer of dirt off the Indian living surface uncovered along the rail bed in Hingham Square.

In addition to signs in the earth itself, portable artifacts such a clay pipes, ceramics, glass and pieces of English flint have also been uncovered. The painstaking work involves carefully scraping off a layer of dirt and then sifting it through a screen to catch any remnants of Hingham history.

The bits and pieces uncovered show the Indians were trading with each other. For example, pieces of arrowheads and stone tools that have been uncovered come from as far away as the Hudson River Valley.

"Most people think this is trash," says crew chief Tony Medina, explaining how the broken lip of a bottle he was holding could tell a story. He said while most think of the country as wilderness when the Indians roamed, it was in fact quite civilized.

Back in April, the remains of 17th-century circular well that was dry laid and an 19th-century wooden privy were unearthed behind the first Samuel Lincoln House that dates back to the 1600s. The archeologists subsequently extended their dig beyond that excavation to uncover the Indian living surface. The Indians moved seasonally, storing their food and grain in pits. The remains of the pits left a stain in the soil as well as bits of animal bones and some grain and seeds. The wigwam where the Indians lived was quite large and also included a fire pit in the center and racks for sleeping.

Eventually the portable artifacts will find their way back to Hingham, explains project archeologist Tim Barker. An English flint and latten spoon, dating to the 17th century, are two interesting discoveries found among the Indian artifacts that show the Indians were trading with the Europeans, he said.

It's not surprising Indians chose the site which was next to fresh water with easy access to the tidal Mill Pond, which is now the Station Street parking lot, and the coast, Barker explains.

Another interesting discovery is either part of a corduroy foot bridge or a V-shaped fish weir that may correlate to the Indian site, Barker said.

Local historian John Richardson of Fort Hill Street in Hingham says Thaxter's Bridge once spanned Town Brook where the current archeological dig is taking place. The downtown area had a series of bridges. Broad Bridge where Main Street crosses South and North streets was the most traveled and so large that vendors sold their wares from the edges of it.

"People used to throw things off the bridges," Richardson said.

Richardson expects more Indian artifacts will be unearthed. When the original train station and tower were built in 1849, Indian artifacts were discovered at that time.

Richardson notes building the train back in 1849 required filling the area and walling up the Town Brook. It was aesthetically destructive but not unpopular.

"There was no great outcry at the time because the train was a great mode of transportation," he explained. The alternative was the stagecoach whose circuitous route was over Fort Hill Street.

Test pits were dug last May along the right-of-way to determine areas of archeological interest. In January, an ancient retaining wall was discovered at the top of Station Street. Colonial artifacts were found near the wall. More discoveries are possible along the rail bed between North and South streets.

Archeologists doing the field work will report their detailed findings to the Massachusetts Historical Commission as a required part of the Greenbush project. The information will eventually make its way to the Army Corps of Engineers, which is the federal environmental permitting agency on the project, and back to Hingham for display and education.

Relocating Town Brook that flows under Hingham Square is part of the Greenbush train project that includes building a tunnel — dubbed Hingham's "Big Dig" — under the Square. The brook and tunnel projects are being conducted concurrently.

Mill River could become full-service boatyard site

Plans could pose parking problems

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"Parking is the number one problem in my view."
— Bob Sturdy, planning board

Members of the Mill River Boatyard development team have come forward with more detailed plans regarding the reconstruction of the Border Street site. If they have their way, a full-service boatyard, complete with hauling, launching, storage and repair facilities will be operating in the future, where three dilapidated buildings once stood.

However, with the sprucing up of the area comes a potential increase in traffic, and members of the planning board are concerned more vehicles will cause more parking problems for the site than there already are. Although developers say there will not be an increase in use for the site, the planning board disagrees and says there need to be provisions made for additional parking if their plans are going to work.

"Parking is the number one problem in my view," said member Bob Sturdy, adding the rebuild of the area could generate a huge parking problem, which doesn't currently exist with what is there today. Currently, the Cohasset Lobster Pound and the first floor of the main building on site are the only two buildings that can safely be used as work space. With plans to have a full service boatyard, which will incorporate both a rebuilt Eastwick building, Quonset Hut, main building and the Lobster Pound, Sturdy said he can see the current plans generating the need for upwards of 100 parking spaces due to its increase of use.

"There is parking all along Border Street," said attorney for Mill River Boatyard LLC, Charles Humphreys. He added that the development team is only looking to reconstruct the three buildings that are already on site, and they're going to be used for a boatyard, and there should be no distinction between the different levels it may or may not be working at. He said when a business goes from being a summer only business to a year-round, there is no increase of use, and this project is not proposing an increase of use either.

"We don't need parking," said Humphreys.

Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey said he agreed with Sturdy and called that part of town "a parking nightmare," which could potentially be made worse depending on the businesses that move into the reconstructed buildings. Ivimey then asked Humphreys if he believed the Mill River site is currently operating as a full-service boatyard.

"Yes, I believe that is exactly what it is operating as today," Humphreys said.

Humphreys outlined the proposed uses of the project in a letter written to the planning board, which the board had requested at its last meeting. The development team at first said it did not need to disclose what the potential uses for the buildings might be, but after consulting with Town Counsel, the planning board found it was in its purview to ask and requested detailed information in writing.

The letter, written by Humphreys, states: "Without in any way intending to limit the right of any owner to use property in any manner permitted by law, it is the intention of Mill River Boatyard, LLC to use the above referenced facilities, including the buildings being reconstructed, as a full service boatyard, which includes hauling, launching, storage, and repair of boats and marine equipment. Such additional uses proposed to the extent permitted by existing law or hereinafter required permits are; the retail sale of marine petroleum products, the sale of boats, fishing and boating supplies and equipment; wholesale and retail sale of seafood products; docks, facilities and floats, and any other use of activity permitted under the zoning bylaw and G.L. Chapter 91, including all accessory uses normally permitted therewith."

However, the letter did not clear up all questions, and member Peter Pratt, who was acting chairman in place of Al Moore who recused himself from the discussion, said the different uses can be open to interpretation. He said if the plans are to have rack storage, that should be called out on the plans and the board should be given the best description of what is likely to happen on site as is possible. He made reference to when the Fleet Bank came to Cohasset and asked for a drive-up window. The board asked whether there would be a teller or an ATM machine, because the use for the space could affect what will be allowed in the future. He said if the bank had moved out and a restaurant moved in, leaving the town with a drive-through window which it doesn't want, the town would have looked to the board and asked why it hadn't done its job. "We need to know, is this an ATM or French fries?" he said.

Humphreys said any use on site will abide by all rules and bylaws of both the town and state and special permits will be sought after when needed. He said depending on the permits that can be obtained, it will affect what the plans for the site are, and that will have to be seen at a later date.

Member Mike Westcott said in his view, there is going to be an increase in the extent of the use of the facilities, as there is probably only one boat being worked on at the site currently, meaning there will be more parking needed for the site in the future. However, Humphreys said that information is not correct and there are currently over a dozen boats on the site. "That shows a predisposition toward this project that is astounding. We have a boatyard that is populated with boats in every area," he said. Humphreys added the board should put some typical conditions on the permit and send them off to the other boards to let them take a look at the plans and go from there.

However, Pratt said he wouldn't feel comfortable doing that because, "This board generally likes people to comply with the law." He went on to say he feels the plans are avoiding the extent the buildings will be used as well as the types of transactions that would be conducted and if the board doesn't do its job and ask the questions, it could end up approving a building without the proper infrastructure. What was allowed when the buildings were built is very different from what is allowed with a reconstruction, he said, adding parking, sewer, and water will vary based on the amount of employees they expect to have and the overall scope of use for the site. Pratt also said if there is a change of use on the site, the board needs to ask for additional information such as traffic impact studies.

"We're all trying to do the right thing up here," Pratt said of his board, adding the applicant is to be commended for even wanting to take the project on.

The Planning Board was slated to take on the Mill River Boatyard issue again at its meeting Wednesday night after the Mariner went to press. It was the only item scheduled for the agenda and the board hoped to reach some conclusions on the matter that evening.

We'll make you smile.

First large house gets OK from Planning Board

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"We will face the day when someone will want to build everything to within one-half inch of the maximum, but this looks good."
—Al Moore, planning board chairman

While the trial run for any new bylaw often does not go smoothly, the first public hearing for the Large House Plan Review, passed by voters at the annual Town Meeting, went off without a hitch.

George McGoldrick, 93 Black Rock Road, came before the Planning Board last week with plans to build a new, 4,100 square foot single family home on Jerusalem Road. The large house review is triggered when the plans for a home exceed the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area up to 6,000 square feet.

McGoldrick bought the property at 378 Jerusalem Road, which includes an old Victorian home and its lot, as well as a second buildable lot. He said he has renovated the Victorian home and has plans to sell it to a couple from Natick, and will move with his family to the home he intends to build on the second lot.

McGoldrick said he looked at the bylaw passed at the annual Town Meeting and tried to conform to its standards as much as possible. He said he made every effort to take his neighbors into consideration and their current way of life, and will take every measure possible to ensure the new home he will build will fit in with the current character of the neighborhood. He said in trying to conform with what is already existing in the area, he does not have plans to create a new driveway off of Jerusalem Road and has made other considerations as well.

"We are set back from the road as far as possible and we didn't want to disturb the stone wall," that runs along the property, McGoldrick said, adding he also "didn't want to interrupt any views for the neighbors."

The Planning Board was glad the process went so smoothly, considering it was the first time dealing with the new bylaw. The general consensus of the board was, because McGoldrick followed the bylaw and had discussed his plans with the neighbors, there were no problems to deal with, and they were happy to grant approval for a building permit.

Mark DeGiacomo, who is on the Growth and Development Committee and was a proponent for the article, is an abutter to the property and came to the meeting with the Planning Board. "He's doing exactly what you'd hope he would do," DeGiacomo said of McGoldrick, and said he had no problems with the proposed new house.

DeGiacomo was the only abutter to attend the hearing, which Planning Board Chairman Al Moore said was a good sign, and means McGoldrick did his homework talking to abutters and taking the guidelines into consideration, prior to coming before the board.

"We will face the day when someone will want to build everything to within one-half inch of the maximum, but this looks good,' said Moore.

The large house plan review was modeled after a bylaw adopted by the town of Weston. It was passed to ensure any proposals for construction of residential buildings which exceed the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area up to 6,000 square feet will be subject to a review process by the Planning Board. If a home is under the size requirements, the bylaw will have no effect on any building plans.

The intention of the bylaw is to insure abutters are notified if a "large house" is going to be built in their neighborhood, and that the Planning Board holds a public hearing to air any concerns on both sides. The Planning Board can then either choose to recommend the project receive a building permit or not, but the building inspector ultimately has the last say on the matter.

McGoldrick hopes to start construction in a month or two.

Water main flushing to continue

"Flushing cleans out sediment and deposits which may have accumulated in the water mains and is an important part of the continuing efforts to improve drinking water quality to our customers."
— John McNabb, water commission

The Water Department is continuing to flush water mains, which started April 26 and will conclude May 31. Flushing will take place on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays between 9 p.m. and 2 a.m. The anticipated flushing schedule for the week of May 24 follows: May 24, North Main St. from Forest Ave. to Elm St.; Highland Ave. and Highland Ct.; Elm St., Margin St., Atlantic Ave. to Beach St, Beach St. and streets off these streets; Sohier St. from Ripley Rd. to No. Main St.; Ripley Rd.; Depot Ct.; and Smith Place. May 25, Atlantic Ave. from Beach St. to Jerusalem Rd.; Nichols Rd.; Jerusalem Rd. from Atlantic Ave. to No. Main St.; Joy Pl.; Gammons Rd.; Redgate Ln.; and streets off all of these streets. May 26, Jerusalem Rd. from Forest St. to Atlantic Ave. and all streets off this section of Jerusalem Rd.

Residents will be provided advance notification in the Cohasset Mariner and the Patriot Ledger of the schedule for flushing each segment of the system. In addition, temporary street signs will be placed strategically around the affected area on the day of flushing. Notice will also be provided on the Water Dept.'s web site, www.cohassetwater.org and on the local cable access channel, Channel 10. Residents should monitor the web site and the cable channel for schedule changes.

"Flushing cleans out sediment and deposits which may have accumulated in the water mains and is an important part of the continuing efforts to improve drinking water quality to our customers," said John McNabb, Chairman of the Water Commission.

Do not wash clothes during the time the flushing occurs. If clothing becomes stained it can be cleaned by using "Iron Out" which is available for free from the Water Department.

During the flushing program, some temporary discoloration of the water may occur. Run the cold water faucet, preferably outside, for a short time until the discoloration clears. If your water is discolored, avoid using hot water until you flush your hot water tank by opening the valve at the bottom of the tank.

Please call the Water Department at 781- 383-0057 with any questions.

Free conference on senior housing

A free conference, "Housing That Works; A Conference for Older Adults Considering a Move" will be held Friday, June 4, from 10 a.m. – 3 p.m. at the Senior Center at Hingham Town Hall.

The full-day conference of lectures, workshops and a trade show will offer information about housing choices and ways to minimize the stress of moving. Seniors and children of seniors facing the possibility of a future move are invited to attend.

The morning session will consist of several panels: Selling Your Home – how to simplify the process, and Profiles in Housing – information about different senior housing options. Afternoon panels will discuss: Title 5 septic regulations ("It's in the Tank") and The Rent is Due - financing options for the various types of housing.

Following the panel discussions will be a free lunch and a tradeshow (1-3 p.m.) where conference participants will have an opportunity to meet representatives from many local senior housing communities, and professionals who provide services to help seniors have a stress-free move. In addition special raffle prizes will be offered from many local businesses.

Somber reminder

Let's try to put politics aside for a moment. Regardless of your position on the war in Iraq, or whether you agree with decisions being made by President Bush and those in power, let's take time this Memorial Day to honor the men and women who have paid the ultimate sacrifice in this ongoing battle.

The concept of Memorial Day and how it should be celebrated has certainly slipped from our grasp over the years. As the memories of Korea and Vietnam fade and the legacies of World War II and World War I became footnotes in history books, the mood and tone of Memorial Day has taken a dramatic turn from its original intention.

Gone is the day for somber reflection, of parades hosted by towns to honor fallen war veterans, of ceremonies at local cemeteries where veterans' graves were decorated with flowers and flags and people took the time to clean the grave sites.

Memorial Day, originally called Decoration Day, was officially proclaimed May 5, 1868 by General John Logan, national commander of the Grand Army of the Republic during the Civil War. It was first observed May 30, 1868, when flowers were placed on the graves of Union and Confederate soldiers at Arlington National Cemetery. The first state to officially recognize the holiday was New York in 1873 and by 1890 it was recognized by all of the northern states. The South refused to acknowledge the day, instead honoring their dead on separate days until after World War I, when the holiday changed from honoring just those who died fighting in the Civil War to honoring Americans who died fighting in any war. Since Congress passed the National Holiday Act of 1971, making it a federal holiday, it is celebrated in almost every state on the last Monday in May. Several southern states, however, still have an additional separate day to honor Confederate soldiers killed in the Civil War.

What Memorial Day has become over time, however, is a long weekend for family barbecues, trips to the beach to celebrate the "unofficial" start of summer, or shopping sprees at the local mall to take advantage of the big sales.

The war in Iraq has brought the reality and the tragedy of war closer to home. While the 136 members of the 1058th Transportation Company of the Massachusetts National Guard based in Hingham recently returned home safely after 14 months on the front lines, some local soldiers have not been so fortunate. Marine Lieutenant Brian McPhillips, 25, of Pembroke, was one of the first United States soldiers killed in Iraq in April 2003, and the list continues to grow.

Since the war began, 785 Americans have lost their lives, with the majority of those killed after President Bush declared an end to the major combat on May 1, 2003. During the time Americans were rebuilding Iraq after the capture of Saddam Hussein and the toppling of his regime, 647 men and women have been killed.

Politics aside, these men and women have been sent to Iraq to do a job. Whether they believe it is their job to follow orders and honor their commitment to the military branch they served, to liberate Iraq from the ruthless regime of Saddam Hussein, to protect American interests in the Middle East, no matter what their reason for being there, they served their country and paid the ultimate price in doing so. You don't have to believe in war or support military action to honor those who die in service to their country.

When Memorial Day became a three-day weekend, it made it a little easier for Americans to get distracted from the true spirit and meaning of the day. But the war in Iraq serves as a timely reminder that we need to remember and honor those who died fighting for our country, whether it be in Iraq, Afghanistan, Vietnam, Korea or during either of the two World Wars.

COMMON GROUND

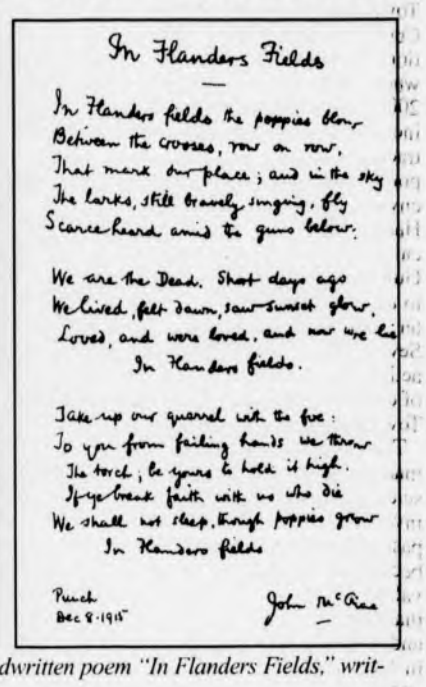
AMY WHORF MCGUIGGAN

The recent burst of heat and "summer" got me out into the garden to assess the winter's damage and plan the new crop. Thanks to the grub-hunting skunks and the fierce daily whiffle ball games, the lawn is a complete disaster, far past the point where any patch seeding will improve its appearance. My lilacs, decades old, are succumbing to age, road salt and all the other pollutants in modern society that conspire to do in roadside plantings. But the lilacs that have survived are all blooming gloriously, and during these next few days, the flower's special fragrance will perfume the air. I've lopped my Niagra grapevine back to virtually nothing. It struggled last year, a victim of black rot, but I'm confident that the severe pruning I've given it (which I've never had the heart to do in the past) will restore it to life. The perennial bed is coming alive after being heavily mulched for the winter. If only all the perennials came back with the same vigor the chives do. My roses, I fear, are not coming back. For a dozen years they graced my front fence (which has also succumbed, to rot), but the extreme winter cold was more than they could take. I'm trying to look on the bright side and take the advice of one gardening columnist who suggested that rather than fretting over lost plants, one might use the opportunity to plant something new and different.

Some things in the garden are, however, so reliable as to inspire wonder at their resiliency. The Bleeding heart has been growing four to five inches a day and is just about in full bloom. The Solomon's seal that I rescued from a heap of garden waste in the woods up the street is also thriving. The catnip is everywhere and I have a beautiful palette of spring bulb flowers. The daylilies are indestructible (though I wouldn't mind some attrition in their ranks) and my Lunaria (better known as money plant — if only it were so!) out in the woods never disappoints.

Of all my returnees, the one I most anticipate each spring is the Oriental poppy, a hardy perennial whose dazzling, solitary orange-red flower adds an old-fashioned, exuberant charm to the garden. The flower, with its dark, velvety eye, begins inconspicuously enough, a bouquet-like cluster of hairy leaves emerging from the still-cold ground. The leaves thicken, stiffen and multiply and from somewhere deep in their midst comes the thick, hairy stalk that grows several feet high. Atop the stalk, a tightly packed, nodding bud can barely contain its contents. As the seams of the calyx begin to separate, the first hints of the orange tissue-papery petals show themselves. If there is anything disappointing about the flower it is its ephemeral nature. Blink and you'll miss the unfolding of the petals. The slightest breeze will rob the flower of those petals, leaving only the seed pod. I cut the pods every fall, shake the zillions of tiny seeds from inside, and arrange the pods in a vase, an elegant reminder, all winter, of these approaching days of summer.

The name, "poppy," derives from the Latin papaver, and is a flower family that includes Celandine and Dutchman's breeches. Exuding a milky sap when broken or bruised, the poppy's Latin name is said to relate to pap, a semi-liquid food for babies made from bread or meal moistened with milk.



The poppy has long been legendary for the narcotic effects of some species, particularly Papaver somniferum, the opium poppy, a herbaceous annual indigenous to Asia. Associated throughout history with sleep, tranquility, dreams and peace, P. somniferum was known by the ancient Sumarians as the "joy plant." Ancient Egyptians buried their dead with the poppy to ensure a peaceful sleep and in Greek mythology, Demeter is said to have created the poppy to induce sleep after the loss of her daughter, Persephone.

Widely cultivated through the ages for its milk — opium in its crudest form — from which morphine, codeine and laudanum are derived, the opium poppy has been one of mankind's most important medicinal plants, a mainstay of orthodox medicine, used as a pain reliever, sleep aid and remedy for nausea. Its usefulness, however, was abused and the "cure" became an addiction. Quack patent medicines of the 19th century made opium virtuous, lauding it as a tincture that could cheer the heart, refresh the spirit, quiet the mind, and enhance the imagination. Virtually every medicinal concoction was infused with opium. Poets, writers and artists indulged, hoping to intensify consciousness and bring about creative delirium. As opium's pernicious effects began to show themselves, Papaver somniferum became a symbol of illicit drug trade and the scourge of heroin addiction.

If the scourge of addiction brought attention to the opium poppy, the scourge of war brought attention to another member of the family, Papaver Rhoeas, the common red poppy. Also known as a field or corn poppy, the wildflower contains rhoeadine, a non-poisonous mild narcotic. Greek legend tells of this poppy being created by Somnus, the god of sleep. Its seeds, which can lie dormant for years, germinate in rooted up soil. Profusions of the graceful flower beautify sunny waste places and old fields, though in many places Papaver Rhoeas is regarded as little more than a weed.

To Major John McCrae, a Canadian surgeon attached to the 1st Field Artillery Brigade in western Belgium during World War I, the dainty poppy became a symbol of the terrible toll of war and the perpetual sleep of its victims.

In Flanders Fields

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the Dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved, and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields

John McCrae

Major John McCrae and a copy of his handwritten poem "In Flanders Fields," written under fire during World War I at Ypres.

For 17 days, McCrae tended to the war injured in the Ypres salient, an experience he later wrote was "17 days of Hades." During lulls in the ferocious fighting, the dead were buried where they fell, amid the rubble and blood-soaked soil, their graves marked with wooden crosses, row on row. One death particularly affected McCrae. A young soldier, Alexis Helmer of Ottawa, whom McCrae had befriended, was killed May 2, 1915. In the absence of the chaplain, McCrae performed the funeral ceremony. The next day, anguished McCrae composed his poem, In Flanders Fields, perhaps the most memorable words ever written about war.

All around him, on the battlefield that had become a cemetery, the little red poppies, whose roots were said to feed on blood, mysteriously blossomed over the graves of the fallen, a phenomenon that had also been noted a century earlier during the Napoleonic Wars. McCrae wrote for 20 minutes, an exact description of the scene before his eyes, then tossed the poem aside. Retrieved by a fellow officer, the poem was sent to newspapers in England where it was published by the magazine, Punch.

Inspired by the poem, an American woman, Moina Michael, was the first to wear a poppy in honor of those who had died in the nation's service. The tradition spread to other countries and in 1922, the Veterans of Foreign Wars became the first veterans organization to adopt the poppy as a symbol of remembrance and Memorial Day. Today, the paper poppies, assembled by disabled and aging veterans, are sold to benefit veterans' service programs and help support the widows and orphaned children of soldiers.

It has been nine decades and a world of change since Major John McCrae wrote his evocative words, but they remain a lasting legacy of the horrific battle of Ypres, and a poignant reminder to those of us who live on that we must never forget, that we now speak for the dead.

To you, from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.

HEALTH NOTES

Student reports are significant resource

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last Thursday, the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) held its annual Report to the Town covering the various environmental monitoring activities the Center has done for the Town over the summer of 2003. Each year the Center provides increasingly valuable information to the Town about the condition of our waters and the threats thereto. Beginning in 2000, the students provided data which was included in a report provided by a Town contractor, Camp Dresser & McKee, which supported expansion of a sewer district to reduce environmental damage to clam flats in Little Harbor. Subsequent reports provided the technical basis for a natural resource inventory of the Gulf, and an assessment of the potential damage to aquatic life in Cohasset Cove from stormwater and increased effluent from the Central Sewer Plant. In short, the students' summer activities at CSCR have provided the front line of defense against environmental damage to our Town's waterways.

This year, the reports by the students were marked by the most professional and convincing science ever to come from student volunteers investigating our waters. The data, used in the past on a piecemeal basis, now shows promise, because of its quantity, quality and precision, of validating extremely important natural changes that seem to be occurring in Cohasset Harbor and its tributaries. Seventeen students are listed in four reports that cover chemical, biological and natural conditions in Cohasset Harbor, the Gulf, and other tributaries. Eric Odleifson, president of The Gulf River Association; Gulf Association activists; Joe Godzik, health agent for the Board of Health; parents and friends of the students, as well as many other involved citizens, were present for this important meeting.

The reports and their Authors are listed below:

- "Salinity Study of James Brook Drainage into Cohasset Harbor," Toby Norman, CHS
- "Fecal Coliform Study of the Gulf River, Summer 2003," Dan Allen, Brent Daly, John McCarthy, Nathan Needle, Miguel De Los Santos, and Kara Wilcox
- "Salinity Study of Cohasset Harbor, Summer of 2003," John Andrade, Alice Bellone, Jaqui Blake, Mia Lieb Lappin, and Tom Pilczak

This year, the reports by the students were marked by the most professional and convincing science ever to come from student volunteers investigating our waters.

- "Physical Chemical Analysis of Gulf River Water Quality, Summer 2003," John Grimm, Ryan Ofsthun, Matt Casey, and Mark Davis, CHS

Reports by the students were marked by a level of sophistication and equivalent in many cases to college level science reports. However, the thing which made the presentations so outstanding are:

- Improved quality of data.
- Increased sophistication of measurements and reporting results.
- Increase in number and location of data points.
- Liberal use of supporting data and references from the literature
- Larger cadre of trained young scientists working on the project.
- Better Focus on conditions of importance to Cohasset's water resources.

There is no question that these remarkable reports will continue to provide the most important tool available to the Town for evaluating its estuaries and waterways. They provide data which, if developed by contractors, would cost many thousands of dollars. Moreover, the methods of collection, analysis, and evaluation have been augmented by equipment provided from donors and supporters of CSCR ; some equipment is superior to that available from the science program at the high school.

For example, the Center now has the means for determining enterococci levels in water which, according to the Department of Environmental Protection, is a more important indicator than fecal coliform for determining the threat of pollution from dangerous bacteria found in the feces of humans and warm blooded animals. In addition, Dr. Carsten Haber, a CSCR board member, is in the process of setting up electrophoresis equipment that will allow students to measure numerous constituents in harbor waters, including difficult to detect trace metals.

Summer 2004 monitoring season is getting underway right now. Those interested (students and adults welcome) in getting involved in coastal research projects should contact CSCR at 383–0129. Residents interested in reading 2003 reports can access hard copies at the Board of Health office at the Town Hall, can pick up their own copy at the CSCR, or can download reports from CSCR's website at www.cescr.org

If others can save energy, why can't we?

NATURAL VIEW

JIM SHIPSKY

I'd like to commend Jacqueline and David Whipple for their recent article advocating Energy Star appliances, air-drying of laundry, and communal laundry rooms. I too urge the Planning Board, Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, Zoning Board of Appeals, Conservation Commission and Building Inspector to take steps that will reduce Cohasset's use of fossil fuels and reduce Cohasset's contribution to global climate change. The steps the Whipples suggest may be small, but they signal an important change in attitude, from that of helpless victim (What can I do?") to that of active defender of the environment.

The United States should be setting an example for the rest of the world on how to develop a sustainable lifestyle. Instead, the US impedes international efforts to reduce carbon emissions, the primary cause of global climate change. The US, and Cohasset's, love affair with SUVs results in pollution-per-trip five to 10 times greater than that of a hybrid car such as the Toyota Prius. We're setting an appalling global example of how to destroy the environment as fast as possible. Shame on us!

Sweden, on the other hand, recognizes the importance of reducing the use of fossil fuels, of building "green" non-toxic buildings, switching to organic farming, generating electricity with wind power, and building their economy in the process. Sixty Swedish cities and towns have adopted a four-point "Natural Step" sustainability framework to guide their development. All of them, ranging from villages of 300 people to cities of more than 100,000, are members of a national association of eco-municipalities that is dedicated to promoting ecologically, socially, and economically sustainable practices on the local and national levels.

Falkenberg (pop. 40,000) has created a windmill park, whose 10 turbines generate enough electricity to heat and light over 600 homes. Citizens pay a onetime fee to join a municipal cooperative and receive wind-powered electricity for half the market price.

Eskilstuna (pop. 90,000) built a "non-toxic" elementary school for 500 children, using only natural materials—no plastics or synthetics. The school has reported a marked improvement in the health of students, teachers, and administrators.

We're setting an appalling global example of how to destroy the environment as fast as possible. Shame on us!

Overtornea's government operations recently became 100 percent fossil fuel free, demonstrating that unsustainable municipal practices really can be overhauled. Imagine if Cohasset's schools and municipal buildings stopped burning fossil fuels, switching to non-polluting renewable energy. What a wonderful example we would set for the South Shore!

Umea, a university town and regional employment center, is the site of a most unusual enterprise, an eco-park, or Green-Zone". The four buildings on the site, including a McDonald's restaurant, a Ford Dealership, and a Statoil gas station, are constructed of wood that is locally harvested from certified sustainably managed forests. All the buildings have sod roofs, cutting stormwater drainage requirements in half. Bolts and screws rather than nails were used in construction, enabling easy disassembly and future reuse. The development, which is not part of the city's stormwater drainage or sewer systems, has reduced energy consumption by 70 percent and freshwater consumption by 90 percent. Rainwater that is not absorbed by the sod roofs or permeable paving is collected, cleaned by a state-of-the-art filtration system, and used at the car wash.

Twenty years ago, Overtornea was struggling with a declining population and an unemployment rate of 40 percent. Changes began in the mid-1980s, when town planner Torbjorn Lahti initiated a participatory community revitalization process. Today Overtornea is Sweden's first official "eco-municipality". Gradually, says Lahti, local attitudes changed from "I can't" to "we can". Since then, local citizens have formed some 200 eco-businesses.

Which leads me to wish Cohasset would be less concerned with what our new sidewalks will be paved with, or the location of memorial traffic islands, and more concerned with the damage we're wreaking to the environment that we depend on to keep us alive. Where the ---- are our priorities?

Hull, our neighbor to the north, is setting a far better example. Their wind turbine has generated 3,944,000 kilowatts of electricity since it went into operation Dec. 27, 2001. That represents 2,153 tons of carbon dioxide that has not been spewed into the atmosphere. Zero nitrous oxides, zero sulfur oxides, zero particulates, and zero radioactive waste.

We can all breathe a little easier because of it. Hull has proposals in the works to build two more wind turbines. Hull has replaced the incandescent bulbs in their traffic signals with LEDs, cutting electric consumption drastically. Hull offers rebates to residents who buy Energy Star washers, refrigerators, and air conditioners. Hull is organizing a Climate Change information Day July 27, to be held at the Mary Jeannette Murray Bathhouse.

Uh, Cohasset, hello?

The Democratic convention, bah!

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I see where they are expecting the mother of all traffic jams during the Democratic National Convention in Boston this summer.

My first reaction is: How can they tell?

My second reaction is to be as far away as possible in some less hectic venue like Baghdad or the Gaza Strip on July 26-29 while the convention is in session in the Fleet Center.

Contesting with Al Sharpton for the last shrimp in the free lunch at Tom Menino's hospitality room in the Sheraton Boston may not be as bloody but it's every bit as strenuous as battling a terrorist in one of Saddam Hussein's suites in the Sheraton Fellujah.

The maneuver that gives me the most pause is the closing of the northbound ramps of the Southeast Expressway as far south as the so-called "Braintree split" from 4 p.m. to 12 midnight. My house is closer to the split than the Fleet Center.

The way they keep changing the rules --- I've heard of ramps to Route 128 as far south as Canton mentioned for closure --- I would expect to get up on the morning of July 26 to have a Secret Service man frisk me for saran or napalm before I take the dog for her morning walk.

I'd head for the Cape on the evening of July 25 but I'm not sure what they've done to foul up traffic at the Sagamore Rotary and, besides, I might get trampled in the rush of couples to Provincetown to become man and husband and woman and wife.

To make matters worse, there is a good chance that John Kerry, who has been the nominee for president in all but name for the last two months, will take away the convention's raison d'etre by postponing his acceptance for the nomination for a month or so.

Pardon me for asking, but isn't the reason for the convention in the first place, to nominate a candidate for the presidency and listen to a rip roaring acceptance speech that will send the delegates out on the hustings ready to chew nails for their candidate?

What's left for the delegates once they have departed the open bar at Ted Kennedy's suite at the Copley Plaza and stopped marveling at Bill Clinton's moves on the waitress at Lockober's and fought their way through traffic to the Fleet Center?

Not much, except for hours of speechifying and the nomination of a vice presidential candidate, which raises the question: Can there be a candidate for vice president without a candidate for president? And can the vice president accept while the president doesn't?

Remember the good old days when Bob Taft and Dwight Eisenhower fought it out for the Republican nomination in 1952 and Adlai Stevenson and Estes Kefauver duked it out for the Democratic nod in 1956?

And of course there was the Democratic get together in 1924 when "Alabama casts 24 votes for Oscar W. Underwood" 102 times and John W. Davis was nominated on the 103rd ballot.

Now that was a convention!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Police officers praised

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Chief Jackson:

As a longtime town resident I have been wondering as of late what is happening with our Police Department. We keep hearing and reading stories, none of which are very flattering to your department.

Yesterday, for the first time in a very long time, I had the occasion to interact with two of Cohasset's finest — and I mean that in every sense of the word. They were very nice, polite and extremely professional.

Early yesterday morning I went out on our front stoop to retrieve the Sunday newspaper and was confronted by a very handsome grey fox who was in no apparent hurry to leave the premises. Being the great animal trainer that I am, I proceeded to make noise and slap the newspaper in order to hasten his departure. Much to my surprise, he instead decided to attack, and ran briskly toward me. I quickly retreated back into the house. After five minutes of observation I determined that this poor animal was sick and likely rabid.

I called the Cohasset Police Department and an officer arrived in less than five minutes. The responding officer acted quickly, professionally and precisely. He called the Desk Sergeant, who after hearing the officer's assessment of the situation immediately dispatched a second officer, with the proper firearm to humanely dispose of this poor animal.

Your officers, after learning that there were five young children living next door, immediately took action and solved the problem. It was a pleasure to witness their professionalism and see the problem solved so quickly. Both officers were calm in the face of a potentially dangerous situation, even as the fox charged after them.

Regrettably, I did not get the names of the officers that handled the situation. I was impressed by their actions and commend all for a job well done. Please thank them all for me, my wife and our Pond Street neighbors, as well.

Changes proposed for the Town Manager Act

TO THE EDITOR:

John McNabb provided the Mariner with a copy of his letter to Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan.

The change in Town Managers is an opportune time to consider making changes in the Town Manager Act. One of the problems that many have identified from the past seven years of the Town Manager form of government has been too much concentration of power, and too few checks and balances, in Town financial matters and in personnel matters. I would like to suggest that the Town consider making a number of changes to the Town Manager Act, including the following:

- Make the Chief Financial Officer appointed by the Board of Selectmen and who would report directly to the Selectmen.
- Establish a strong Personnel Committee appointed by the Troika (Chairman Selectmen. Chairman Advisory Committee & Moderator) with the authority to decide on job descriptions of town personnel, and to be a review board for a progressive disciplinary process for town employees which they would have to establish.
- Make the Police Chief and Fire Chief appointed by the Board of Selectmen, who they would report directly to.
- Let all Town Boards, not Town Manager, appoint their own Dept. heads (so the Assessors can appoint their own Asst. Assessor, the Board of Health their own Health Agent, the Planning Board their own Town Planner, the Conservation Commission their own Conservation Agent, etc.).
- Make all contracts with contractual employees public documents that are on file at Town Hall and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library as soon as they are signed by all parties [such contracts should be public documents anyway; but we need to make this explicit in the Town Manager Act].

I may want to suggest other changes as well, upon further review. Finally, if there is a committee appointed to consider changes in the Town Manager Act I request to be appointed to that Committee. I am a former member and Chairman of the Town Government Structure Committee and believe I could contribute much to the work of such a committee.

ASP event a success

TO THE EDITOR:

A sincere thank you is extended to all those individuals who participated in making our Appalachian Service Project Craft and Flea Market so successful. This first annual event could not have succeeded without the support of our volunteers, their families and our community. The profit made exceeded our expectations, and will be used to assist us in making the homes of many Appalachian families warmer, safer and dryer.

First and foremost we wold like to thank Mr. Donald Stazko for allotting us space to hold the event.

Also, many local businesses generously donated merchandise for us to raffle at our Silent Auction. This was a huge success and we couldn't have done it without Atlantic Bagel & Coffee Co., Dunkin' Donuts, Cohasset Dog Wash, Village Greenery, Bia's Bistro, Victoria's, Village Butcher & Deli, Cohasset Hardware, Atlantica Restaurant, JJ's Dairy Hut, Christopher Gallery, South Shore Art Center, Redbone's Restaurant in Somerville, Fleming's, Robin's Garage, Port's, Starbuck's, Su Esquela Spanish Immersion, Bernard's, Cohasset Cycle Sports, Stop & Shop, French Memories, The Good Sport, Maggie's Bakery and Village Wine & Spirits.

Last but not least, we would like to thank our crafters and venders. Your eclectic assortment of treasures attracted the public, and your unwavering commitment to the project was commendable and priceless. We only hope that we can continue doing business with you for many years to come.

Gay marriage puts our state on the global scene

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

The magnitude of the gay-marriage license story can be summed up in one sentence: "Le Massachusetts a officialisé le mariage homosexual."

That's from LeMonde, and it's just one of many headlines in many languages that focused on the Bay State Monday as the state began allowing gay and lesbian couples to legally wed. This was a story that went not just national, but international. Just after 9 am, Marcia Kadish and Tanya McCloskey of Malden became the first same-sex couple in the history of the United States to be joined under a valid marriage license. Whether they'll still be legally married in 2007 remains very much an open question; voters could still render their union null and void by changing the state Constitution to remove the right to wed that gay couples began enjoying last week.

For now, though, the focus is a bit simpler – newly-wedded bliss. Opponents kept their protests to a minimum, and the news is dominated by smiles, kisses and quotes like the one from Kadish: "I'm glowing from the inside. Happy is an understatement."

This cheerful dynamic is exactly the one gay marriage supporters hope will eventually rule the day: people will agree with 18-year-old Diana Benanti of Illinois, whose parents oppose gay marriage but saw gay couples getting married on TV and told Newsweek, "I just thought how sweet it was that they finally got what they wanted."

This was a story that went not just national, but international.

The sense of the day could in fact have been summed up best by the Legislature's leading light against gay marriage, Philip Travis, D-Rehobeth. He told the New York Times that last Monday was for the happy couples, not for debating the issue.

Polls show that gay marriage is not an especially controversial issue for people under 30 in the Bay State – they support it by a comfortable margin. So in the long run, gay rights activists expect to win; whether 2006 constitutes "the long run" will be determined in due course.

Politically, the more immediate question is whether the issue will have legs in the fall.

Will candidates be able to challenge pro-gay marriage incumbents on the "traditional values" question? Many Republicans and conservative Democrats fully expect so. But another line of thought holds that people just don't care that much. A candidate who talks about health insurance and housing costs compellingly, so the argument goes, is not going to be defeated just because she also voted "yes" on gay marriage.

There was, in fact, some grumbling, even among Republicans, that the governor needs to start focusing on other subjects – that he's has become more identified with "no gay marriage" than with "cleaned up the mess on Beacon Hill." Again, time will tell; it's just one more reason Nov. 2 is going to be so interesting. Well, Nov. 3, actually.

The business that would normally top the news, passage of the Senate budget, was only just emerging toward the top of the news by week's end as gay marriage receded. Even the budget had a gay-marriage angle.

• Senate budget highlights include 1913 law repeal — Politically, lots of State House insiders are viewing this Senate budget as a smooth move – a way for Democrats to steal some of Romney's reform thunder in the context of next fall's elections. The governor issued brief press releases in favor of Senate initiatives. Good politics being good policy, reforms in land use planning, pensions and transportation are also winning good reviews among many advocacy groups and special interests. It will be interesting to see how compliant the House is with a document deemed superior to the House and governor's by media outlets from Berkshire to Barnstable County. Pride of authorship still does count.

One area where Romney definitely did not mete out praise was for floor amendment number 640. That was language repealing a law that makes Massachusetts marriage licenses null and void for couples from out of state who would not be allowed to marry in their home state. The law was passed to keep black people from marrying white people here and then return to states with miscegenation statutes. Romney is using it to block Massachusetts from being the nation's gay-marriage haven. The House is not expect-

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Cohasset Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on three roll calls and local senators' votes on seven roll calls from the week of May 17-21.

EDITOR'S NOTE TO BHRC SUBSCRIBERS:

On two of the Senate roll call votes ("$22.4 BILLION FISCAL 2005 STATE BUDGET" AND "ELIMINATE TWO LOCAL HOLIDAYS"), the following explanation applies:

A "pairing" process, used only in the Senate, is a procedure which allows a senator who is absent when the vote is taken, to express his or her view anyway. Under the arrangement, the absent senator contacts a senator who is present. The present senator agrees to vote the opposite way that the absent senator will vote and agrees to "pair" his or her vote with that of the absent senator. Neither vote is counted in the official total— they cancel each other out. This process allows both senators to be unofficially recorded on the roll call.

LABOR UNIONS AND POLITICAL EDUCATION (H 4330)

House 130-20, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a section allowing an employee of a public employee labor union to authorize a fee-free payroll deductions to contribute to any committee on political education. Override supporters said this would stop the Romney administration's plan to impose a ten-cent per transaction fee on these contributions. They said it is unfair to charge a fee for contributions to these committees that mobilize members and other people to participate in political activity and support the agenda of working families. In his veto message, the governor said that it is inappropriate to use state resources and facilities to raise political contributions on behalf of private interests." (A "Yea" vote is for allowing the fee-free payroll deductions. A "Nay" vote is against allowing them). Y

SCHOOL BUILDING ASSISTANCE (H 4729)

House 130-21, gave near final approval to and sent to the Senate a bill making major changes in the state's program that provides funding for cities and towns to renovate old school buildings and build new ones. The Democratic leadership and state Treasurer Timothy Cahill sponsored this version of the proposal. The measure takes the program away from the state's education department and creates a new independent authority, chaired by the state treasurer, to administer it. It also phases in over seven years the dedication of a penny of the state's five-cents per dollar sales tax to fund the building projects. The authority would be funded by an initial $150 million in state funding and $1 billion in state borrowing through the issuance of bonds. Another provision places a three-year moratorium on any new projects that are not already approved and then reduces the maximum reimbursement to communities by ten percent for new projects beginning in 2007. Supporters said the current program is an underfunded failure that has created a huge backlog of over 400 projects on a waiting list. They argued that this long overdue reform would clear the waiting list in three and a half years. Some opponents said they favor Gov. Romney's alternative plan to reform school building assistance and objected to giving the state treasurer control of the program. Others said the new program would take more than $1 billion from the state's sales tax and lead to underfunding of other important programs or a tax hike. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it). Y

SUBSTITUTE GOVERNOR'S SCHOOL BUILDING ASSISTANCE BILL (H 4729)

House 28-125, rejected an amendment to substitute most of Gov. Romney's school building assistance reform bill in place of the one proposed by state Treasurer Timothy Cahill and the Democratic leadership. Supporters of the governor's plan said it leaves the program in the hands of the Education Department, does not create a new state bureaucracy and has a more fiscally responsible funding and bonding mechanism that does not require the dedication of a penny from the state's 5 cents per dollar sales tax. Opponents of the governor's plan said it is flawed and argued that the creation of a new authority run by the fiscal experts in the state treasurer's office is one of the keys to reform. They noted that the governor's plan cuts reimbursement for some current projects and would take five years, rather than the Democratic plan's three years, to clear the current backlog of 420 projects. (A "Yea" vote is for Gov. Romney's plan. A "Nay" vote is against it). N

$22.4 BILLION FISCAL 2005 STATE BUDGET (S 2400)

Senate 35-1, approved the Senate version of a $22.4 billion fiscal 2005 state budget. Amendments that were added following two long days of debate include barring the Board of Education from approving new Commonwealth Charter Schools until July 2005 or until the Legislature approves a new tuition and financing formula for the schools; repealing a 1913 law that prohibits out-of-state couples from getting married in Massachusetts if their home state does not recognize the union; directing Gov. Romney to request a federal waiver to allow Massachusetts to act as an agent in providing information to its residents regarding the safe purchase of prescription drugs at reduced prices from certified Canadian sources; allowing the state to make bulk purchases of prescription drugs; allowing all state employees and retirees and residents of the state without adequate prescription drug coverage to purchase their medications from Canada when that option becomes legal under federal law. Supporters said the package is a fiscally responsible and balanced one that does not raise taxes and makes tough choices in light of the state's fiscal challenges. They noted that it provides some new, bold initiatives and restores some of the cuts made in last year's budget. Opponents offered no arguments. The House has approved a different version of the budget and a compromise version has to be worked out by a conference committee. (A "Yea" vote is for the budget. A "Nay" vote is against the budget). Y

CHARTER SCHOOL MORATORIUM (S 2400)

Senate 26-13, approved an amendment barring the Board of Education from approving new Commonwealth Charter Schools until July 31, 2005 or until the Legislature approves a new tuition and financing formula for the schools. The measure also freezes enrollment at existing charter schools and prohibits five recently approved new charter schools from opening for at least another year. Some amendment supporters said it is irresponsible to allow the creation of more charter schools and require local communities to fund them in light of the state's fiscal crisis. Others said that these experimental schools have questionable performance records and are draining desperately needed funds from regular public schools. Some amendment opponents said that these innovative schools have performed so well that there are many children on waiting lists for enrollment. They argued that it is irresponsible to prohibit the opening of new charter schools that have already been approved. Others noted that the budget already includes a new funding formula and argued it was doublespeak to impose a moratorium until there is a new funding formula when there is already a new funding formula. (A "Yea" vote is for the moratorium. A "Nay" vote is against the moratorium). N

ABOLISH SUFFOLK COUNTY (S 4200)

Senate 8-29, rejected an amendment abolishing Suffolk County government effective July 1 and transferring its functions to the state. Amendment supporters said several counties have already been abolished and argued that it was time to abolish some of the remaining ones and get rid of this wasteful, costly and inefficient form of government. Amendment opponents said the Legislature has not abolished the remaining counties because it cannot afford to pick up the costly liabilities including pension costs. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment abolishing Suffolk County. A "Nay" vote is against abolishing it). Y

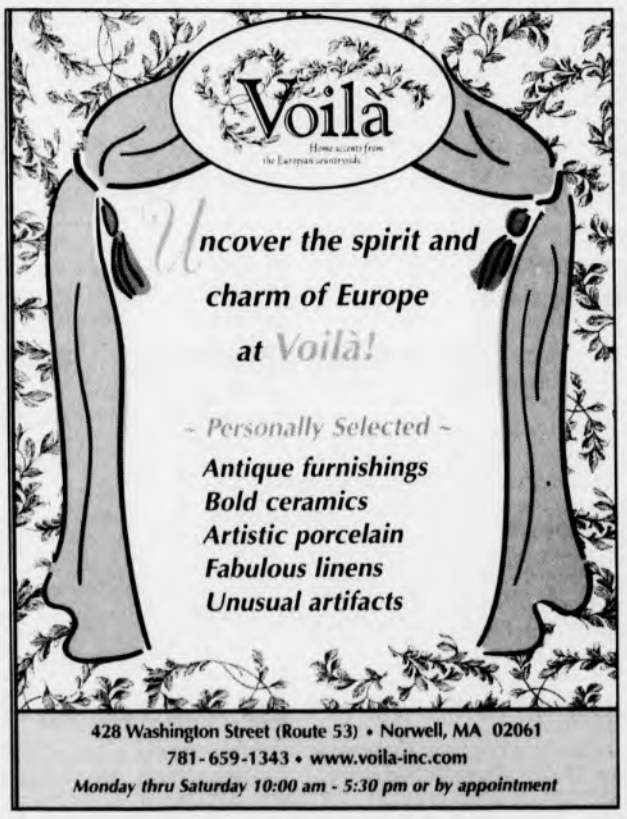
PRESCRIPTION DRUGS FROM CANADA (S 4200)

Senate 38-1, approved an amendment creating a program to allow all state employees and retirees, Mass Health recipients, seniors and disabled persons who are members of the state's Prescription Advantage program and all residents of the state without adequate prescription drug coverage to purchase their medications from Canada when that option becomes legal under federal law. Amendment supporters said this would ensure that the state is prepared to act quickly to allow the safe and less costly purchase of drugs from Canada if and when federal law allows it. They argued that the program would include safeguards to ensure safety and would save consumers and the state millions of dollars. Amendment opponents offered no arguments. House Speaker Thomas Finneran (D-Boston) and Gov. Romney have expressed opposition to drug importation from Canada. They have raised concerns about the safety of the drugs and fear that importation would harm the state's flourishing biotech industry and the economy. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment creating a program to purchase drugs from Canada. A "Nay" vote is against the amendment). Y

RESTRICTIONS ON SCHOOL BUS ADVERTISING (S 4200)

Senate 38-1, approved an amendment further restricting the type of products that can be advertised on school buses under a 2002 law that allows communities to generate revenue for their schools by selling advertising on their school buses. The law currently prohibits the advertising of any substance that is illegal for minors including alcohol, tobacco, drugs and gambling. The amendment would prohibit the advertising of fast food restaurants, beverages with added artificial or refined sweeteners, candy and processed foods containing more than 35 percent of calories from fat, 10 percent of calories from saturated fat or 35 percent sugar by weight. Amendment supporters said adolescent obesity has become a major problem and can lead to juvenile diabetes, heart disease and high blood pressure. They argued that schools should not give their tacit endorsement to junk food by allowing these ads on school buses. Amendment opponents offered no arguments. (A "Yea" vote is for the additional restrictions. A "Nay" vote is against them). Y

$2 MILLION FOR STATE POLICE OVERTIME (H 4200)



Senate 11-28, rejected an amendment increasing funding by $2 million (from $9.06 million to $11.06 million) for overtime pay for State Police officers. Amendment supporters said the additional $2 million would simply fund this account at the same level as last year. They noted that without this funding, state police patrols would be reduced in the next year. Amendment opponents said the $9 million is sufficient and argued this year's state budget is a very pro-law enforcement one that funds many public safety programs and personnel. (A "Yea" vote is for the additional $2 million. A "Nay" vote is against the additional $2 million). Y

ELIMINATE TWO LOCAL HOLIDAYS (S 2400)

Senate 15-21, rejected an amendment eliminating the Suffolk County legal holidays of Evacuation Day (March 17) and Bunker Hill Day (June 17). Amendment supporters said eliminating the two holidays would save money and increase work productivity. They argued it is unfair that only public employees in Suffolk County, including state workers, have these two days off from work. Amendment opponents said these two holidays commemorate important events in the city of Boston and argued it is unfair and cynical to attempt to attempt to eliminate them. They noted Evacuation Day celebrates a key victory for the American patriots when General George Washington and his troops drove the British out of Boston and Bunker Hill Day commemorates the important Battle of Bunker Hill. Absent from the Senate debate was the popular theory that declaring March 17 as Evacuation Day is just an excuse to provide a day off to celebrate St. Patrick's Day in Boston. Some say that Mayor Curley assigned an aide to find an historical American event that occurred on St. Patrick's Day and the aide came up with Evacuation Day. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment eliminating the two holidays in Suffolk County. A "Nay" vote is against eliminating them). Y ed to concur with the Senate vote.

Romney said he's worried that gay couples will suffer in the future when they move back to other states and try to enforce rights they don't really have. Of course, the gay advocates want as many cases as possible where couples try to obtain marriage rights in states that now prohibit them. After the governor asked Attorney General Reilly to collect and nullify the licenses that have been issued so far to out-of-state couples, activist Arline Isaacson summed up the prevailing gay viewpoint: "I just wish he would leave us alone."

In other notable actions during budget deliberations, senators:

• Went along with House language imposing a moratorium on new charter schools, meaning the governor will be presented with a moratorium in the Legislature's final budget – a moratorium he's considered certain to veto.

• Approved a plan to facilitate the purchase of medication from Canada, and allow the purchase of drugs in bulk with the aid of a pharmacy benefits manager.

• Set up a pilot program to test strict new patient-to-nurse ratios in 10 Massachusetts hospitals.

• Established a "smart growth" program similar to the one favored by the administration.

• Rejected, 21-17, a proposal to bring the Boston Municipal Court under the main district court system.

A significant sidebar of the week came when Minority Leader Brian Lees pulled his amendment to lower the state income tax rate to 5 percent. His action led fiscal conservatives such as Barbara Anderson, head of Citizens for Limited Taxation, to call for Lees' replacement as minority leader. Lees said tax relief proposals are still in play.

• Big new courthouse bond bill released — It totals $1.2 billion, about $700 million of that in new borrowing and the rest asking the administration to issue bonds previously authorized. Numerically, the impact of the bill would be to bring spending on courthouse renovation and construction to $100 million a year, up from the current $41 million annually, said Colleen Garry, D-Dracut, head of the Special House Commission on Court House Bond Authorization. Garry released a report describing horrible courthouse conditions. The House was expected to amend and approve the bill this week.

• Excellent news on jobs — The unemployment rate in Massachusetts dropped to its lowest level in years, to 4.8 percent, the Department of Unemployment Assistance announced Friday. It's the first time since early 2001 that the state has posted two straight months of job gains.

• House okays loophole, SBA legislation — Representatives gave their okay to legislation that would add $90 million to the revenue side of the state balance sheet. All three versions of the fiscal 2005 budget depend on the maneuvers, labeled the closure of tax loopholes by the governor and legislative leaders but deemed a tax hike by many in the business community. After six hours of debate, the House also approved a plan to eliminate a 420-project backlog in the school building assistance program. The plan earmarks a penny of the state sales tax, in increasing increments, to fund state assistance to projects. Under the plan, the backlog is projected to be erased in 3.5 years.

• Construction reform proposals win broad praise — Stakeholders who often work opposing sides of construction issues joined with each other and Senate leaders in praise of a plan for a major rewrite of state public construction laws. A special commission on public bidding and construction policy was able to resolve some of the long-standing obstacles to consensus on reform, officials at the press conference said. They predicted passage of the reform will clear the Legislature and receive the governor's signature this session. The plan combines new rules designed to hold contractors accountable for performance on projects with a loosening of some of the rigid procedures imposed after construction-fraud scandals of the 1970s.

• AG announces arrests in registry-fraud ring — Six employees of the Registry of Motor Vehicles were arrested on charges they sold fake drivers licenses, helped illegal aliens obtain licenses, and repaired bad driving records, Reilly announced. The scams at the Chinatown and Watertown branches had been going on for a "significant" period of time, he said.

• "Boy's rebellion six" comes to hill to push for redress — Six men labeled "morons" in the 1950s and confined to state schools held a media event to talk about the new book on their experiences, and press for an apology from the governor. The six men have presented Gov. Mitt Romney with a petition asking that he issue an Executive Order apologizing for their treatment, the lost years of their lives and perhaps compensating them for the manual labor they were forced to perform as youths. "We'll take a serious look at the petition," said Commissioner Gerald Morrissey of the Department of Mental Retardation following a brief meeting outside the governor's office.

• Poll shows support for election, not appointment, for senate — A new survey of Massachusetts residents by the McCormack Institute at UMass Boston found 57 percent of respondents believe Gov. Romney is doing a good or excellent job, though his favorable rate fell 5 percent from April. The same survey showed respondents feel that if a vacancy occurs in the US Senate because John Kerry is elected president, the spot should be filled with a special election. Current law would have Romney appoint Kerry's successor. UMass ran some hypothetical races for Senate: Romney against Democrats Edward Markey, Barney Frank, Michael Capuano, and Marty Meehan. All but Capuano beat Romney.

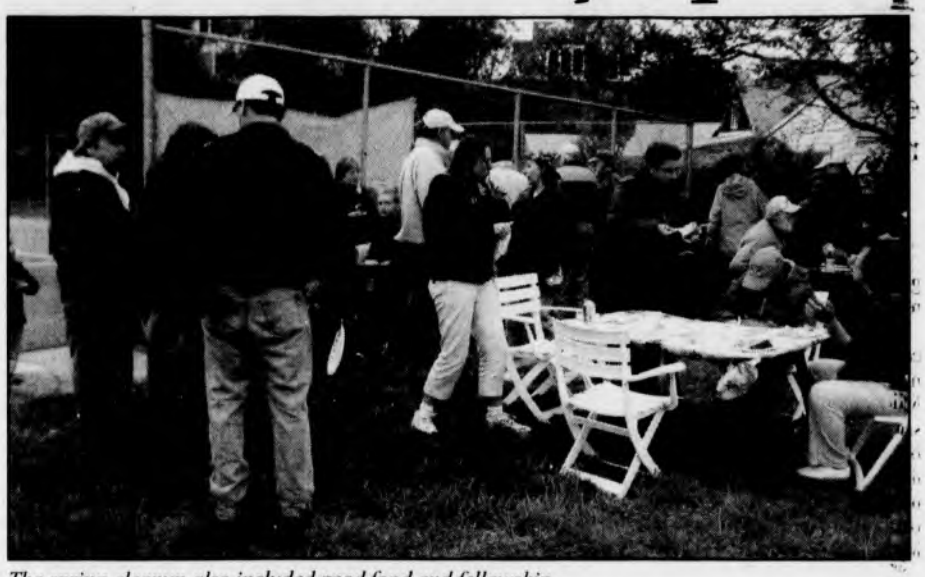
Spring cleanup demonstrates the best in community spirit



By C. Anne Murray
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

This year the Weir River Watershed Association (WRWA) joined the Straits Pond Watershed Association (SPWA) for a combined Spring Cleanup. This event was a great community service and show of civic pride from Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull residents.

Kicking off the day was a bird walk led by Audubon member, Sally Avery of Cohasset. A bird walk with Sally offers a wealth of information for beginners and experienced birders alike from how to focus your binoculars to the identification of numerous bird species by visual and vocal cues.

Then, despite overcast skies and strong winds, an enthusiastic crew of approximately 50 volunteers fanned out around the Weir River Estuary to divest the area of unsightly litter. A fleet of boats took to Straits Pond where storm over wash debris and litter was plucked from the water's edge and then ferried back to central point. The boats were offloaded by the land crew. The land crew was manning the dumpster from the Hull Sewer Department that was arranged for by Nancy Kane. By the end of the day the Hull dumpster was filled.

But Hull was not alone. In addition to the Hull Highway Department, the Highway Departments of Cohasset and Hingham also provided support. Janny Breton and Darrell Baker organized a group of volunteers from along the Hingham shoreline near West Corner. One of the volunteers from Hingham was overheard reporting they had hauled out of the estuary a shopping cart, several bicycles, and a motorcycle!

The spring cleanup also included good food and fellowship.

The volunteers were then rewarded with a barbecue and entertainment at the Gun Rock Playground. Special recognition should be given to the local businesses that supported the cleanup with donations for the barbecue:

Hilltop Marketplace, Braintree; Nona's Ice Cream, Hingham; Riddle's Supermart, Hull; Shaw's Supermarket, Cohasset; Stop & Shop Supermarket, Cohasset; and Tedeschi's, (West Corner) Hingham.

While the grill was fired up, an exhibition by the Jade Forest Kung Fu/ Tai Chi Performance Troupe led by Hull resident John Loupos was given. Accompanied by percussion instruments members of Jade Forest demonstrated Kung Fu, which is best described as an intricately choreographed series of martial arts moves. John demonstrated Tai Chi, which takes a more meditative, slow-motion form.

Events like this don't just happen. They take work and planning. So special acknowledgment should be given to Nancy Atwood of Cohasset, who arranged for all the barbeque donations and did the shopping. A tip of the hat goes to Larry Cowen of Hull for transporting and setting up the grill and tables. Kudos to Ann LaRosa and family members, who not only handled the cooking duties but also made several salads to feed the volunteers. Last but by no means least, thanks to Ky Stratoti of Hull for her donation of home-baked cookies, and to Merle Graham of Cohasset for her ever-popular brownies.

All in all the success of this event was thanks to the organizers, the volunteers, the town departments, and the area businesses for supporting the effort.

Browns volunteer in Pan-Mass. Challenge

Two residents from Cohasset, Joan and Merle Brown, will volunteer in the 25th annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge (PMC) on Aug. 7 and 8. They will be among the 1,900 PMC volunteers who will come together to help the nation's most successful bike-a-thon for charity raise money for cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund.

While the riders do the pedaling, PMC volunteers link together to form the chain that enables the event's wheels to turn.

Volunteers are the backbone of the PMC. Their year-round work enables the PMC to keep it's operating expenses low, enabling the organization to donate 93 cents of every dollar raised to the Jimmy Fund. The PMC's goal is to raise $17 million in 2004, bringing its 25-year Jimmy Fund contribution to nearly $120 million.

Volunteers are needed to help with setup, registration, luggage transport, medical supports, bike repairs, security, food service, clean up, and office support leading up to the event. Massage, occupational, and physical therapists are also needed to ease the aches and pains of thousands of tired cyclists as they ride up to 192 miles over two days. This year the volunteers are also given the option of riding on Aug. 8, the second day of the event, from Bourne to the Wellesley finish.

To become a volunteer, a virtual rider, or make a financial contribution to a rider from your town, visit www.pmc.org or call (800) WE-CYCLE. Checks can be made payable to PMC, 77 Fourth Ave., Needham, MA 02494.

Meeting behind closed doors is sometimes best for town

Selectmen holding executive sessions more often lately

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Having a "transparent" or open government is something most residents desire.

However, when issues arise that could affect the town's ability to negotiate, Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said it is necessary to hold executive sessions because it is in the best interest of the town. There has been an executive session during each of the previous three selectmen's meetings.

"There have been a number of different issues going on in town within the last several months," Sullivan said at last week's meeting, adding there could be many more discussions that will require going into executive session.

Under the Open Meeting Law, all meetings of governmental bodies are open to the public and anyone is allowed to attend, with the exception of executive sessions. Executive sessions may be held in private for a limited number of reasons, including matters pertaining to personnel, litigation, and contract negotiations. Every board member must vote individually in order to enter into executive session, and the board must state whether it will reconvene the open session at the end of the executive session.

"No one prefers to go in, usually it's much easier to do it publicly," Sullivan said.. He explained for any matters where public discussion would put the town in a position that could affect negotiations, that discussion needs to happen behind closed doors.

Sullivan addressed former Town Manager Mark Haddad's resignation and the need to enter into executive session to negotiate, which the board did that night. After reconvening in open session, the board issued a press release to let the public know the terms of the agreement.

"No one prefers to go in, usually it's much easier to do it publicly."
— Michael Sullivan, selectmen chairman

Sullivan also addressed the current Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination sexual harassment complaint, filed by former civilian dispatcher, Barbara DeWolfe. "Obviously the town takes these very seriously," he said, adding because again, when lawyers are involved, the discussion cannot take place in the open because it could compromise the town's position. Sullivan said the matter is being thoroughly looked into, and if there was something going on at the station that was inappropriate, the board will be working to make sure nothing like it happens again in the future.

The ongoing police matter regarding two officers who were place on paid administrative leave was also addressed, and Sullivan said he expects that within the next two to three weeks there will be some "pretty significant announcements" with regard to that issue, but again, without anything being finalized, it cannot be discussed in the open because that could affect the town's ability to negotiate.

Now that an agreement has been reached with Haddad, the board is looking to openly discuss the possibilities a new town manager could bring.Sullivan said Selectmen Fred Koed and Rob Spofford will be forming a subcommittee which will focus on ultimately bringing on a new Town Manager.

There will be a small committee to review the Town Manager Act assembled in the next three to four weeks, and the board will be actively seeking out information from residents in town. The Advisory Committee will also be providing its input. Shortly thereafter, the town will begin advertising the Town Manager position and forming a search committee which will give its feedback to Selectmen on the best candidate for the job.

Anyone interested in participating the process of finding a new Town Manager should please contact either Selectman Fred Koed or Selectman Rob Spofford who will be on the sub-committee, or any other member of the Board of Selectmen.

Summer Institute offers courses at student center

Go on line at www.ccscr.org for complete course descriptions and to sign up:

• Gulf River and Cohasset Harbor Field Study and Research Project (for students entering grades 10, 11, or 12)

This project focuses on collecting water quality data in two of our watershed's important bodies of water — the Gulf River and Cohasset Harbor.

• Micro Bacteriological Field Study (for students entering grades 10, 11 or 12)

There are several water bodies in Cohasset that seem to be attributable to leaking septic systems. Bacteriological Field Studies represents an opportunity to investigate any number of these water bodies. New technology in monitoring enterococci bacteria will be available this summer at CSCR, thanks to a grant from the Lighthouse Keepers Corporation.

• The Clean Water Act Phase II Research Project: (for students entering grades 9- 12)

The landmark Clean Water Act, Federal legislation requiring cities and towns to develop plans to protect all water bodies, now requires that the town of Cohasset implement phase II of the Stormwater Management Plan. This plan requires monitoring the water that is discharged into streams, rivers, ponds and harbors when snow melts or rain falls.

• Aquaculture: an MIT funded research project begun by Kelly Hurley. (for students entering grades 9- 12)

This is a project funded by MIT's GEMS program (Grants for Excellence in Marine Science.) CHS student, Kelly Hurley, initiated this project, applied for funding, and has executed this project as an independent project during her senior year.

• National Park Field Study (for students entering grades 9 or 10)

National Park Field Study, a course offered for the fifth summer, is an intensive, 5-day study and exploration of a national park. This year's field study class will travel to a National Park renowned for its history, geology, bio-diversity, and beauty, yet the students will not leave their own back yards!

• Messing about the North River (Grades: 7-8)

Did you know that the North River is the only scenic protected river in the state of Massachusetts? Or, that the upper sections of the river include one of the largest tidal freshwater marshes in the state? Come along and we'll investigate and explore the North River watershed through a week of hands-on field trips while learning how to kay.

• Green Landscaping and Sustainable buildings: This workshop will use 40 Parker Ave, the venerable "Hagerty Building" as a case study for landscaping property in an organic, sustainable manner. The building will also be a focus of study for energy, efficiency, sustainability, and green management / conversion. Participants will work on one specific, hands-on project with the instructor as well as walk away with plenty of resource materials for immediate use in their own lives.

• Webmaster Workshop: This workshop will train students, grades 7-12, to maintain the website developed by the Center for Student Coastal Research. Students attending this workshop will be given the opportunity to work as the Center's webmasters, thereby building valuable skills and expertise to add to their resumes.

All course work must be completed by the end of September, 2004, if students desire course credit.

Please contact any CMHS science instructor for more details, or call the Center for Student Coastal Research at 781-383-0129.

CHS laxmen bounce back from tough loss to Scituate to sew up tourney berth

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Excuse the overused cliché, but if we can't apply the "tale of two halves" label to Friday's 10-9 win by the Scituate High boys lacrosse team over Cohasset, we might never be able to use it again.

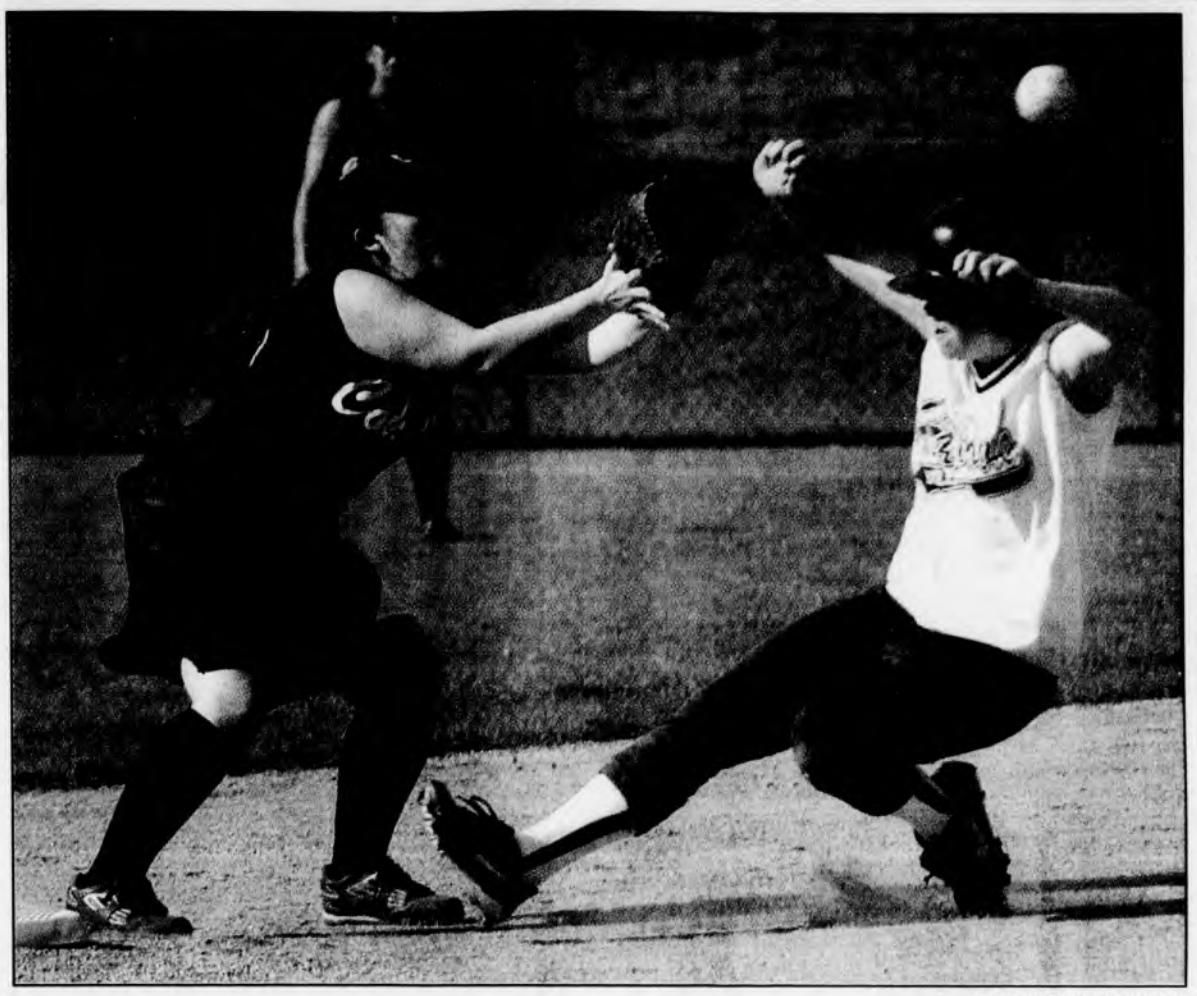
The Sailors rushed out to a 7-0 first half lead, but the host Skippers battled back in inspiring fashion, with only the clock able to stop them in the end.

"If we'd have played five more minutes, I have little doubt we'd have won this game," said Cohasset coach Stu Curran. "But an L is an L is an L. Scituate had some real giddy up to start and we didn't match it. That's why we lost."

The Scituate High boys lacrosse team, 24 hours removed from sewing up the first ever postseason berth in the four year history of the program and eager to avenge a loss three weeks earlier to this same Skippers team, came out determined to ruin Cohasset High's Lacrosse Spirit Night, and did.

A win would have clinched a postseason berth. The loss delayed that happening by 72 hours. The Skippers finally assured themselves of a .500 record, and the spot in the Div. 3 Eastern Mass playoffs that goes along with that achievement, with a 12-5 win over Nantucket on Monday.

Seedings and brackets for the state tourney will be released by the MIAA on Friday, with games expected to get underway in the middle of next week.



But first things first:

Scituate 10, Skippers 9

Scituate senior Ryan Evans scored right off the opening face-off of a nice pass from junior Ben Brigham, a mere 26 seconds in, and the Sailors just kept it rolling from there, stunning the capacity crowd to silence with a game opening 7-0 run. Evans and Brigham, to no surprise, would lead the charge, and each finished the game with four goals and three assists.

Brigham again found Evans for a quick one-timer past Cohasset goalie Nick Murphy 3:37 into the opening frame to make it a 2-0 game.

Five CHS tracksters qualify for Class D meet

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

A total of five Cohasset High tracksters will be competing in six events at this Saturday's State Class D meet at Weston High School (9:30 a.m. start).

Senior captain Jenn Buckley has qualified in the javelin (100'8") and both the mile (5:36) and 800-meter (2:24) race, but will compete in only the 800. She will also anchor the 4x800 relay team. This marks the third spring in a row Buckley has competed in multiple events at the Class meet.

"Jenn is just an exceptional athlete," said coach Al LaFountain. "She is going to leave a huge hole in so many areas when she graduates."

Ah, graduation...for the second year in a row, that landmark event may throw a serious complication into the Skippers postseason plans. CHS graduation is scheduled next Saturday, the same days as the All-State championships at Holyoke High School. Should Buckley qualify in any of her three events for All-States, she would have a difficult choice to make.

The same dilemma faced CHS tracksters Jared Krupczak and Ian Kidder last year, but they were able to do tow of their three events thanks to All-States being held at nearny Norwell High. That likely won't be an option for Buckley with this year's venue being so far away.

The decision would become even more difficult for Buckley if the 4x800 relay team qualified for All-States, something that seems quite possible given the quartet's times this season.

Anticipation grows for CHS baseball team

Straughn keeps playoff hopes alive with no-no against Holbrook

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

We were supposed to know by this time whether or not the Cohasset High baseball team will qualify for its first postseason berth in recent memory.

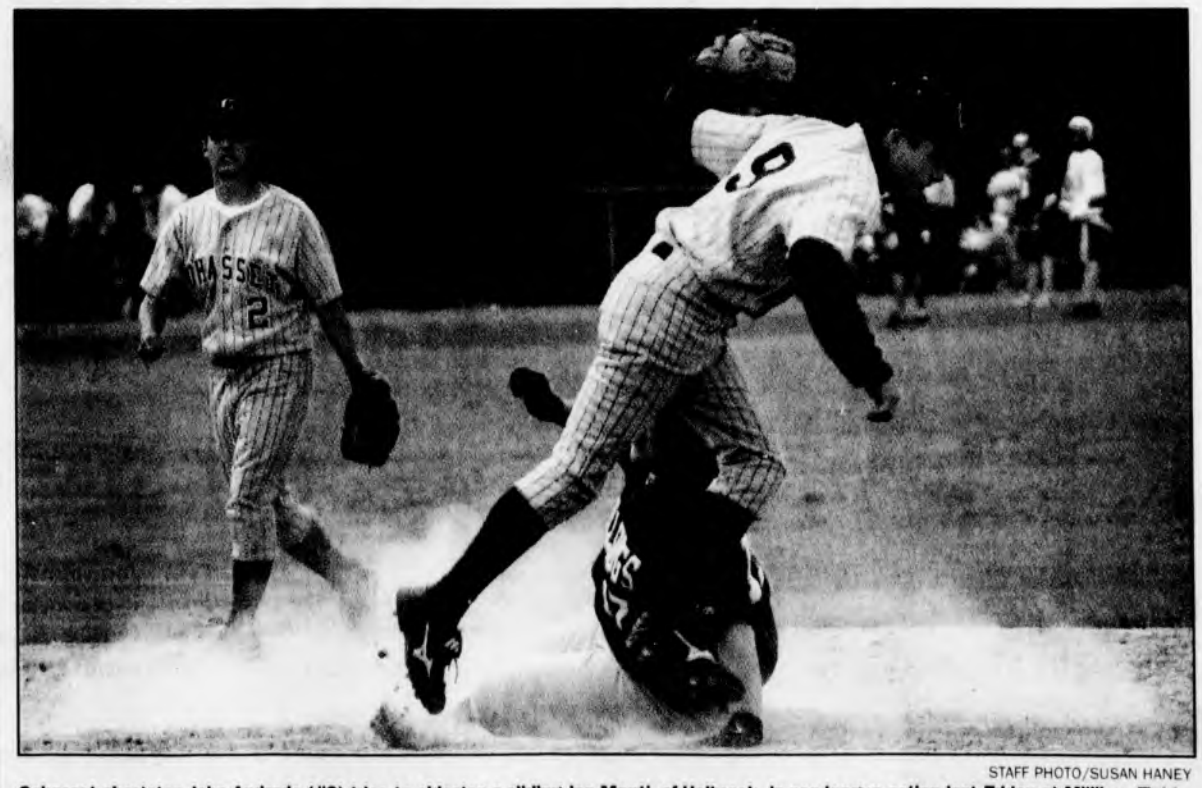
But that same indeterrable force that rendered the early part of the season a nightmare reared its head again earlier this week to stretch out the anticipation a bit more.

Thanks yet again, Ma Nature.

Monday rains rendered Cohasset's Milliken Field unusable on both Monday and Tuesday, forcing the postponement of games with Sacred Heart and Mashpee. Those games were scheduled at the time of this writing to be made up yesterday and Friday, respectively, with a second game against Sacred Heart slated for this afternoon on the road (3:30 p.m.).

The Skippers (6-9) must win all three of these games in order to qualify for the state Div. 3 tourney.

Three games in three days throws a big monkey wrench into Coach Al Gallotta' pitching plans. He had hoped to go with staff ace Ted Straughn on both Monday and Friday, and solid number two man Mike Dooley in between. That plan has, quite literally, been washed out now.



The plan right now calls for Straughn to go on Friday against SSL rival Mashpee, perceived as a better hitting team than Sacred Heart, for Dooley to go on Wednesday and for sophomore Chris Bryan to start the game at Sacred Heart on Thursday.

Of course, Wednesday's rains may well force yet another rethinking of that plan.

"I've juggled this thing around so many times now I'm getting dizzy," said Gallotta. "I've got contingencies for what happens if we go Sunday or even Monday for a makeup. It's crazy."

All records must by submitted to the MIAA by Monday evening, so the last game can be

Underclassmen played key role in lady laxers drive to tourney berth

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

There were some groans and even a few sneers when Cohasset High girls lacrosse coach Torin Sweeney started practicing his varsity and junior varsity teams together last year.

If he hadn't stuck to his guns, though, Coach Sweeney feels pretty certain his team would be on the outside looking in rather than preparing for a game in the state tourney next week.

"We had so many injuries to key veterans this year, I think we would have been in huge trouble if those sophomores and freshmen weren't as ready as they were to step in and contribute right away," said Sweeney. "It took those girls a while to get used to the greater skill level and speed of the game at the varsity level, but their baptism under fire came in practices."

Four sophomores, in particular, who have made the jump from JV to varsity contributors since the season got underway are Cassie Rosano, Mia Lieb Lappen, Charlotte Sida and Marissa Evans. Then there are the three freshmen-- Lindsay Durkin, Caren Garber and Colleen Richardson—whose development has been sped along via the varsity-JV practice mixers. They too have seen plenty of varsity minutes of late.

With injuries to key players such as Jesse Guild, Lisa Spirito and Lauren Rizzoti near the middle of the season, few would have been surprised if the Skippers fell out of the running for their third straight postseason berth. Instead, they went 7-2-1 over the final 10 games to finish with a 9-8-1 record.

"And the freshmen and sophomores were right in the middle of it all," said Sweeney, who has now directed his team to postseason play in all three years at the helm.

In fact, Durkin, Carber and fellow freshmen Kara Wilcox and Keilegh Swain each scored two

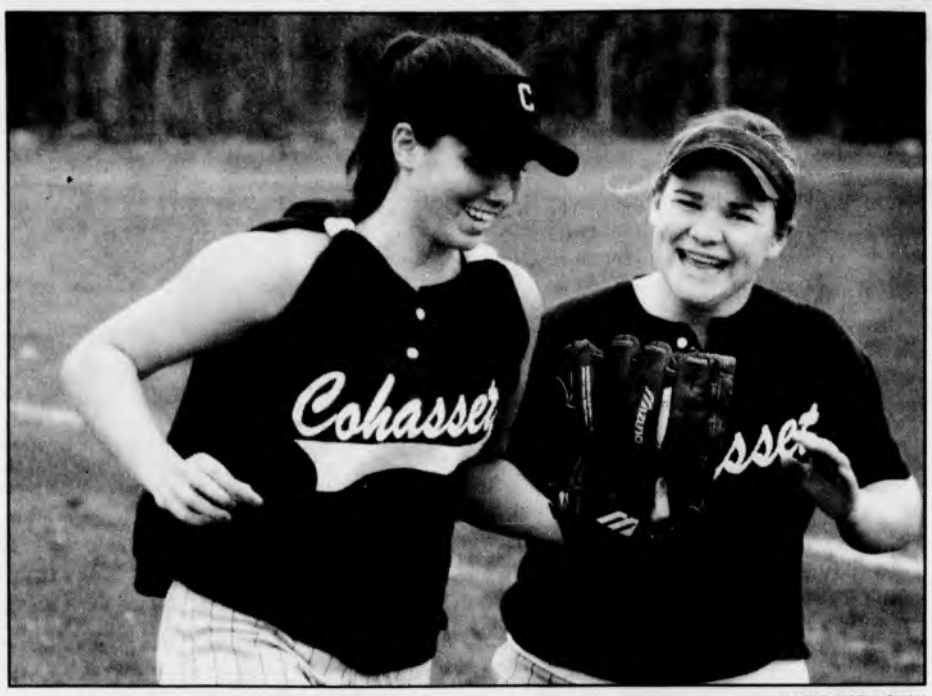
Softball team falls short of postseason goal

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT



May 18 marks the day the Cohasset High softball team hit bottom at Freedom Field. The good news? The players know why they landed there and can rebound next season.

With the exception of two singles, compliments of Erin Liddell and Rachael Doyle, Cohasset went scoreless for the game against Sacred Heart.

The visiting team got down to business early, racking up five devastating runs in the top of the first inning. Later in the game, Sacred Heart added insult to injury when they scraped together two more runs resulting in a painful 7-0 Cohasset loss.

No one doubts where the problem lurks, a bad case of quiet bats. It cost the team this game as well as others in the past. So we know where the players will concentrate their efforts in the future. Having a new batting cage will certainly help.

"Sacred Heart sports a high-quality game," stated Coach Deb Bostwick. "Though our bats were tired, our defense resembled an experienced varsity team."

Two days later the Skippers hosted the last home game for the year against the Holbrook Bulldogs. Once again, the Skippers fell early, letting the Bulldogs hammer away with three runs in the top of the first. Unlike the prior game, the Skippers managed to strike back against Holbrook.

The bats of Erin Liddell and Caitlin Gontarz ignited in the second inning producing two Cohasset runs.

In the top of the third, the Bulldogs bit back with three more runs making the score 6-2. Then, in the top of the fifth, the Holbrook girls added another run to widen their already commanding lead to 7-2.

For the Skippers, their finest hour came in the bottom of the fifth, resulting in a major league comeback by the Skippers. Successive hits from Melissa Crowley-Buck, Rachael Doyle, Casey Anderson, Danielle Pinkus, and Katie James led to a tie score of 7-7.

Then came a frustrating meltdown in the top of the last inning. With one out, Holbrook scored two runs to make the score, 9-7. Cohasset failed to answer in the bottom half of the inning and the game ended.

Senior Caitlin Gontarz credited the Skippers aggressive base running and improved hitting for making this game so close. This was Gontarz's last home game in her high school career. Next year, the third baseman will play intramural softball at UNH.

Despite the season record of 5-12, the Skippers were honored by the selection of Danielle Pinkus and Casey Anderson to the SSL MVP game scheduled for May 30th. Rachel Doyle received honorable mention. SSL officials also recognized the Skipper team with a second place Sportsmanship Award.

goals apiece in the Skippers tourney clinching 18-1 win over Hanover on Monday, not that there was a lot of drama involved in this one.

Ditto for the 15-3 win at home over Nantucket on Tuesday to close out the regular season.

Junior Lauren Rizzotti has paced the offense in the two lopsided wins, scoring a combined seven goals.

Senior Meg Marr and junior MacKenzie Holway have also been lauded for their improved play at the offensive end of late. Of course, everyone has seemed to benefit from team leading scorer Nicole Turgiss' willingness to settle into a playmaker's role as the Hanover and Nantucket coaches came to town with defensive game plans centered around shutting her down.

Speaking of defense, Sweeney also made a point of lauding his cast of hard workers who rarely grab the headlines of postgame glory.

Senior captain Ashley Faber is the recognized quarterback at both ends of the field, but senior Christen Reardon is the real anchor in back, according to Sweeney. Juniors Molly Kirk and Danielle Hajjar have also been stalwarts, noted the coach, and he figures the whole unit will only get stronger when junior Miranda Lanzilotti returns from injury for the postseason. Of course, Sweeney was quick to point out how nice a job sophomores Evans and Rosano did filling in during Lanzilotti's absence.

The state tourney seedings and brackets are expected to be released by the MIAA on Tuesday, with games to get underway on Tuesday.

Buckley teamed with juniors Mary Silvia and Nicole Whitney and sophomore Lisa Musto to take first place in the event at this past Saturday's South Shore Principal's Meet at Norwell High, combining to cover the 2-miles in a brisk 10:19.54.

Coach Lafountain insists he'd understand any choice Buckley made.

"It just stinks that the kids have to choose," said the sixth year coach. "Graduation is a very important day."

Two of the other three relay team members have also qualified to compete in solo events. Silvia will run the 800 (2:24) against Buckley and Whitney in the 200 (27.3).

Lafountain figures both Silvia and Buckley have very good shots at finishing top four in the 800 and qualifying for All-States.

Junior Lindsay Kennedy will join her teammates in Weston, having qualified in the 100-meter dash with a season best time of 13.3 seconds.

Unfortunately, no member of the boys team qualified for States.

CHS tracksters had a chance to tune up or simply compete one last time at Saturday's South Shore Principal's Meet, held at Norwell High. Over 1,100 athletes from 26 schools competed in the annual event.

South Shore Principals
GIRLS

As mentioned, the 4x8 squad ran away from all other comers for an impressive win in 10:19.54, finishing comfortably ahead of Notre Dame (10:21.98) and Brockton (10:28.17).

Silvia and Buckley conducted quite a battle in the 800, sprinting to the finish line with Carver freshman Ali Spicer, the three of them crossing with just six-100ths of a second separating them.

Silvia took third (2:24.52), Spicer fourth (2:24.56) and Buckley fifth (2:24.58).

Whitney also impressed in the 200, improving on her time from both the qualifier and semifinals heat to take a sixth place (28.47)

Kennedy's 10th place finish (14.17) in a 100 field stacked with some serious Class A talent was also pretty noteworthy.

BOYS

Senior Eric Belz closed out his fine high school track career with a strong 10th place finish in the 400 (55.57). Belz also ran a leg in the 4x400 relay that took 12th place (3:52.93).

Senior Drew Musto likewise called it a career with his respectable 27th place finish in the discus (95-03)

Junior Pete Bunstein opened some eyes with his 11th place finish in the 200 (26.32), as did freshman Brent Daley with his sold 22nd (26.07).

In the 800, junior Adam Haracz placed 21st (2:16.43) and sophomore Mark Bouchard 32nd (2:24.71).

GIRLS YOUTH LAX REPORT

Girls youth laxers unbeaten in weekend action

As the weather has warmed up, so has the Cohasset girls youth lacrosse program, which went unbeaten for the third straight weekend in May 23 action against Hingham.

At the 15-and-Under level (grades 7-8) Gabriella Flibotte's second goal of the game - the 100th goal of her girls youth lacrosse career - highlighted a dominating performance. Flibotte finished with three goals on the day, as did Caitlin Mahoney, as Cohasset raced to an 8-0 half-time lead and cruised to a 13-4 victory.

Katie Gaumer added two goals and an assist. Maura Barnes, Madeline Leahy Rebecca Evans, Lesen Haracz and Grace Clougherty added single scores; for Haracz and Clougherty, the scores were their first, while defender Evans dented the net for the second consecutive week.

Paige Strecker and McKenna Teague added assists and Thomson Jaffe made two outstanding saves and controlled loose balls and errant shots to help keep Hingham at bay.

At the 13-U (grades 5 and 6) level, the day started with Cohasset White playing to a 7-7 tie with Hingham's Black team.

Cohasset controlled the action most of the afternoon, but routinely clanged its shots off Hingham's goalie or the goalposts. Lindsay Allard stopped a two-goal Hingham run and Paige Smith converted a direct-free position, but sloppy defensive play led to a 4-2 half-time deficit.

The home team fell further behind to start the second half, before a three-goal run tied the score.

Amy Meikleham converted a direct-free position, Isabelle Franklin shook off a first-half injury to close the gap further and Allard netted yet another penalty shot to knot the score.

Hingham surged ahead again and might have gotten an insurmountable lead had it not been for two high-quality saves from Thomson Jaffe. Franklin then took care of the offense with a direct-free position and a score from inside to knot the game. Cohasset squandered chances to get a lead with under two minutes left, before finally getting the ball in its offensive zone as time was nearly out. Katie Hillman's dash to the goal led to a shot that went wide by inches as time expired.

The Cohasset Blue team started sluggishly against Hingham's White team in the game's final day, trading goals through most of the first half. Whitney Jaffe scored twice - once on a direct free position - and had a third goal called back, while Hannah Burgess, Maddy Altholtz and Lindsay Allard notched single markers as Cohasset got to an uneasy 5-3 lead at half-time.

After Hingham opened the second half scoring, Cohasset turned on its offense and the game quickly turned into a romp. Olivia Sullivan, Bridget Cahill and two goals from Isabelle Franklin - the second hitting the crossbar, then bouncing into the net off the back of the goalie's head - broke the contest open. Allard scored again and Chelsea Silvia finished a direct-free position and then fired home a loose ball as the home team rolled to a 12-5 win.

Olivia Murphy and Whitney Jaffe split the game in net, combining for two saves in the win

Cohasset's Blue and White teams are scheduled to play a combined game on Wednesday before taking Memorial Day weekend off.

Cohasset White is now 3-0-2 on the year, while Cohasset Blue is 4-1 and the Cohasset 15-U team is 5-0-1

Three local girls make lax league all-star team

Lindsay Allard, Isabelle Franklin and Amy Meikleham all made the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse league 13-U all-star team that is scheduled to play at the 2004 National US Lacrosse Festival the weekend of June 18-20 in Downingtown, Pa.

The three teammates making the squad means that Cohasset has more players on the all-star team than any other community.

Allard and Franklin will play midfield for the Mass Bay team, while Meikleham is likely to play both defense and midfield.

"The real honor is in being nominated for the team, because you never expect to have everyone you send to tryouts make the team," says Chuck Jaffe, who coaches the three girls on their Cohasset teams. "But to have all three make the team when so many players were cut and so many towns struggle to get one player on the roster says a lot for our program.

"We have several other girls who might have had a good chance if the league had allowed us to send more athletes."

Franklin and Meikleham have both been playing in the girls lacrosse program for three seasons, having started as fourth graders. Allard is in her second year with the Cohasset team.

At the 15-U level, defender Rebecca Evans and attacker/midfielder McKenna Teague were nominated for the all-star tryouts but did not make the squad.

"The competition at the 15-U level was particularly tough," says Jaffe, "but it must have been spectacular for our girls to have missed out. Both Rebecca and McKenna are quality players who a coach can build around. They must be sending one super team to the national festival if these girls missed out."

Mets

Well, the moon and stars aligned perfectly for the Mets on a beautiful early summer evening on Barnes field. The mighty Mets faced off against the explosive Red Sox in what can only be called a nail biter. Through 5 innings it was a pitching and defensive battle with the Red Sox on top 1-0. Drew Cobin, in inning after inning, faced the mighty bats of the Sox and combined with the tough defense, kept the Sox to one run. Taylor Golz caught a pop up at 3rd to make an out. Gabe Seksay made the catch of the game with a diving catch down the dugout fence at first for a big out.

Robert Jones then fielded a line drive and flipped it to first for the final out.

Later on in the 4th inning McCunney grabbed a line drive and turned the double play at 1st to end the inning and a potential Sox rally. In the final inning for the Mets, and with runners in scoring position at 1st and 3rd, the Mets executed a 2-6-2 run down on the advancing runner to prevent the Sox from scoring another run. McCunney then struck out the next batter to end the Sox rally. The home team Mets then got to the plate. A Robbie McCunney homerun tied the game up. Drew Cobin then singled, Tom Condon, who played terrifically behind the plate all night, singled, and Gabe Seksay singled to load the bases. With two outs, Colin Tarpey, who successfully bunted earlier in the game, with 2 strikes on him, and the composure of a veteran, swung the bat for a single up the first base line to drive in the winning run.

Later in the week the Mets came out on top in a matchup with the Pirates. Robert Jones started the game on the mound for the Mets and pitched 4 strong innings, retiring 7. McCunney started the scoring for the Mets with a double in the first inning, and then Tom Condon drove in McCunney with a strong single. The Mets won 7-4. Later in the week the Mets faced the A's. A fourth inning rally by the A's couldn't be matched. Highlights include back to back home runs by Robbie McCunney and rookie Drew Cobin in the 5th inning. Taylor Golz was solid at the plate for the Mets wth two base hits.

Dodgers

It was a game of big hits and big plays as the Dodgers faced off against the Cardinals on Chase field. Veteran Chris "Brownie" Brown, who received a game ball, was instrumental in not one, but two double plays. In the first DP, Brownie caught a line drive at short and then stepped on second. In the second DP, it was a classic; from Justin Yeager at pitcher to Brownie to Jake Wheelright to end a Cardinal threat. Justin Yeager, also a veteran,pitched like a pro for the mighty blue. Sharing in the pitching duties wereDean McNary and Jay Salerno. Pat McCormick had two hits on the night.

Pat's second hit came at the top of the 6th inning, where he beat out the throw to get on base. Justin Yeager tripled to get the Dodgers on the scoreboard early. Jay Salerno and Chris Brown also provided big hits in this game. Despite all the fantastic action, the Dodgers fell short to the Cards. Later in the week, the Big Blue faced the Red Sox. Red Sox pitching ace, Jordan Berry was red hot through five innings, keeping the Dodgers from scoring. Conner Queenan and Terry MacCormick played solidly for the Dodgers in the outfield. Queenan also started a sixth inning rally that led to four runs for the home team Dodgers, but the Dodgers fell short to the Sox. Chris Brown, Jay Salerno and Dean McNary shared pitching duties.

Red Sox

Cool, calm and collected. There is no other way to describe the pitching performance that Jordan Berry treated the fans to in an incredible game versus the Mets. On a beautiful May evening, Jordan Berry took to the pitchers mound and faced batter after batter, holding the Mets scoreless through five innings. Jordan had great support in the field from his teammates.

In the bottom of the 1st, Jack Carrier made a great back handed catch at third and made the throw to 1st base for the out. Jeff Cavanaro fielded a tough hit at short stop and made the throw to Jodi Rosano for the out at 2nd. Pete McKenna at first base, came up with two consecutive outs to end a potential Mets rally in the 4th inning. With the bases loaded in the 6th inning, Terrence Durkin made a heads up play to home to tag the advancing runner out, preventing the go-ahead run from scoring. At the plate, the Red Sox were strong. It appeared that in the 1st inning, an RBI on a Jordan Berry hit was all the Red Sox might need to win. In the 4th inning, Jack Carrier had a strong single to get on base, however the Sox couldn't finish the inning with a run.

Jodi Rosano then doubled in the next inning, but again the Sox couldn't score. It looked as if the Sox were going to pad their lead in the top of the sixth inning. Jordan Berry doubled. Jack Carrier walked and then Jordan stole third. Only a heads up play by the Mets prevented the Sox from scoring. The final outcome, Red Sox 1, Mets 2. It doesn't get much better than that. Although they lost the next game to the Rangers, the Sox had some good action from veterans Jeff Cavanaro with a stand up double, Jack Carrier with a big base hit and some solid fielding from Pete McKenna at second base. The week ended for the Sox with a solid win over the Dodgers.

Jordan Berry, once again was stellar on the mound, holding the Dodgers hitless through five innings. Luke Ernst was solid at the plate for the Sox and began a strong scoring rally. Rookie Kyle Livingstone closed out the game for the Sox on the mound. A ground ball to Sam Richardson at shortstop to make the out at second ended the game with a win for the Sox.

Pirates

The Pirates squared up against the Mets this week. Robbie Hill took the mound for the black & gold, and despite an early rally by the Mets, kept his composure. Thomas Buckley started a fifth inning rally with a stand up triple, as the Pirates were down 7-2 in the bottom of the fifth inning.

Chris Walsh then singled, beating the throw to first, to drive in Buckley. Austin Meyer singled and then Chris Hayes laid down a perfect bunt to load up the bases. On a wild pitch, Meyer went to steal home, only to be thrown out by the alert Mets pitcher. The same fate was in store for Hayes, and the Pirates were unable to score any more runs. In the 6th inning, it looked as if the Pirates were again rallying back as Derek Youngman had a stand up double to start a rally, with two outs. The next batter grounded out and the Pirates came up short against the Mets. Tom Buckley closed out the game on the mound for the Pirates.

Rangers

The Rangers faced the Red Sox on Chase field this week. Eamon Davis pitched five solid innings for the Rangers in their 9-5 win over the Sox.

Graham Stevenson tripled in the first inning to start the scoring. The Rangers sealed the game with a scoring streak in the fifth inning. John Giuggio led off with a walk. Dean Driscoll then walked. Giuggio manufactured a run by stealing his way home. Jeff Charles had a strong hit to left field for a double and an RBI. Eric Wasel bunted, allowing Jeff Charles to steal home. Chase Stebbins closed out the game for the Rangers, shutting down the Sox in the final inning. Sunday night saw the Rangers matchup against the A's. Veteran Eamon Davis pitched very well for the Rangers through all six innings.

The Rangers held the A's scoreless through five innings by playing smart, aggressive defense. Jamie Faber was a pivotal player in center field, robbing two A's from getting big hits. John Giuggio was a threat at bat, driving a ball deep into right field for a triple. Dean Driscoll had a huge triple also to right field. Chase Stebbins then had a single that drove in Driscoll to go up 1-0. The scored stayed there until the bottom of the 6th when the A's manufactured enough runs to earn the win.

Athletics

The A's faced the Mets on a cold and dreary day on Chase Field. The visiting A's scored early, when a Brendan Doonan triple knocked in the first run. The first inning ended in a 2-2 lock up. Doonan pitched all six innings for the A's showing quiet strength and composure. Twice during the game, the Mets loaded the bases and Doonan ended the scoring threat by striking out the Mets batters. Big plays from the A's included that led to scoring were a double by Doonan, a single by Johnny Maher and a double by Jack Murphy. Maher eventually stole his way home to get the first go ahead run. Murphy also stole home. Later in the game, Jack Murphy had a stand up triple and he scored when EJ Culhane hit a nice double. The A's came out on top 10-4. Mike Monaco was solid behind the plate catching for Doonan. In the 4th inning Monaco caught a high pop up foul to end the inning and potential Mets scoring threat. Sunday night the A's faced the Rangers. Johnny Maher took the mound for the A's and pitched solidly through six innings, striking out seven and assisting on four outs at first.

The Rangers held the A's scoreless through five innings, with a 1-0 lead. "It's a tight game, a very tight game" Coach Doonan was heard saying.

In the bottom of the sixth, Thomas Barrett walked. A pinch runner, Chase Murphy, was put on first and stole second. EJ Culhane walked and then Jack Murphy hit a long single driving in the tying run. With two men on, Jake Kissick hit a long single to center to drive in the winning run for the A's.

Mike Monaco played solidly at first base, catching a high pop up foul to end a scoring threat. EJ Culhane, at third base, caught a line drive to end the 5th inning.

Cardinals

The Cardinals faced the Dodgers early in the week. It was an exciting game with the Dodgers coming out on top 10-5. Sebastien Braga broke the game open for the Dodgers with a three RBI triple. Todd Emanuello had two hits as did teammate John Kearney. Ben Campbell pitched three strong innings, allowing one run and striking out four. Emmanuello pitched two innings, and closer, Kevin O'Connell finished out the game for the Cards. Dan Sullivan and Alex Kinneally shared right field duties and shored up the defense for the Cards. Kinneally and Patrick Kearney had some timely hits. In a 9-1 win over the Red Sox, John Kearney struck out seven in the first three innings. Ben Campbell closed out the the pitching duties with another five K's. Brendan Horigan led the hitting attack with a booming triple while Alex Harper, John Collings and Todd Emmanuello chipped in with big hits.

The Redbirds definitely looked poised for a second half run as all players are contributing in the Cardinal's success.

Homerun Watch

Every little leaguers dream is to "hit one out"..So far this season we have seen some pretty awesome home runs. Mets veteran Robbie McCunney has seven, and teammates Max MacCleave and Drew Cobin (who is a rookie) each have one. Cardinals brothers John and Patrick Kearney have each knocked one beyond the fence. Patrick is a rookie ten year old, so hitting one out is pretty special. Jordan Berry for the Sox has four homeruns, with more on the horizon.

Morin guts it out

Freshman tennis player leads the way in consecutive wins

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Blain Morin is going to have a tough time matching this past week's worth of excitement on the tennis court.

Fortunately, he's got three plus more season ahead of him in which to try.

The CHS freshman pulled the Skippers fat out of the fire for the second time in 48 hours, on Thursday, as he hung on to win a three set thriller that lifted the Skippers to a 3-2 over Cape Cod Academy.

It was deja vu all over again, as Thursday's first four matches followed the same script they did in Tuesday's 3-2 win over Hingham: with wins coming from the first and second singles spots, but losses in both doubles matches.

This left it all to the 15-year old Morin.

"That was a lot of pressure on a young kid, but he's one of those kids that just seems to play better when the pressure is on," appraised Cohasset coach Kent Parrot. "He bares down and concentrates and plays it one point at a time rather than getting caught up in everything else."

Morin won the first set over his CCA counterpart, 6-4, but then lost the second, 3-6. It was early in the deciding third set he learned his match would determine the team's fate, with splits in the other four individual matches.

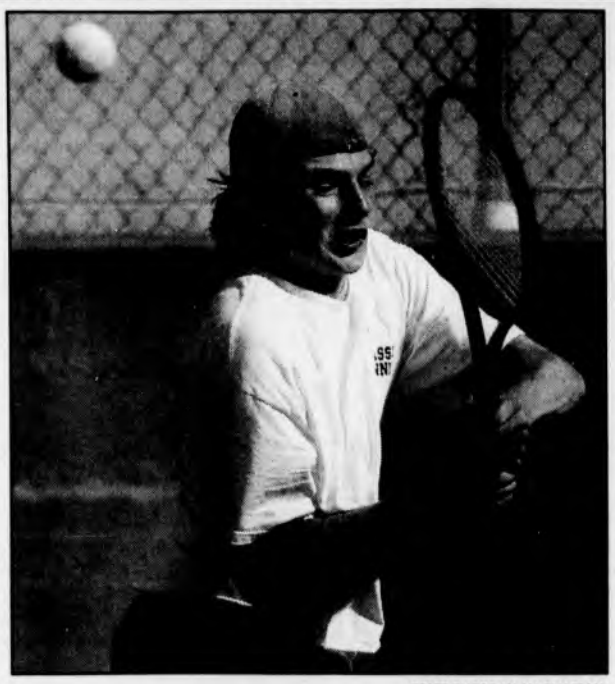
He went on to win virtually every other "big point" the rest of the way, pulling out the 6-2 win.

"Blain is definitely out M.I.P.," said Parrot, "our Most Improved Player. He's made tremendous strides this year, and that mental toughness makes him a nice fit for singles play."

Freshman Kyle DiTola also came up big in this match, as he moved up from second doubles to second singles, essentially replacing number one singles player Dan Sullivan, to pull out a win.

In Sullivan's absence, sophomore Nils Sceery moved up to the number one spot, and he too won easily.

Last week also featured a big 4-1 win over Harwich on the road that avenged an earlier season 4-1 loss.



Sceery and Morin cruised to wins in straight sets, as they did in the first go round, but the difference this time was both Cohasset doubles teams—Chris Pescatore and Andrew Wise at number one and DiTola and Chris Donze at number two--avenging their personal losses.

Sullivan gave Harwich top singles star Craig Druschella a much tougher go than he did the first time around before falling in straight sets, 7-5, 6-4.

"That was a big win for us, mentally, heading into tourney," said Parrot. "We never should have lost to them the first time. We showed a lot of improvement and toughness coming back to prove that on Harwich's home court."

The Skippers headed into action this week with a 10-6 record, hoping to finish up strong in matches against Mashpee on Tuesday and Hingham yesterday.

Every win at this point could mean a step or two up in the seedings and further distancing from the top teams in the Div. 2 Eastern Mass Tourney, the seedings and brackets for which will be released by the MIAA this coming Wednesday, with matches expected to begin the next day.

COhasset first singles player Dan Sullivan played hung extremely tough with Harwich senior star Craig Druschella before falling, 7-5, 6-4.

Stone put to the test

CHS tennis ace falls to Elder-Bush in finals

By Mark Goodman
CORRESPONDENT

Those who braved the unseasonably cool weather on Saturday and made it to the Norwell High School athletic complex saw high school tennis at its best.

In the south sectional final of the MIAA girls individual tournament, Cohasset's Liz Stone squared off against Brookline star and former state champion Katrina Elder-Bush. Stone put forth a great effort, but Elder-Bush, who will play for Rutgers next year on an athletic scholarship, was just a notch or two better, taking a 6-4, 6-2 victory.

For a while, it looked as though Stone might be able to earn her first victory against an athlete she has played before in the sectionals and in USTA tournaments. After losing the first two games, the Cohasset junior took the next four, hitting some strong winners and forcing Elder-Bush to her backhand, not the strongest part of her game.

Down 2-4, however, the Brookline senior took her game to another level, showing great baseline coverage and controlling the match with some blistering serves. Elder-Bush wound up taking the next four games for the first set.

After a string of broken serves to begin the second set, Stone was serving, down 2-3. That is as close as it got, however, as Elder-Bush started mixing some great lob shots into her game.

Stone said her own game can only get better after playing a tough match.

"Mentally, it's very strengthening to play an opponent like that," she said. "You don't really learn very much playing easy matches. Matches like today's help you realize your weaknesses."

In full swing

Girls tennis team looks to carry 14-match win streak into postseason

By Mark Goodman
CORRESPONDENT

Just about the only thing that has stopped the Cohasset girls tennis team lately was a small patch of rain and hail.

An important match with Hingham to prepare for the state tournament was postponed from Monday to yesterday. Should they win, the girls would be on a 14-match winning streak going into the postseason.

That streak made it to 13 last Wednesday with a 5-0 win over Mashpee. Cohasset played almost all reserves, and still came away with a relatively easy victory.

"They all filled in great," said coach Kathy Prevett. "We won 5-0 and the only regular starter we played was Chelsea Grossman. That's how deep our team is."

Playing number one singles, Grossman cruised to a 6-2, 6-2 win. The other four wins were also in straight sets, but not quite so easy.

"Chelsea came over during a break in her match and asked if we were keeping score wrong, because the scores had us down 0-2 in all the other matches," Prevett said. "They were right, though. We were down 0-2 in all four."

Those deficits did not last for very long. Junior Emilie Shea, playing number two singles, actually went down 0-3 before winning 12 of the next 14 games to take a 6-3, 6-2 victory. Emma Grinnell also got off to a slow start and need a tiebreaker in her first set, but turned it on to take the second set 6-1.

Capping off the win for Cohasset were two doubles teams that had not played together before. Sophomores Susan Curry and Katie Bolger ran off 12 games in a row in their win at number one doubles. Curry, who has played some singles earlier in the year, was originally scheduled to play number one singles in this match, but a sprained ankle limited her to doubles action.

"They all filled in great. We won 5-0 and the only regular starter we played was Chelsea Grossman. That's how deep our team is."

Cohasset girls assistant coach Kathy Prevett

She played well through the injury, and with some help from her teammate, came through with a win.

"Katie played great at net," Prevett said. "She hasn't played doubles before, and she did a great job."

Another team of sophomores, Katherine Whoriskey and Devin Smith, took second doubles, 6-4, 6-4. Prevett said it was encouraging to see younger players step in and win some matches.

"These are the girls we're targeting to play next year," she said. "We're going to be losing four seniors."

The veterans figured to be back in action yesterday, however, and should be one of the top seeds when they begin defending their state title next week.

Anticipation grows for CHS baseball team played no later than Monday afternoon.

The MIAA will announce seeding and brackets for the state tourney on Tuesday, with games expected to get underway a week from today.

The Skippers kept their floundering hopes alive with back-to-back wins last week over Holbrook in non-league play.

Skippers 9, Holbrook 2

Straughn threw his first career no-hitter in go round number one with the Bulldogs on the road Thursday, striking out 14 while walking six.

"Ted has a very good fastball and he mixed in his curve very effectively," said Gallotta. "He was throwing either pitch on any count, and that kept the Holbrook hitters off balance. It was a very strong performance."

Senior shortstop John Andrade homered in the first to start the Skippers out on the right foot.

The host Bulldogs kept it close, reaching Straughn for a couple of unearned runs in the third inning, a couple of walks and errors resulting in that brief uprising.

The Skippers defense settle down from there, and made the plays in the field the rest of the way. In fact, Gallotta noted that, other than that inning, he has been "very pleased with the defense of late."

The Skippers offense soon opened the game up. Junior Matt Casey paced an 11-hit attack with a double, a triple and two rbi. Junior catcher Louis Blanco and senior centerfielder Tim Anton also contributed a pair of hits.

Skippers 9, Holbrook 1

Back at home 24 hours later, the bats continued to produce, as the Skippers gave Dooley all the support he would need early on. The senior went six strong innings on the mound, striking out nine while scattering just three hits. Bryan went the final inning on the mound to get a little work in.

Casey had a big rbi double. Junior Jon Downey had a double and executed a suicide squeeze bunt to perfection, scoring Jeff Barrett.

That was it for first quarter scoring, though, as both defenses began digging in.

Brigham scored twice inside the first 3:30 of the second quarter, though, to extend the Sailors lead to 4-0. The gifted junior athlete buried his first 58 seconds in, with Evans picking up the assist to return the earlier favors. Junior longstickman Bernie Carroll set up the game's fourth goal by picking up a ground ball in the defensive end and working it quickly up field, enabling Brigham to break in and bury it before the Cohasset defense aligned.

Evans made it 5-0 just 27 seconds later, as he finished on a pass from Brian Watson.

Sophomore Sam Brigham became the third Sailor to get on the board when he buried a cross field pass from Evans with 6:18 to go in the half, and senior Andrew Elsmore increased the lead to 7-0 when he converted on a feed from fellow middie Colby Hawkins exactly 1:01 later.

Sophomore Aidan Buick finally put Cohasset on the scoreboard when he finished on a pretty solo effort 3:48 before half, and senior Mike Rasmussen sent the Skippers into break with a bit of momentum when he netted another unassisted goal just 21 seconds before the break.

Buick kept things going for the Skippers after the break, finishing on a pass from Jake Previte 3:37 in, and team leading scorer Previte would bet the first of his two goals three minutes after that.

However, Evans and Brigham took turns to once again set up the other for goals in answer to these tallies, making it a 9-4 game at the three quarters mark.

The fourth quarter, as mentioned on top, looked like a mirror image of the second quarter, as the host Skippers seized control of play with some aggressive play, seemingly sparked at the defensive end by senior captain Conor Buick and freshman Jeff Brown.

Mark Davis scored two minutes in and Rob Carpenter scored a minute after that, as he camped by the left post to finish off of some pretty interior passing. Matt Davis won the ensuing face-off for the Skippers and a quick break-in allowed Previte to find the room he'd been denied much of the game. He faked low on Scituate netminder Matt Miner and then went top shelf, making it a 9-7 game with 8:26 to go in the fourth quarter.

Davis again won the face-off to start another break in, but this time Miner denied Previte on his hat trick bid, and started a break the other way, which ultimately resulted in Brigham's fourth goal of the game, off a nice feed from behind the net by Brett Clinton, and a 10-7 game with 7:15 to play .

Both teams saw some quality chances go by the boards over the next few minutes, as defensive units dug down and each goalie came up with a big save or two.

With Scituate attempting to clear the ball near the 3:30 mark, Rasmussen emerged from an extremely physical scrum near midfield to rush in on Miner from the right wing side and bounce one by him farside, making it a 10-8 game with 3:11 to play.

Nick Murphy came up with a big stop on a Brigham bid inside the two minute mark, and Cohasset got into its offense, patiently working the ball around until it found DeWayne Morris with a little daylight 30 yards out from the right post. The athletic senior captain spun off one check on his charge to the net, and then quickly fired a shot into the ground five feet in front of Miner, bouncing just over the top of his catcher and inside the far post to make it a 10-9 game with 1:14 showing.

Colby Hawkins won the ensuing face-off for the Sailors, and they appeared to be in control, as they spread the field against the desperate Skippers defense. However, a nice check by Cohasset senior captain Mike Devine near the sidelines resulted in the ball going out of bounds and coming back to the Skippers with 33 seconds to play.

No Skipper forward ever got a solid look on net in that final half minute, however, as the Scituate defensive core of Jamie Phinney, Chris Connelly, Josiahs Porter and Carroll did a nice job of sealing off the box through to the final horn.

Skippers 11, Milton 6

This win last Thursday was a solid overall effort, according to Coach Curran.

Mark Davis played a very strong two-way game, marking up with a top Milton player all over field and also chipping in on offense with two goals and an assist.

The offense was paced, as has been the case almost every time out of late, by junior attackman Jake Previte, with five goals and three assists.

His fellow attackmen, senior captain Mike Rasmussen and sophomore Aidan Buick, chipped in with four points (three goals, assist) and three points (goal, two assists), respectively.

Skippers 12, Nantucket 5

Monday's clincher improved the Skippers to 8-7 with just one game to go in the regular season (yesterday's hosting of Canton).

Previte again had the hot stick, finishing with five goals and an assist. Rasmussen added tow goals and two assists and Davis two goals and one helper.

Jeff Brown played another rock solid game on defense and also contributed an assist and a goal, an electrifying end-to-end rush that had his coach reaching for all sorts of adjectives in an attempt to describe it.

Murphy made five saves through three quarters, and then joined most of his fellow starters on the sidelines for the entire fourth quarter. Junior Chris Simms made three saves between the pipes in the fourth.

Bookstore is setting for novel about everyday life

Scituate book signing is tonight

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

"A bookstore is like a town square."

Whether browsing in Edwards Books in Springfield, Mass. — the setting for Suzanne Strempek Shea's captivating and humorous new book "Shelf Life: Romance, Mystery, Drama, and Other Page-Turning Adventures from a Year in a Bookstore" — or in Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset, the author's analogy couldn't be more accurate.

After all, bookstores are places where you can not only buy books or simply browse but also purchase tickets to a local theater production or school play or catch up on the latest local events that are posted on the bulletin board by the door as a community service. What better place to chat quietly with a friend you run into unexpectedly? Each bookstore has its own story.

Shea has firsthand knowledge of all this, having done readings and drop-ins at hundreds of bookstores and having had varied personal interactions with customers while working at Edwards.

"Customers are from all walks of life – federal judges, street people, waitresses, CPAs, high schoolers," Shea said. "Often at the shelves or in line at the register, one will comment to the next about the book or magazine they have, and then a discussion starts. Very often you'll have strangers chatting who might not otherwise have struck up a conversation. It's wonderful to watch."

"Very often you'll have strangers chatting who might not otherwise have struck up a conversation. It's wonderful to watch."

— Suzanne Strempek Shea, author "Shelf Life"

Shea captivated an audience of fans with her lively reading, evoking laughter throughout a recent book signing at Hingham Public Library, an event cosponsored by Buttonwood Books & Toys of Cohasset. The Hingham stop was one of the first on her current book tour. Buttonwood carries a supply of Shea's books.

Another signing is scheduled at Front Street Books in Scituate tonight, May 27, at 7 p.m. For further information, call (781) 545-5011.

Shea remarked about the "beautiful" newly renovated Hingham library. "It's wonderful to see a project like this finished," she said, noting that the town of Palmer, where she lives, is creatively renovating a former A & P into a library.

"Shelf Life" details Shea's experiences as a book lover, book writer, and eventually a bookseller at a family bookstore after her friend Janet Edwards asked her to spread the word that the bookstore was looking for help. Shea decided to give it a try, and she's glad she did.

Shea has found her experience working there anything but slow-paced, as she had previously expected. Instead, she found her days filled with new faces, experiences, and interesting requests.

'Lived and breathed'

While continuing to write, Shea "lived and breathed" books in a place she believes sells "ideas, stories, encouragement, answers, solace, validation, the basic ammunition for daily life" during her recovery from treatments for breast cancer in 2001. She continues to blend writing with bookselling at Edwards, where she spends one or two afternoons a week working the register, shelving new titles, creating seasonal window displays, setting up events, and answering "those many questions."

"Shelf Life" captures life inside a bookstore by providing interesting anecdotes and reflections on Shea's childhood reading, animal books, and visits to a Bookmobile as well as her current experiences at Edwards. The author describes every detail of bookstore life in a way that captivates the reader.

"Suzanne's book is really the book all of us would write, because every one of us has funny and heart-wrenching stories about customers who come into our shops," said Buttonwood owner Betsey Detwiler said.

Shea won the 2000 New England Book Award for Fiction and has written four acclaimed novels, "Selling the Lite of Heaven," "Hoopi Shoopi Donna," "Lily of the Valley," and "Around Again." "Becoming Finola" is scheduled to be published June 15.

Shea's first four novels are set in the western Massachusetts Polish-American community she grew up in. "Becoming Finola" was inspired by Shea's love of Ireland and a job offer casually made to her during a visit there.

Shea has also written a memoir, "Songs from a Lead-Lined Room: Notes – High and Low – from My Journey through Breast Cancer and Radiation." What started out as writing notes about "what went on in my head following breast cancer treatments to be shared with my husband and friends with the intention of eventually lighting a bonfire with them" unexpectedly led her to write "Songs." After unsuccessfully searching for a first-person account of a breast cancer survivor following her diagnosis, Shea decided she would write the book to help others who found themselves in a similar situation.

Where do all of Shea's ideas come from? "I have more ideas than I could ever have time to write," she said. "They spring from the littlest thing – an overheard comment, a question, the way somebody decorates their lawn, a classified ad. I just start thinking, 'Hey, I could write about that!"

Shea's advice to budding authors is: "All you need is an idea, and then run with it."

There's a mutual admiration between Shea and her fans. They love her books and she appreciates their support. "If no one was reading or selling my books, I wouldn't be able to do this for a living," she said. "It's a blast. I'm so lucky."

Shea also enjoys meeting other authors. In fact, her laptop is signed by Anne Lamott, author of the popular "Blue Shoe." "She said she had never done that before," Shea recalls with a smile. "She said it was like signing a baseball mitt!"

For someone who calls herself a "shameless self-promoter," Shea is amazingly laid back and understated in her approach. Talking with her is like having a chat with your sister or your best friend who lives next door.

"You can write the best story in the world, but you need readers to take it home in order to get another contract to write another book," she explained.

Sharing anecdotes

Her fans enjoyed Shea's sharing of an anecdote involving one of her books: "I have passed customers standing at the shelf with one of my books in hand and have said to them, 'I heard that's quite good.' Most have nodded, smiled, returned to their looking. One said, 'Doesn't look it.'"

Despite such occasional responses, Shea's books generally receive high marks. While she's appreciative of that, the popular author doesn't put too much weight in book reviews.

"Everybody's different, but my experience [facing a health challenge] made me realize what real problems are. So I don't cling to reviews or to opinions in general. At least, I try not to!" she said. "So much of what irks us or ticks us off is really not important."

Still, Shea is sincere in her appreciation of her fans and of bookstore owners like Detwiler who continue to provide a comfortable place where readers can meet and chat with their favorite authors.

Detwiler found Shea's "town square" analogy right on the mark. "A customer will head for the counter to make a purchase and get into a conversation about the book with someone else who's standing there," she said. "You hear all kinds of things being planned in bookstores, from P.T.O. events to fund raisers."

When Detwiler opened Buttonwood 15 years ago, she didn't have any idea of the variety of services that a bookstore provides to a community. "I very quickly found out what was involved," she recalls. "Sometimes customers come in with a lot on their plates."

Following Buttonwood's opening in November of that year, a woman came in on New Year's Eve at closing time looking for a book for her husband – an alcoholic who hadn't had a drink in three months – "to get him through the night."

Another time, a woman swept into Buttonwood looking for "that book for people who can't seem to do anything right in this world," referring to a Scott Peck self-help book with which Detwiler was familiar. Sympathizing with the woman, Detwiler "did something you never do – throw an arm around [a stranger's] shoulder. I told her I was sure there were many things she did right. The woman went off happy, saying she wasn't sure she would find help in the book, but that I had really helped her. . . . There's a strong desire on every bookseller's part to fulfil whatever request is made so the customer goes away satisfied."

Others come in just to browse and find a diversion from everyday life. Needs and interests vary from bookstore to bookstore, Detwiler noted. While a Cape Cod shop might feature books about shipwrecks, one in Vermont might display books about raising sheep and veterinary help close to the entrance.

Detwiler's advice to young mothers who say they don't have time to read is to make time to pick up a book. "Books take us away from the sameness and everydayness of raising kids and gives mothers something else to think about other than mealtimes and driving to soccer practices," said Detwiler. "That's all important stuff to do, and with a good heart, but parents need to stay people too. And children need to see their parents reading and making it an entertainment choice."

Author has keen eye for customers with character

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

In attempting to meet the diverse needs of readers, booksellers often field unusual questions.

"Some of the inquiries aren't as direct as "What is the better title on the lives of the saints?" said author Suzanne Strempek Shea, who also works part-time at Edwards Books in Springfield, Mass. "I'm often racking my brain after being given too few clues about just what it is the reader wants so badly."

Shea, author of "Shelf Life: Romance, Mystery, Drama, and Other Page-Turning Adventures from a Year in a Bookstore," recently paid a visit to Hingham Public Library for a book signing and reading. (See related story.)

Customers often make unusual and challenging requests, Shea said, such as:

- "I'm looking for a book. I don't know the title. I don't have the author's name. I know that it's about a woman. A woman in another country. And it's fiction. The cover is red. My neighbor says it's good. Would you have it?"
- "What would you recommend for a flight to California? I'll be sleeping most of the time."

"What would you recommend for a flight to California? I'll be sleeping most of the time."

- "It's by the author Shurshill – you know, C-H-U-R-C-H-I-L-L. Like the president."
- "I need some books for children who hate to read. My son hates to read. But I want him to read. Do you have any books that a child could read without realizing he was reading?"

Where else would all this occur but in a local bookstore – or a library — full of interesting and unique people, all with their own unique personalities and book preferences?

"I watch the customers browse, select, hug [their books], pay, hug again, leave, and return on another day in search of something else," Shea writes. "I watch it all. I'm a spy, a fly on the shelf-lined wall. One who'll now add to those shelves the story of her first year of working in a bookstore."

Many bookstores not only feature a wide variety of books, but an eclectic display of other items as well: "magazines, newspapers, and a wide selection that goes with the flavor of the community – local authors, poets, and children's illustrators. Edwards Books doesn't have a café or music section, but we do carry stationery, cards, toys, jewelry, pottery, and local souvenirs. Gifts are an important sideline these days," Shea said. "Atmosphere sort of creates itself if the customer feels welcome and assisted – or left alone if that's the preference!"

Robert B. Parker discusses new book

Buttonwood Books & Toys welcomes Robert B. Parker discussing "Double Play" on Tuesday. June 1, at 7 p.m., at Buttonwood Books & Toys. Robert Parker has long been acknowledged the dean of American Crime Fiction. "Double Play" represents a break from the mystery genre and another segue into historical fiction. Parker's novel is a fictional story about the legendary Jackie Robinson and Joseph Burke, a man hired by the Brooklyn Dodgers to be Robinson's bodyguard during this turbulent time. "Double Play" is receiving rave reviews from critics including a starred review from Publisher's Weekly. "A masterful recreation of a turbulent era that's not only a great and gripping crime novel but also one of the most evocative baseball novels ever written." Robert B. Parker is the author of more than 40 books, including the March 2004 Spenser novel "Bad Business," and the 2003 bestseller "Stone Cold" and "Back Story".

Born and raised in Massachusetts, Parker attended Colby College in Maine, served with the Army in Korea, and then completed a Ph.D. in English at Boston University. Barbecue following Memorial Day Parade

The Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation is pleased to invite everyone for hamburgers, hot dogs, soft drinks or coffee immediately following the Memorial Day Parade May 31, at Bancroft Hall on Government Island.

The non-profit Lightkeepers Corporation was established in 1991 to renovate a former two-family lightkeepers' residence, no longer used as such because of automation of Minot's Light, and convert it into a function room for community use. The building is leased from the town but maintained and operated by the Lightkeepers Corporation.

The generosity of Cohasset residents and others provided the funds for renovation. Operating and maintenance expenses, and reserves for capital replacements or improvements, are recovered from rental of two apartments on the second floor, and from fees charged to non-residents for use of the function room facilities. Cohasset residents may use the facilities for a nominal fee, and non-profit organizations at no charge.

This will be the seventh year that CLC has hosted Memorial Day attendees in recognition of the generosity of our supporters and CLC expects to serve more than 1000 people again.

For further information please contact R. M. Campbell, President of CLC, at 383-0025.

Getting grilled glazed salmon just right

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

The problem with glazed salmon on the grill is that it sticks and burns. The sweet glaze adds fuel to the fire since its sugars quickly incinerate and provide an impromptu glue that makes removing the filet virtually impossible. On top of that, I wanted perfectly cooked salmon with just enough glaze to complement the flavor of the fish without overwhelming it.

Farm-raised salmon is widely available and very popular despite the fact that it contains twice the amount of fat as compared to wild salmon. However, if put to a side-by-side taste test, the farm-raised has a milder flavor and moist, rich interior that is a crowd pleaser. Wild salmon often has a dry flaky texture and a stronger flavor. On top of the inferior texture, the lesser amount of fat in the wild salmon makes it much more difficult to grill. So, farm-raised was my first choice. In addition, fillets were preferred over steaks since there were no bones and fillets are easier to cook. Finally, to eliminate curling (as the skin shrinks it often makes the entire fillet curl up), I decided to remove the skin before cooking. Besides, who eats the skin anyway?

The next step was a marinade to boost flavor. Soy is an unbelievably great match for the sweet, buttery salmon and a teriyaki sauce (soy, mirin, sake and a bit of sugar) was the perfect partnership. I tried marinating the fish anywhere from 15 minutes to an hour and found 30 minutes worked best. The fish had picked up just enough flavor to be pleasantly seasoned, but not lose its identity. I also discovered that the fish gained better flavor if placed flesh-side down rather than what used to be the skin-side down during the marinating process. I placed the fillets in a single layer in a baking dish, which worked out well.

In most recipes, the glaze was made up of exactly the same ingredients used in the marinade. This method finishes the dish with an intense flavor boost as well as an attractive shiny glaze. ("Teri" means shiny and traditional teriyaki should have a shellacked appearance.) Preparing the glaze is a snap. All of the ingredients are combined in a small skillet and it is simmered until it is reduced and thickened. I thought that low-sodium soy sauce worked better in the glaze, although it didn't matter as much with the marinade. The proportions of the ingredients also needed to be adjusted; I reduced the amount of soy from four to three tablespoons.

I also discovered that the fish gained better flavor if placed flesh-side down rather than what used to be the skin-side down during the marinating process.

As for the cooking method, salmon grills best over medium-high heat – they are turned once and then removed. Fillets from the thick end are about 1 1/4 inches thick once the skin is removed and take about three minutes per side. If the grill isn't hot enough, the fish tends to stick so the grates should be well heated as well as oiled. (Use a long pair of tongs, vegetable oil, and a wad of paper towels. New grills' grates tend to stick. To season a new grate, grill a bunch of fatty sausages on it before using for more delicate foods.) I didn't see much of an advantage to applying the glaze during the grilling process. It adds a bit of color, but the risk of burning and sticking is greater than the reward. So once the fish is removed from the grill it is brushed with the glaze and served.

GRILLED GLAZED SALMON

Fillets are easier to work with than steaks and have no bones. Remove the skin before marinating.

Salmon and Marinade

4 tablespoons soy sauce or low-sodium soy sauce
2 tablespoons mirin (sweet cooking rice wine)
2 tablespoons sake
1/2 teaspoon sugar
4 6- to- 8- ounce salmon fillets skinned with pin bones removed (both can be done at the store)

For the Glaze

3 tablespoons low-sodium soy sauce
2 tablespoons mirin
2 tablespoons sake
1/2 teaspoons sugar

1. Place the soy, mirin, sake and sugar in a 9 x 13-inch baking dish and whisk to combine. Place the fillets in the marinade with the flesh side down (and what would have been the skin side should be facing up). Cover with plastic and refrigerate for 30 minutes. For the glaze: Combine all ingredients in a small skillet or medium saucepan and allow to cook over medium heat until the mixture is reduced by two-thirds and thickened to the consistency of maple syrup, about 3 to 4 minutes. Set aside.

2. Ignite grill. When fire is medium-high (you can hold your hand 5 inches over the flame for 3 to 4 seconds) rub cooking area with vegetable oil-soaked paper towel wad using long tongs. Place salmon on grill and cook until dark grill marks form and the fillets turn opaque about half way up the sides, about 3 minutes. Turn the fillets and cook for an additional 3 minutes or until well marked on second side and the salmon feels firm but not hard when pressed. (You may peek with the tip of a small knife; the very center should remain translucent.) Remove the fillets from the grill onto a warm platter, brush glaze over each fillet and serve immediately.

He served in the United States Navy.

Mr. Galo was employed as a software engineer for Verizon (formerly AT&T) for 30 years retiring in 2001.

An avid golfer and a member of the Ridder Country Club, he was an enthusiastic coach for baseball, basketball and football throughout the South Shore for many years. He also enjoyed music and loved food.

In addition to his parents, Mr. Galo leaves three sons, Walter and his wife, Cyndi, of Gorham, Maine, Robert Galo of Plymouth, and William Galo of Hanson; a brother, Ted Galo of Cohasset; six sisters, Roberta Martell of Cohasset, Lydia DeCoste of Abington, Barbara Achille of Port Charlotte, Fla., Frances McInnis, Dolores Johnson and Joyce Baglione all of Hingham; his former wife, Ellen (Jenkins) Galo of Hanson; three grandchildren Ashley, Richard and Vangelina Cox of Plymouth.

A memorial service was held on May 26, in St. John the Evangelist Church, Hingham.

In lieu of flowers, donations in his memory may be made to the American Heart Association, 20 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701.

Adelaide M. Pratt

Adelaide M. (Brown) Pratt, 93, of Cohasset and Chestnut Hill, died at her home in Cohasset on May 22, 2004.

Mrs. Pratt was born in Cohasset and was a graduate of the Windsor School in Boston.

A noted yachtswoman, Mrs. Pratt extensively cruised the waters from Eastport, Maine to the Florida Keys with her husband on board their yachts Wester Till and Fomalhaut. Through these trips she captured local scenery on camera and then gave lectures to garden clubs, historical societies and yachting groups. Her involvement with photography covered both the yachting world as well as trying to preserve in color the wildflowers of this region.

Mrs. Pratt received many photographic awards for her efforts. She was winner of camera club competitions for color and nature, Photographic Society of America honors and two Galaxy Awards. She was also honored for her work for the Wildflower Society's Garden in the Woods preservation project. Her award winning photographs of flowers, including many endangered species, and gardens were donated to the Wildflower Society for their archives as well as to the Smithsonian Institution archives, where she was recently honored.

Mrs. Pratt has had numerous honors bestowed upon her including life member of the Chestnut Hill Garden Club, the Cohasset Garden Club, of which she was a past president, and the Cohasset Yacht Club. She is a member of the Colonial Dames of America, The Country Club in Brookline and the Vincent Club. She was a former member of the Photographic Society of America, The Boston Camera Club, the New England Camera Club Council, the Junior League of Boston, of which she was a past treasurer, as well as a member of the Cohasset Historical Society, and the Cruising Club of America.

She was on the visiting committee of the Arnold Arboretum and was an honorary board member of the New England Wildflower Society.

Wife of the late Lewis S. Bell and the late Richard W. Pratt, she leaves her daughter, Virginia B. Gray of Hingham, and three granddaughters; Martha Music, Margaret G. Curtis and Ellen G. Dresser; and six great grandchildren. The funeral services and interment in the Hingham Cemetery were private.

The Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel, Hingham, handled the arrangements.

For those who wish, donations may be made in her memory to the First Parish Church in Cohasset, 23 North Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025 or to the Cohasset Sailing Club, P.O. Box 111, Cohasset, MA 02025.

deLima delights in humor of "Noises Off"

Throughout her stage career, Sarah deLima has played a diverse array of characters in works by everyone from Shakespeare to Sondheim. In most of those productions, the Cohasset performer has tackled just one role at a time. At Boston's Lyric Stage through June 5, however, deLima can be seen playing not one, but two roles in the classic British comedy, "Noises Off," by Tony Award-winning playwright Michael Frayn.

With "Noises Off," Frayn wrote two plays - a traditional sex farce, "Nothing On," and the backstage drama of what develops during the production's final rehearsal and subsequent tour. "I play Dotty Ottley, the actress who plays Mrs. Clackett, the housekeeper, in the play. Dotty is also an investor in the play so she really wants it to work," explained deLima by telephone last week. "This is one of the all-time want-to-do roles for an actress."

Rounding out the cast are local favorites including Jeremiah Kissel, Barlow Adamson, and Neil A. Casey, under the direction of Spiro Veloudos. "We have some very gifted comic actors in this company. The cast really understands farce and how to make it work beautifully. The first act takes place at a rehearsal on the set and the second act deals with the backstage turmoil that grips the company after the show has been out on tour for a while and things aren't going well. Everything is timed just right to show exactly what is happening on-stage and off. It is perfectly choreographed chaos," says deLima. "I hate to use superlatives, but this may be the most beautifully constructed piece of comic theater ever written."

"Noises Off" is at the Lyric Stage, 140 Clarendon Street, Boston. For tickets and information, call 617/437-7172 or visit www.lyricstage.com.

LISTEN To Life

MOVING IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

One of the most effective ways to reduce the amount of background noise that might prove bothersome to a hearing instrument user is to use a directional microphone. By lessening sounds from the rear direction, a directional microphone improves speech understanding in the presence of noise. According to many studies, hearing instruments with directional microphones produce up to a 40% improvement in speech understanding in noisy environments. The microphones are designed to amplify sounds directly in front of the user, where spoken words emanate from conversation partners. Directional microphones are routinely built into the newer digital instruments and may be an option in all but the smallest instruments. For many, this is the technology of choice in hearing aids.

At FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, one of our most important jobs is to keep up to date on the latest technological advances in hearing instruments. If it has been determined that a hearing aid will be of benefit to you, let us help in the selection of the one that is right for you and your lifestyle. Our testing equipment is state-of-the-art, and we welcome you or anyone in your family to come see us for an evaluation. We're located at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, and we accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health. PH: 781-337-1144.

P.S. Further improvement in speech recognition and directionality can be attained by wearing a hearing instrument in each ear.

Local performers shine at Elliot Norton Awards

Tony and Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Edward Albee ("Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?") was honored with a lifetime achievement award, and several South Shore performers were in the spotlight on May 17 when the Boston Theater Critics Association presented the 22nd annual Elliot Norton Awards at Boston's Cutler Majestic Theater.

A special citation was given to Overture Productions for its November 2003 production of "Follies In Concert," which featured Broadway veteran Len Cariou and a large cast of local performers under the musical direction of Michael Joseph of Weymouth. The company included eight singers from the South Shore, two of whom - Weymouth's Mary Callanan and Holbrook native and current East Bridgewater resident Paula Markowicz - were among those performing highlights from the Stephen Sondheim musical during last week's awards ceremony.

The 2004 Norton Prize for Sustained Excellence went to Paula Plum, while the Broadway in Boston and Huntington Theatre Company presentation of Theatre Royal Bath's perfectly realized "As You Like It" was named Outstanding Production by a Visiting Company. The New Repertory Theatre's staging of "Sweeney Todd" earned Outstanding Director, Small Company honors for Rick Lombardo and helped win Leigh Barrett the award for Outstanding Actress, Small Company. Last season, Barrett earned acclaim not only for her work in "Sweeney Todd" and "The Threepenny Opera" at the New Rep, but also for the Gloucester Stage Company's "Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris," and her haunting performance in "Follies In Concert." The Large Company acting nods went to Julie White for "Bad Dates," and Paxton Whitehead in "What the Butler Saw," both produced by the Huntington.

A grateful town says 'thank you' to veterans

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With bright blue skies and a gentle breeze to keep flags proudly waving at a constant pace, Mother Nature was smiling down on Cohasset as residents gathered Monday to honor those soldiers who over the years have paid the ultimate sacrifice for the freedom of our country.

"To my own Blue Star mother, thank you for my life, my values, and your courage during the times I have been in harms way. I love you."
Cohasset native
Major John B. Atkinson

From babies to grandmothers, many were dressed in red, white, and blue to commemorate this Memorial Day, and cheered as the parade rolled by. Some children rode their bikes alongside those who marched, while others sat atop their father's shoulders for a better view of the festivities, while the soldiers took their places at Veterans Memorial Park at Cohasset harbor just before noon.

Cohasset native and 1988 graduate of Cohasset High School, Major John B. Atkinson, US Marine Corps, returned to his hometown to serve as this year's Memorial Day speaker. Looking out into the crowd of faces, Atkinson recalled the days when he, too, was one of the children standing along the very same parade route, and how it felt to stand in

Police chief calls it quits

Jackson makes plans to retire

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There's another change at the top in Cohasset as Selectmen announced Police Chief Robert Jackson's retirement Tuesday night.

His departure follows on the heels of Mark Haddad, who abruptly resigned as town manager early last month for personal reasons.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said Jackson submitted his intention to retire while on vacation last week. He added the board has a plan to implement an interim chief and will be interviewing a potential candidate at a special meeting to be held Thursday, June 3 at 7:30, and all are welcome to attend.

Selectmen have not announced who the candidate is, but said Jackson has agreed to stay on parttime to offer support when necessary to the interim chief. Sullivan said he would estimate it will be about a month before Jackson is fully retired.

"We would like to thank Bob for all he has done over the years," said Sullivan, adding the town appreciates his effort to help the interim chief.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris, who was a member of the police chief search committee to hire Jackson, wished him well in his retirement.

Jackson, 56, and a 25-year veteran of the department, has had a rocky year at the helm of the small-town police force that has been riddled with controversy.

Stewart put light in Relay for Life

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Anna Mary Stewart put the light in the Relay for Life. With her shining spirit and ever-present willingness to give, for years she helped those who had lost loved ones to cancer keep their memories alive by coordinating the Luminaria Ceremony at the Relay for Life.

But at this year's event on Friday, June 18, friends and family will light a candle to commemorate Stewart's life, not only as a mother and friend, but as an American Cancer Society volunteer who gave to the cause year after year, in the hopes that one day, there will be a cure. She lost her own battle with liver cancer in January.

A longtime volunteer for the American Cancer Society, Stewart originally became involved in the Relay when the disease hit close to home. Her husband had been diagnosed with cancer and she was looking for a way to lend support to the cause. Stewart's daughter, Mary Anne Gagne, said her mother spent endless hours reading articles and looking up the latest developments in research, and her participation in the Relay helped her feel she was making a contribution.

"It was definitely an emotional thing for her," said Gagne. "It was a way she could make a difference."

'Oz' production is a family affair

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When the curtain goes up on this year's Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of the "Wizard of Oz", not only will there be families in the audience, there will be families on stage. From witches to scarecrows to flying monkeys and munchkins, CDC actors range in age from five to 85, which allows everyone in the family to become involved.

Lisa Pratt and her two daughters, Logan, 11 and Madison, 6, are all participating in the CDC show. Lisa will be playing the Wicked Witch of the West while Logan will play a flying monkey, and Madison represents one of the lullaby league.

"This is the first play for them," Lisa said of the girls, but added she does have some acting experience under her belt, and her interest in theater may have rubbed off on them.

Lisa directed the CDC's production of "Little Shop of Horrors" and said "The kids loved it." They would come to some of the rehearsals and watch the performers and by the end, knew practically all the lines to the show.

"It was really fun," said Madison.

When the girls found out the next CDC show was going to be Oz, they couldn't wait to audition. "Madison was very excited about trying out," said Lisa, adding she knew if the girls really wanted her to try out, she was going to audition for the "most fun part I could sink my teeth into," and that came in the role of the Wicked Witch of the West.

Because of her prior acting experience, Lisa can cackle a little too convincingly. While Madison said she knows underneath all the green makeup it's still her mom, when she barges on stage with her broom, she admits she gets a little scared.

On opening night the three Pratts, will have a small cheering section in the crowd as youngest Pratt daughter, Halle, 4 isn't quite old enough to participate just yet. She is happy for now to sit with dad, Jeff, in the audience and cheer her mom and sisters on.

In the Murray family, each member has

Planning Board office hours set

Beginning June 7, the Cohasset Planning Board Office will be open Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. This revised schedule of hours will be in effect until Sept. 7. The Planning Board phone number is 781-383-3517.

Household hazardous product collection

Cohasset will have a joint hazardous waste collection day with Hull from 9 a.m.-1p.m., June 5 at a location to be announced.

Accepted materials include solvents, gasoline, motor oil mixtures and other automotive fluids, pesticides, photography chemicals, pool chemicals, acids and bases, thermometers, thermostats and poisons. Materials not accepted include industrial waste, radioactive materials, pathological and medical waste, pressurized gas cylinders, auto batteries and explosives. Paint, motor oil, propane tanks, fluorescent lamps and NiCd (rechargeable) batteries are collected regularly by many towns and may not be accepted at some collections. Latex paint is non-hazardous, and may be dried and disposed with trash. Bring chemicals in their original containers or labeled clearly as to their contents. Clean Harbors will conduct the collections.

Residents who turn in a toxic mercury thermometer or other mercury item may swap it for a digital thermometer. Visitors' mercury waste may be disposed but not swapped. Swaps sponsored by American Ref-Fuel at SEMASS or Mass. DEP.

For more detailed information and directions, call the South Shore Recycling Cooperative at 508-785-8318. Claire Sullivan, Solid Waste Planner.

Flushing of water mains continues

The water department will continue to flush water mains during the weeks of June 7 and 14. Flushing will take place Monday through Thursday between 9 p.m. and 2 a.m. The anticipated flushing schedule for the two-week period is as follows:

June 7 – North Main St. from Forest Ave. to Elm St.; Pratt Ct.; Elm St., Margin St., Atlantic Ave. to Beach St, Beach St. and streets off these streets.

June 8 – Atlantic Ave. from Beach St. to Jerusalem Rd.; Nichols Rd.; Jerusalem Rd. from Atlantic Ave. to No. Main St.; Joy Pl.; Gammons Rd.; Redgate Lane and streets off all of these streets.

June 9 - Jerusalem Road from Forest St., to Atlantic Avenue and all streets off this section of Jerusalem Road.

June 10 – Flushing not completed on the three previous nights. (Please see Channel 10 and note placement of flushing notice signs in street.)

June 14 – Spring St.; So. Main St. from Elm to Beechwood St.; Summer St.; Sankey Rd.; Black Horse La.; Border St.; Parker Ave. and streets off So. Main St.

June 15 through June 17 – Virginia Lane; Woodland Rd. and Holly Lane. Completion of flushing not performed on previous nights.

Residents will be provided advance notification in the Patriot Ledger and Cohasset Mariner of the schedule for flushing each segment of the system. In addition, temporary street signs will be placed strategically around the affected area on the day of flushing. Notice will also be provided on the Water Dept.'s web site, www.cohassetwater.org and on the local cable access channel, Channel 10. Residents should monitor the cable channel for schedule changes.

"Flushing cleans out sediment and deposits which may have accumulated in the water mains and is an important part of the continuing efforts to improve drinking water quality to our customers," said John McNabb, Chairman of the Water Commission.

Do not wash clothes during the time the flushing occurs. If clothing becomes stained it can be cleaned by using "Iron Out" which is available for free from the Water Department.

During the flushing program, some temporary discoloration of the water may occur. Run the cold water faucet, preferably outside, for a short time until the discoloration clears. If your water is discolored, avoid using hot water until you flush your hot water tank by opening the valve at the bottom of the tank.

Call the Water Department at 781-383-0057 with any questions.

After weeks of discussion surrounding the Mill River Boatyard, the planning board has denied a request to transform the dilapidated Border Street site into a full service boatyard complete with hauling, launching, storage and repair facilities.

Stating it thought the applicant, Mill River Boatyard LLC, had not provided enough information regarding the site's intended use, along with a failure to meet the parking requirement set forth in the town's bylaw and a failure to meet public safety requirements, the planning board voted 3-0 against approval of the plan. Planning Board Chairman Al Moore has recused himself from all conversations surrounding the project, and member Michael Westcott was on vacation.

Currently, the Mill River Boatyard is owned by Peter Roy of Margin Street, who also owns Atlantica, the Old Salt House and the Cohasset Harbor Inn. Donald Staszko is in the process of working out a deal to purchase the Mill River Boatyard from Roy, and Staszko's son Ryan would serve as the manager of the property upon successful renovations.

Member Stuart Ivimey said because the preliminary plans allow for every possible permitted use, including uses only allowed with special permits, there is a much wider scope the site could be used for, which has not been specified by the applicant. He added it is not the job of the board to figure out what the applicant may or may not do with the property.

"In the parade of imaginary horribles, the door has been left open to fast-food restaurants," said Ivimey, adding while the applicant has stated it will only operate businesses that are allowed by the town, with a special permit, a restaurant would not be a violation, and could be permitted. While he said he doubts very much the Zoning Board of Appeals would ever allow a fast-food restaurant on the site, "We can't rely on what we think other boards will do," when making a decision.

Member Peter Pratt, who served as acting chairman in place of Moore, said in his opinion, the fundamental issue of public safety has not been addressed. During an emergency, every minute counts, and he said a letter sent to the board from the fire department shows concern on the department's end that access on the site could be a problem.

Fire Captain Mark Trask attended the meeting and said the department is concerned about being able to access the property from all angles. Due to the topography of the property, which has much of the buildings standing over running water, there is limited access on the Border Street side.

However, Trask said one very impressive aspect of the plans is the use of fire sprinklers on site, which the department is always glad to see. "This is a quantum leap in terms of safety," Trask said, adding because the boatyard could potentially store many boats during the winter, the site has the potential to be a real breeding ground for fires, and sprinklers will help ease some of that worry.

However, with the potential increase of business to the site, Pratt said parking could become an issue as current plans do not show adequate parking spaces for the site, and vehicles would have no choice but to park on the street, which could impede access for safety vehicles. While developers say there will not be an increase in use for the site, the planning board disagrees.

Ivimey said he shared Pratt's concerns about parking on the site. He said he believes that there will be an increase in traffic as a result of the renovations, creating a demand for more parking. However, "We've heard over and over it doesn't make sense to use the space on site," for additional parking, because it will negatively affect the applicant, he said.

Ivimey said while the applicant could, he "chooses not to use his land for parking." He said while the proposed boatyard businesses have been compared to those currently operating in the Village, the harbor does not have any facilities such as the town parking lot to accommodate spillover parking.

Concerned residents attended the meeting as well, and many shared the parking concerns of board members. Paul Figueiredo, 173 Pond St., asked how many employees could be working on any given day at the site, because currently, when everyone in the fishing fleet goes out at once, that alone generates roughly 20 vehicles, and parking could become a real issue from the employees alone.

"I really don't know," said Charles Humphreys, attorney for the applicant. Since the boatyard would be affected by the seasons, he said the work being done would have lulls at certain points during the year, and "at this point, I do not know how many employees it will have."

Richard Karoff, 19 Border St., said while the applicants have repeatedly said they do not need additional parking on site, he said he did not see any way the board could approve plans that did not have the provisions necessary for adequate parking.

While the site plan was turned down by the planning board, Pratt said there is nothing preventing Mill River LLC from coming before the board again with a new set of plans.

MBTA ombudsman resigns

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset-Greenbush ombudsman Kristina Patterson has resigned from her position as a landscape architect at the Waterfield Design Group, and in turn will no longer be serving as the liaison between the town of Cohasset and the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority.

Patterson said she has accepted an offer for post-graduate study in Canada, where she is originally from, and will be taking courses in sustainable design and eco-tourism management.

Since the town has a $120,000 contract with Waterfield, which was signed in October of 2002 and covers all costs related with the ombudsman position until the completion of construction, Patterson's resignation means another member from the Waterfield Group will be appointed to take her place. Money spent by the town for the ombudsman will be reimbursed by the MBTA as part of the town's Greenbush mitigation agreement.

Patterson said she has been sharing information with her colleague, Michael White, and he is ready to take over for her, so it should be a "smooth transition." Patterson's last day both at Waterfield and as the Cohasset ombudsman was Friday.

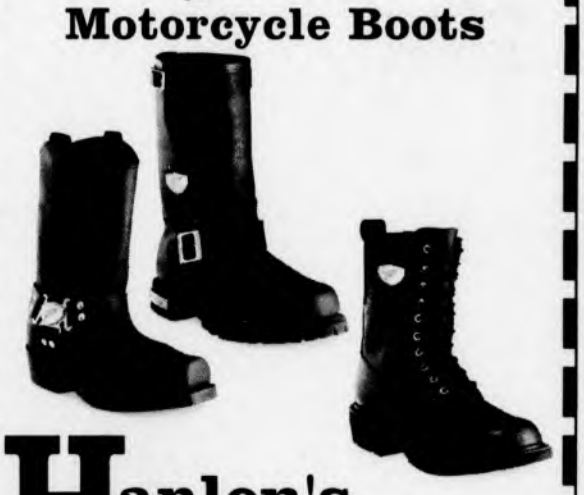
Patterson was hired to serve as a neutral third party, to keep the lines of communication open between the town and the MBTA during construction of the Greenbush line, and solve any potential adverse affects the train might have on the community. While Patterson was not slated to begin regular office hours in Town Hall until the beginning of construction, she was no stranger to the building, as she has worked with the town to resolve many different MBTA issues.

However, at the May 11 meeting of the Board of Selectmen, members began to question what Patterson's role should be. Because she had taken direction mainly from former Town Manager Mark Haddad, the board had not been kept abreast of her progress to date. Patterson said during her time in Cohasset, she had been writing monthly reports, which she said she gave to Haddad. She said there is a book of all topics relating to the Greenbush line at Town Hall, and copies of her reports should be there.

Patterson said she gave her formal notice at Waterfield on May 14. However, she and Craig Miller, principal of the Waterfield Design Group, were both present at the May18 meeting of the Board of Selectmen, and her role was discussed briefly again that night. Miller said because the date to begin construction is getting closer every day, it might be time to shift gears in terms of Patterson's role and turn it in to a more proactive position. Because Patterson had received her direction mostly from Haddad, Miller said he became concerned when he heard the Board of Selectmen had questions about Patterson's effectiveness, and was eager to work with the board to decide which direction he and Patterson should take from here.

"As far as we knew from Mark, he was very pleased with her work," he said, adding he and Patterson thought the change in Cohasset would provide the perfect opportunity to revisit Patterson's job description.

Since Selectmen had been concerned Patterson's records were not readily available, she said she would make copies of all her files kept at her Waterfield office in Winchester so they would be readily available for her on a daily basis. The records would be kept in Cohasset.



The board had agreed to discuss Patterson's role at upcoming meetings, but the town received a formal letter of resignation from Patterson last week, which was dated May 21. Selectmen did not announce Patterson's resignation at Tuesday's meeting.

The American Cancer Society's Relay For Life celebrates the lives of hundreds of local residents who have survived cancer, while offering the hope of finding a cure. To honor the incredible strength and courage of cancer survivors, all area survivors are invited to unite in a "Victory Lap" followed by a survivor reception at the Relay For Life event in Cohasset at the Cohasset High School on June 18, 2004.

The Victory Lap will take place directly after the opening ceremony at 6 p.m.

The Relay For Life event in Cohasset is an all-night community event bringing together teams of families, friends, churches, neighborhoods, and businesses - all with the same goal of curing cancer in the new millennium. Stewart put light in Relay for Life an overnight event where teams of people gather at schools, fairgrounds, or parks and take turns walking or running laps to help raise money for the American Cancer Society — Stewart was able to not only give support to cancer research, but gain support by meeting people who had also endured seeing a loved one through a time of illness. Not only did Stewart see her husband through his illness, but one of her daughters was subsequently diagnosed with melanoma. While her daughter was able to battle the disease and survive, her husband passed away 16 years ago.

However, Gagne said throughout her father's illness while her mother was keeping up to date on the latest research, she was encouraged to see that during the six-year time span he lived with the disease, major developments had occurred in cancer research. Stewart could see there was a real difference being made in the kinds of treatment available. She was driven to help the cause in any way she could, and those who knew her say the Relay won't be the same without her.

Mary Shepherd, community executive for development at the American Cancer Society, said she met Stewart when she started working for the society more than six years ago. Stewart had already been volunteering for approximately 10 years. "I worked most closely with Anna Mary in her role as chairperson of the Luminaria Committee for the Relay For Life in Cohasset," said Shepherd, adding Stewart had led the Cohasset group since that Relay's inception eight years ago.

During the luminaria, paper bags with one votive candle inside are lit in memory of someone affected by cancer. Gagne said last year it was an awesome sight to see the luminaria as the number of bags allowed the word "hope" to be spelled out in the stands at the high school.

Shepherd said what sets the luminaria apart in Cohasset is that it is one of the few Relays in New England that still alphabetizes the luminaria bags that line the track at the high school. "We tried to change that tradition a couple of years ago, but because of the overwhelming response from Relay participants to keep it going, we obliged," Shepherd said. While that made Stewart's job of coordinating the display much more labor intensive, Shepherd said she never complained.

"She understood that it was important for people to be able to easily find the bags in honor or memory of their loved one as she had lost her husband to cancer," Shepherd said. Fellow volunteer and cancer survivor Karen Burns said for Stewart, the Luminaria Ceremony was her "baby."

"No one has ever taken care of this very important aspect of the Relay like Anna Mary," she said. From the initial organization and distribution of the luminary bags to the team captains, to the collection of the money and the last-minute selling on the day of the event, she said Stewart did it all. Burns also reiterated how important it was for Stewart that the luminarias continue to be placed in alphabetical order. "It was important to her that every family member and friend could find the candles lit in honor of their loved ones," she said.

Because of Stewart's devotion to the cause, Gagne said when she found out she had been diagnosed with cancer in 2002, she didn't tell anyone at first. In fact, she coordinated much of the Relay that year, while seeking opinions for her own condition. "I look back on it now and think, 'how did she do it'?" said Gagne. "We all learned a lesson from her on how to help others."

Stewart's memory will live on through all the lives she touched, and those who knew her are working hard to ensure this year's luminaria is just as spectacular as Stewart would have planned. "I know she will be with us in spirit at the event, especially during the Luminaria Ceremony, and I hope we make her proud as we carry on her tradition," said Shepherd.

Water main pipe replacement begins

The Water Commission has begun work on North Main Street from Forest Avenue to Jerusalem Road. This work will include the replacement of undersized water mains between Rocky Lane and Jerusalem Road with new 12 inch ductile iron water mains, along with new service connections, valves, fire hydrants and other street improvements. The contractor has begun to install bypass, and is expected to begin working in the street the week of June 7.

"This project will improve fire protection and water service in this area of North Main Street," said John McNabb, chairman of the Water Commission. "One fire hydrant in this area has insufficient fire flow, which will be improved so it meets the recommended standards for fire protection."

The contractor will be L. Perrina Construction Company, who was the lowest bidder for the Water Commissions $1,300,000 2004 Distribution System Improvement Project, which will also include replacing undersized water mains on Gammons Road, Redgate Lane (North Main to Fernway), Jerusalem Road Drive, and Haystack Lane. Work is expected to continue into the fall.

"Work to complete the South Main Street water main replacement project will also begin during the first week of June," said Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt. "Completion of this project has been delayed so that engineering plans could be developed to correct drainage and run off problems in the area of South Main from the Scituate line to 353 South Main Street.

"The drainage improvements," said Pratt, "will be done in conjunction with the Cohasset Department of Public Works. Parker Avenue is scheduled for resurfacing during June. Pavement work will begin next week on Oak St , Hill St , Norfolk and Bancroft Rd, and will be completed in July in conjunction with the DPW's annual paving contract."

"The Water Commission will also begin work on the Sohier St well relocation project during June," said McNabb. "This project will be conducted well off the public way on Water Department and conservation land behind Fair Oaks Lane. The relocation of the well is made necessary by the MBTA, Greenbush project, since the right of way is located too close to the existing well location, and will be reimbursed by the MBTA.

IT'S HAPPENING

'Coffee with the Authors'

Buttonwood Books & Toys will present "Coffee with the Authors" on June 8, from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m. at the Atlantica Restaurant in Cohasset. Enjoy a continental breakfast and a stimulating morning with three authors as they discuss the art of writing and their latest work. Featured authors will be Patricia Gaffney for "The Goodbye Summer," Jim Collins for "The Last Best League: One Summer, One Season, One Dream" and Kate Whouley for "Cottage For Sale, Must Be Moved: A Woman Moves a House To Make A Home." Patricia Gaffney's novel, like her New York Times bestseller "The Saving Graces," explores the complex relationship between people, particularly family members. Jim Collins will discuss "The Last Best League", a narrative about baseball, the Cape Cod League and specifically about the Chatham A's. Kate Whouley's debut book, "Cottage for Sale, Must Be Moved" demonstrates Ms. Whouley's talent for observation and detail as she describes the process of moving a cottage to attach to her present home on Cape Cod.

Advance reservations and ticketing are required and can be made by calling Buttonwood at 781-383-2665. Tickets are $13 per person and non refundable.

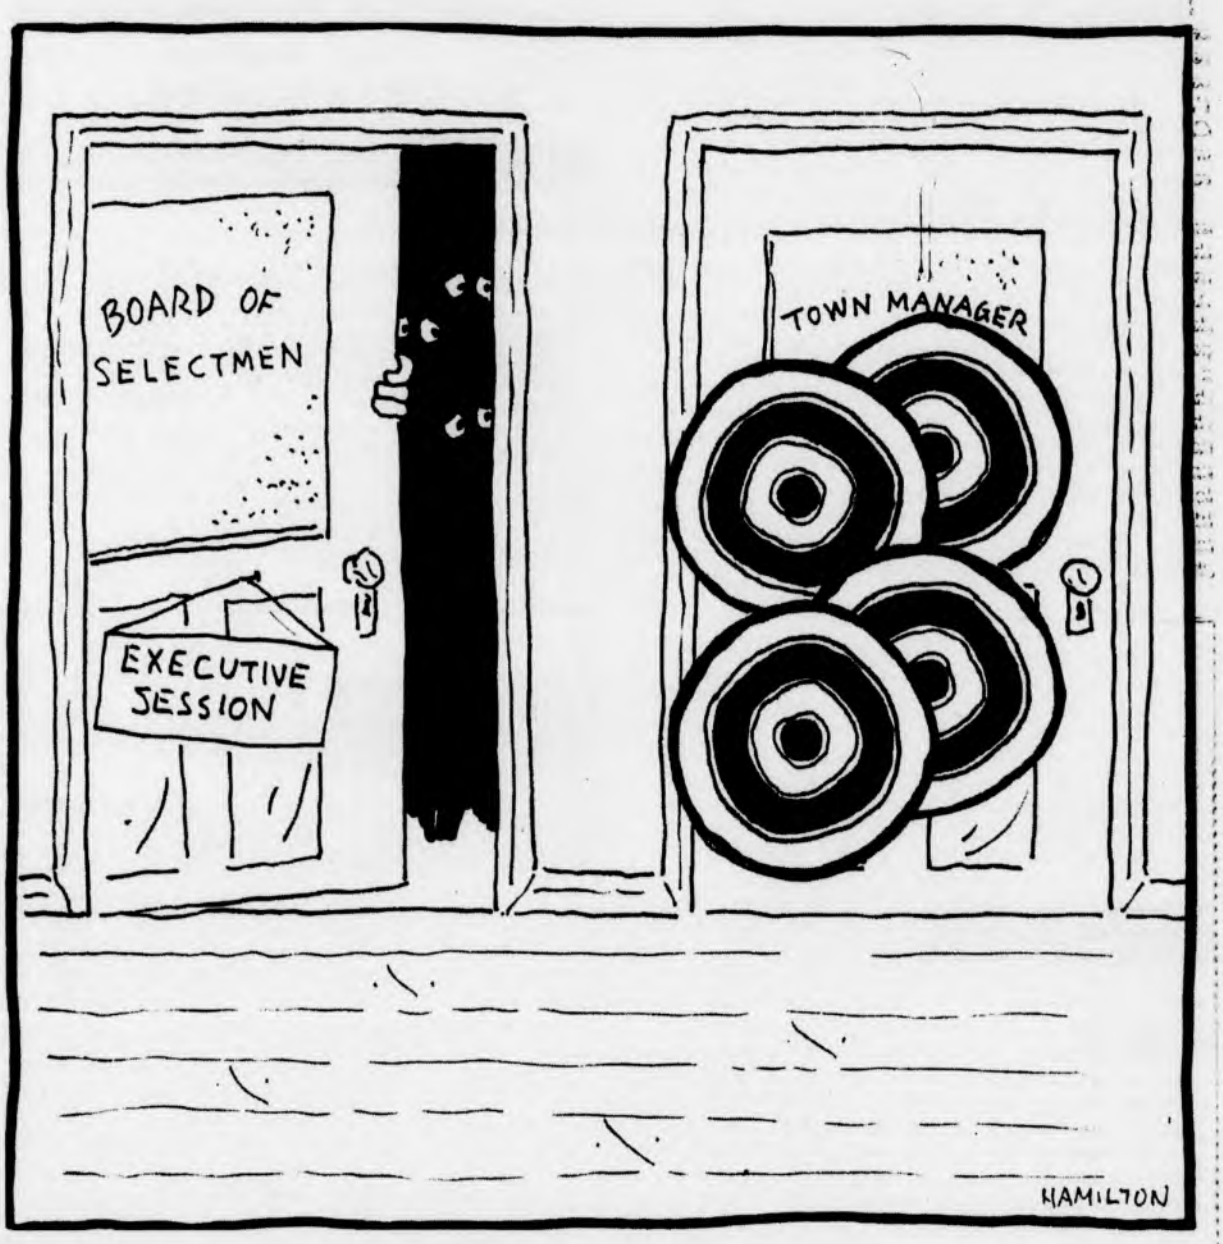
Looking for leaders

"What lies behind us and what lies before us are tiny matters compared to what lies within us."
— Oliver Wendell Holmes

The world changed September 11, 2001. For many young people graduating in 2004, that fateful day fell at the start of your sophomore year. You will remember where you were and what you were doing that day, much like people from previous generations remember where they were when Neil Armstrong walked on the moon, or when John F. Kennedy was assassinated, or when Allied Forces stormed Normandy Beach, or when Pearl Harbor was bombed.

For probably the first time in your young lives, you were living history instead of reading it out of a textbook. And whether you realize it now or not, the events of that day will have an impact on the rest of your life, much like D-Day, JFK and landing on the moon did for other generations.

Sept. 11 was particularly tragic in Norwell because the town lost one of its own — Jay Corcoran.



It's what you do with that knowledge and experience that will shape where you go from here. Many would argue that Sept. 11 was the worst day in American history, certainly recent American history. But think about all the positive things that have risen from those smoldering ashes in New York City and at the Pentagon and on a field in Pennsylvania. The images of courageous firefighters digging through the rubble from the World Trade Towers for days and days without rest, searching for survivors. The banding together of people from all walks of life along the streets of New York, mourning the loss of a loved one or mourning the loss of someone they did not know. The stories of hope, stories of despair and grief, stories of courage beyond belief, are all inspiring in their own way.

You don't soon forget something like that. In fact, you never forget.

What does all this have to do with you donning a cap and gown and receiving a diploma?

Graduation speakers will be encouraging you to reach for your dreams, to do the best you can, and to strive for excellence. All good messages, for sure, but what we really need now in our changing world is leaders. We're not talking about President of the United States (although that's always an option as well), but leaders in the community and in the workforce.

Leadership is what's needed to pull us through these trying times. Every generation needs leaders, so as you look around at graduation, see if there's a leader sitting to your left or right, or in front of you or behind you. And search within yourself to see if you have what it takes to lead — to stand out from the rest of the crowd as you head into college or the workforce.

LIBRARY CORNER

June display

On display in the Children's Room this month are books, videos, and sound recordings featuring: Fathers and Father's Day and Flag Day and patriotism.

Getting ready for summer

Explore other worlds @ your library is the theme of this year's statewide Summer Reading Program. All Cohasset school students are invited to participate. Registration will be held at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, in the Children's Room, beginning Monday, June 28, and will continue throughout the early summer. Registration hours will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays, Thursdays, and Fridays and from 1 to 7 p.m. on Tuesdays. At the time of registration, students will set a goal and be given a summer reading log on which to record their summer reading. At the completion of the summer program, Aug. 13, participants will bring their reading logs to share with Mrs. Moody. A tee shirt with the summer logo will be awarded to those participants who meet or exceed their goal.

We will be presenting a series of free Tuesday evening programs for families, suitable for children of all ages. These events will begin on Tuesday, July 6, and will end on Tuesday, Aug. 10.

Families that read together provide the strongest model for future readers. Research shows that young children from families that visit the library at least once a month show significantly more signs of emerging literacy than children whose families are not library users.

Color your landscape with tinted foliages

GREEN THUMBS UP

SUZANNE MAHLER

Every growing season has its highs and lows. Those of us who sow, grow, weed and cultivate the soil in the northeastern United States become accustomed to a seemingly endless, yo-yo pattern of weather conditions. Temperature and moisture extremes are generally the norm rather than the exception, as every year one or more weather records seem to be surpassed.

It is worth keeping a gardening journal from year to year to note the season's weather conditions and those plants that stood out for their exceptional vigor. Garden maps or weekly photos of perennial borders further assist in identifying consistently good performers and plants that may have succumbed to severe weather conditions. For smaller landscapes, finicky plants may not be worth the space and pampering they require.

The color, texture and overall appearance of a plant's leaves should be paramount when selecting plant material for a landscape or the perennial border. A majority of hardy plants bloom for only a few weeks while a plant's foliage is likely to be prominent for 6 months or more. Plant foliage becomes especially important during the latter half of the growing season as the riotous colors of spring and early summer wane.

With the growing popularity of gardening and the increasing demand for new plants, innumerable new cultivars are being introduced that offer a multitude of foliage colors. Tremendous strides have been made in creating plants that offer a colorful alternative to our reliance on flowers for a dramatic, long-lasting display. Dozens of familiar plants now boast splashy, variegated cultivars with leaves of green, white and yellow. Diverse shimmering, silver-gray plants unify our borders while dazzling yellows and golds, blues, and handsome, deeply hued bronze, purple, or burgundy foliages are readily available to paint a colorful tapestry even when flowers have faded.

Recent additions to my own garden include a wide variety of both woody and herbaceous plants that display richly colored foliage and I have become particularly fond of plants which offer shades of bronze and burgundy. The insertion of just a few deeply tinted foliages into a sea of varying shades of green leaves creates a dramatic contrast that may serve as a focal point or a backdrop to highlight other flowers and foliages in the garden. In combination with leaves of gold, silver or blue, the effect is especially stunning.

Woody plants provide the backbone of our landscapes and bronze, burgundy and purple-leafed specimens offer sensational focal points in a predominantly green landscape. Look for 'Crimson King' maples, a magnificent Redbud cultivar called 'Forest Pansy', purple-leafed plums, and numerous varieties of Japanese maples which include dwarf threadleaf cultivars and taller ornamentals like 'Bloodgood'. A personal favorite is a purple-leafed smokebush, Cotinus 'Royal Purple'. Many shrubs feature deeply colored foliage including barberries, a gorgeous Ninebark, Physocarpus 'Diablo', and Weigela, 'Wine and Roses'. Several hours of direct sunlight are critical for many of these plants to maintain their vibrant colored leaves.

Perennial plants offer a number of attractive choices for bronze or burgundy foliage. A handsome clumping spurge, Euphorbia dulcis 'Chameleon', displays lime green flower bracts above bronze-tinted leaves. The tall, bronze-leafed loosestrife, Lysimachia ciliata, often becomes a nuisance as it spreads about the garden but it does provide a colorful addition to the sunny border. Eupatorium 'Chocolate', a purple-leafed Joe-Pye weed, offers handsome dark foliage and fluffy white umbels in late summer. There are several spectacular summer bulbs to enhance your display including the richly colored, giant tropical leaves of cannas and the bronze foliage of several new dahlia cultivars such as 'Bishop of Llandaff'.

Although foliage is always the predominant player in the well-planned perennial border it becomes especially important in the shady garden where flowering tends to be minimal and diminishes as the season progresses. The family of coral-bells (Heuchera spp.) has been extensively hybridized to produce dozens of handsome bronze-leafed varieties, 'Palace Purple' having been one of the first of these introductions. Other delectable cultivars include 'Chocolate Ruffles', 'Plum Pudding', and 'Stormy Seas'. Many of these are grown primarily for the foliage, but a few of the newer cultivars have lovely flowers in shades of pink and red that attract hummingbirds.

Several varieties of bugbane (Cimicifuga) offer handsomely tinted divided foliage and charming delicate fragrant bottlebrush blooms that sway in the breeze. New selections include 'Hillside Black Beauty' and 'Brunette' that exhibit striking deep purple foliage and are a fabulous companion for broad-leafed blue or gold colored hostas. Equally stunning for the moist, shady border are the dramatic leaves of Ligularia, especially a recent introduction, 'Britt Marie Crawford' that displays giant, glossy, chocolate-colored leaves. Clusters of golden orange daisies appear in late summer.

The family of herbs contributes a variety of purple-leafed representatives including basil and perilla, whose richly tinted aromatic leaves are elegant when combined with golden oregano or the silvery leaves of lavender, sage, or artemisia. Few plants rival the beauty of bronze fennel whose delicate, ferny, anise-scented foliage adds marvelous textural contrast to the border. Its elegant stature and bright yellow flowers resembling its relative, Queen Anne's Lace, make it an invaluable component of any garden.

Vibrantly tinted annual plants for containers or bedding include purple fountain grass (Pennisetum 'Rubrum'), sweet potato vines and various cultivars of celosia, begonia, New Guinea impatiens and the fabulous diverse selections of coleus. The addition of any of these richly tinted plants to the garden provides a season of colorful contrast to the monochromatic green of the typical home landscape.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Why pay former manager?

TO THE EDITOR:

Yes the subject of this letter is our former Town Manager. As far as I'm concerned he's receiving too much press but I'm forced to express myself — I have to.

I think that since we're talking about taxpayers' money that we should be informed of the reasons why the individual resigned and the reasons why Cohasset should pay him anything. I'm a taxpayer and I think his contract with Cohasset and the separation agreement made with the Board of Selectmen should be public reading.

What I have to say is nothing new. Others have expressed the same thought and question and that is specifically — I cannot understand paying this individual anything but what's due him. And what's due him is his salary to May 5 — the day he resigned. His health benefits should be paid to May 5 — the day he resigned. If he pays a percentage of the health costs he should pay the town what's due. If he's due vacation time should he get paid for that? I don't think so since he resigned on his own volition. He should have known that with that move (resignation) he'd lose certain things — like more pay checks — like vacation time which evidently he had not taken — but he was not fired he resigned — he chose that route. He knew (or should have) that once he resigned he was forfeiting certain things — pay — vacation — health benefits — car mileage — other benefits of the job. He got an excellent salary ($101,365.75). He chose to give it up. He deserves the results of that "resignation" move.

As far as bringing into this picture the fact that we won't be paying out anything for the Town Manager for four months doesn't mean that we have to use that money for the ex-employee. It would seem that this was a "bonus" for the town's budget. Give it back to the taxpayers or use it to pay the interim Town Manager.

High marks for Buckley

TO THE EDITOR:

True leadership sometimes means being alone or unsupported in doing the right thing. Kudos to Barbara Buckley and her committee for taking the leadership role in raising money to reinstate three teaching positions in the Cohasset schools. They understand that keeping class sizes small is the single most important thing that can be done to ensure the best possible education for our children. They also understand that in order to achieve what is right, one must take advantage of every opportunity, even if it has never been done before or means being questioned in their conviction. Let us as a community support this opportunity to reinstate three teaching positions knowing in our hearts that what it will provide to our children is what the goal is and not get caught up in the political rhetoric of questioning whether it sets a funding precedence or dilutes the school budgeting process. As someone who sat in a school committee chair when the decision was made to unfund these positions, I can tell you that it was always the hope of that sitting committee to find a "creative or alternative funding" opportunity to save those positions. The committee hoped reexamining and restructuring employee health benefits might save enough money to once again support those positions. As that opportunity has not panned out for this funding cycle let us be glad and appreciative someone has stepped up to offer another way of reaching the same goal and support them while we still have the chance. Please don't wait until you must see for yourself that large class sizes are impediments to learning and that the success or failure of one single school year can make a huge difference in your child's classroom and learning success before you act. Time is running out. Let's not miss this opportunity. Send your check to Barbara Buckley. You'll be glad you did.

HEALTH NOTES

Food handling tips

Cooking outdoors was once only a summer activity shared with family and friends. Now more than half of Americans say they are cooking outdoors year round. So whether the snow is blowing or the sun is shining brightly, it's important to follow food safety guidelines to prevent harmful bacteria from multiplying and causing foodborne illness. Use these simple guidelines for grilling food safely.

• When shopping, buy cold food like meat and poultry last, right before checkout. Separate raw meat and poultry from other food in your shopping cart. To guard against cross-contamination — which can happen when raw meat or poultry juices drip on other food — put packages of raw meat and poultry into plastic bags.

• Plan to drive directly home from the grocery store. You may want to take a cooler with ice for perishables. Always refrigerate perishable food within 2 hours. Refrigerate within 1 hour when the temperature is above 90 °F.

• At home, place meat and poultry in the refrigerator immediately. Freeze poultry and ground meat that won't be used in 1 or 2 days; freeze other meat within 4 to 5 days.

• Completely defrost meat and poultry before grilling so it cooks more evenly. Use the refrigerator for slow, safe thawing or thaw sealed packages in cold water. You can microwave defrost if the food will be placed immediately on the grill.

• Meat and poultry can be marinated for several hours or days to tenderize or add flavor. Marinate food in the refrigerator, not on the counter. If some of the marinade is to be used as a sauce on the cooked food, reserve a portion of the marinade before putting raw meat and poultry in it. However, if the marinade used on raw meat or poultry is to be reused, make sure to let it come to a boil first to destroy any harmful bacteria.

• When carrying food to another location, keep it cold to minimize bacterial growth. Use an insulated cooler with sufficient ice or ice packs to keep the food at 40 °F or below. Pack food right from the refrigerator into the cooler immediately before leaving home. Keep the cooler in the coolest part of the car.

• Keep meat and poultry refrigerated until ready to use. Only take out the meat and poultry that will immediately be placed on the grill. When using a cooler, keep it out of the direct sun by placing it in the shade or shelter. Avoid opening the lid too often, which lets cold air out and warm air in. Pack beverages in one cooler and perishables in a separate cooler.

• Be sure there are plenty of clean utensils and platters. To prevent foodborne illness, don't use the same platter and utensils for raw and cooked meat and poultry. Harmful bacteria present in raw meat and poultry and their juices can contaminate safely cooked food.

• Precooking food partially in the microwave, oven, or stove is a good way of reducing grilling time. Just make sure that the food goes immediately on the preheated grill to complete cooking.

• Cook food to a safe internal temperature to destroy harmful bacteria. Meat and poultry cooked on a grill often browns very fast on the outside. Use a food thermometer to be sure the food has reached a safe internal temperature. Whole poultry should reach 180 °F; breasts, 170 °F. Hamburgers made of ground beef should reach 160 °F; ground poultry, 165 °F. Beef, veal, and lamb steaks, roasts and chops can be cooked to 145 °F. All cuts of pork should reach 160 °F. NEVER partially grill meat or poultry and finish cooking later.

• When reheating fully cooked meats like hot dogs, grill to 165 °F or until steaming hot. After cooking meat and poultry on the grill, keep it hot until served - at 140 °F or warmer.

Keep cooked meats hot by setting them to the side of the grill rack, not directly over the coals where they could overcook. At home, the cooked meat can be kept hot in a warm oven (approximately 200 °F), in a chafing dish or slow cooker, or on a warming tray.

• When taking food off the grill, use a clean platter. Don't put cooked food on the same platter that held raw meat or poultry. Any harmful bacteria present in the raw meat juices could contaminate safely cooked food.

In hot weather (above 90 °F), food should never sit out for more than 1 hour.

Patrolling the pizza people

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I betcha didn't know there is an official way to make an authentic Neapolitan pizza and it's given a seal of approval by L'Associazione Vera Pizza Napolitana, much like the French stamp their best wines "appellation controlee."

I discovered this last week when I read that the Italian Agriculture Ministry has issued a new set of rules governing the production of the Neapolitan pizza to protect it from what can only be called counterfeit pizza elsewhere in the European Union.

Pizza, I am told, originated in Naples when a baker found that he had some bread dough left over so he rolled it out in a sheet, slapped a slice of cheese and a dollop of tomato sauce on it and called it whatever the Italian phrase is for a "piece a pie."

This is like the Chinese cook in the western mining camp who was faced with getting rid of the day's left over vegetables, so he sautéed them in his wok and served them as an authentic Chinese dish. When they asked him what it was called he told them "chop suey."

Fortunately, the Chinese Agriculture Ministry has not yet set down rules for making chop suey, mostly because they've never heard of it.

But I digress . . .

The authentic Neapolitan pizza, the new guidelines specify, should be no more than 14 inches in diameter, no thicker than a 10th of an inch in the center and have a crust an eighth of an inch thick with a soft texture that is easily foldable.

Whoever heard of eating pizza with a knife and fork? Eating pizza is best performed as a hands on job.

The new rules recognize only three types of Neapolitan pizza — marinara with garlic and oregano, margherita with basil and mozzarella cheese, and extra-margherita with fresh tomatoes, basil and buffalo mozzarella.

What, no pepperoni?

And that's not all. The pizza dough must be rolled out manually — and presumably measured by hand, too — then baked in wood-burning ovens at a temperature of 905 degrees.

Then, and only then, will an Italian pizzeria be allowed to display the label "guaranteed traditional specialty."

"These norms protect one of the most ancient and most important gastronomic traditions," Antonio Pace, president of the Italian Pizza Makers Union, told the Associated Press.

As investigative journalists, armed with a set of the new pizza making rules, my friend and I set out last week to see how an American pizzeria stacks up gastronomically.

Bertucci's in Hingham is one of a chain of Italian restaurants that boasts it is one of a handful of restaurants in America that has the Certificate of Authenticity from L'Associazione Vera Pizza Napoletana.

My friend took a tape measure from her purse . . . Whatsa matter, doesn't every woman carry a tape measure in her purse? The pizza was 12 inches in diameter, well within the 14-inch limit. Other requirements checked out, too.

Then we sent the waitress out into the kitchen to find out the temperature of the oven. The Globe Spotlight Team . . . Woodward and Bernstein . . . eat your heart out.

"About 850 degrees," she reported.

Bertucci's had better shape up if they want to keep that certificate.

Time to look back at 42 years of backyard birding

A BIRDER'S-EYE VIEW

JOANNE C. NORTON

For 42 years we have lived in the same house. For all these years we have hung bird feeders in the backyard. Our house sits on three-quarters of an acre of land about 0.1 mile from Rte. 228 in one direction, and about 0.7 mile from downtown Hingham in the other direction. Hidden away, our street has very little traffic, and our backyard dips down on one side into a glacial "kettle hole". Across the street is an open lot that drops off steeply to the Home Meadows salt marsh.

Over the years we have experimented with different types of bird feeders, their placement, and kinds of food. We have worked to outwit the squirrels. I have kept lists of birds visiting the backyard. We have been privileged to have a perfect viewing spot at our kitchen table, which faces a picture window looking out on the backyard. From this window for the past15 years I have done FeederWatch counts for Cornell Lab of Ornithology. Our "yard list" totals 102 species. We get common feeder birds such as juncos, chickadees, titmice, Downy Woodpeckers, cardinals, sparrows and finches. From time to time we have unusual birds as well. In the Blizzard of '78, a Snow Bunting flew onto our patio, dug a hole in the developing snowdrift and settled down to stay for the duration of the storm.

When we first moved to Hingham, a large elm tree graced the middle of our backyard. One day a Wood Duck flew into the top of it. Our children, who were fairly young at the time, were slightly incredulous that their mother was calling them to see a duck in the top of the tree. This was an opportunity to tell them about a duck that does not spend all its time in the water. Eventually the elm tree succumbed to Dutch elm disease. While the tree was in the throes of dying, and before the remains were carted away, we had regular visits from a pair of Hairy Woodpeckers. We have not seen them in our yard since. Baltimore Orioles used to nest in that elm tree. Now they nest elsewhere, but bring their fledged young to feed in our mulberry tree.

We have a small fishpond with a short waterfall using recirculating pond water. This is especially attractive to robins and waxwings, and occasionally warblers. Inch-long pet store goldfish gradually grow to six or eight inches in length. They eat whatever food falls naturally into the pond, with no supplements of store food from us. The fish survive the winter as long as we keep a hole in the ice to provide oxygen. This we do by running the pump a couple of times a day. In the last two years, our pond has been discovered by both Great Egrets and Snowy Egrets, who find the fishing as easy as the proverbial "shooting fish in a barrel". Survival for the fish depends on how fast they can burrow into the mud at the bottom.

All in all we have seen 15 species of warblers, but not necessarily the same ones each year. On rare occasions we have seen Scarlet Tanagers, a Swainson's Thrush, a White-winged Crossbill and a Fox Sparrow. Some years bring Pine Siskins or Common Redpolls. The American Tree Sparrow tends to come after a snowstorm, but not on a regular basis. Hummingbirds have eluded me until a couple of years ago. We finally got the feeder in the right place and enough red flowers to attract them. Three years ago we had a Yellow-bellied Sapsucker for the first time, and in 1981, we had a juvenile Red-headed Woodpecker. Downies and flickers are regulars. Two years ago we had visits from a Red-bellied Woodpecker.

Cardinals and catbirds regularly nest in our yard. In the past, chickadees and House Wrens used a bird house for their nests. More recently, it is the Carolina Wrens that have taken up year-round residence, nesting in our tool shed. For the past four years, a pair of Great-crested Flycatchers has successfully raised young in a dead apple tree. Each year it rots a little bit more. So far this spring the flycatchers are calling their distinctive "Weeep" sound, but have not set up housekeeping in the apple tree.

Bird feeders are a familiar sight in Joanne Norton's backyard.

We hear, and occasionally see, Great-Horned Owls and Eastern Screech-Owls most years. One summer night I heard a Barred Owl calling loudly from across the street. We see a lot of birds fly overhead, such as Chimney Swifts, Canada Geese, various kinds of gulls, and of course, Red-tailed Hawks and Turkey Vultures. Cooper's Hawks and Sharp-shinned Hawks are irregular visitors and have been seen taking birds directly from our patio or a feeder.

Two years ago we had many visits from a young Red-tailed Hawk who liked to sit on one of our feeder poles for 20-30 minutes at a time. The birds seemed to know that these hawks do not usually eat birds, because they continued to feed while he was there. They did, however, go to the other feeding station, rather than land directly beneath him! On an unusually warm early spring day, the hawk flew in carrying a snake which was 3-4 feet long. He landed on a branch and proceeded to tear apart and eat the whole snake. I assume the early warmth lured the snake out, but that it was too sluggish to get away.

My records show that all through the 1970s, Purple Finches came to our feeders as well as House Finches, whereas now, a Purple Finch is a rarity. There used to be more White-throated Sparrows than juncos in the winter. Now we see whitethroats during migration, but not the rest of the winter. It is the juncos that come in the largest numbers to our winter feeders. Mourning Doves have become occasional visitors, rather than arriving in groups of six or more to sunbathe in the dirt near the foundation of our house. Back in the '60s and '70s, we had pheasants and bobwhites wandering through the yard. These have not come for years. Instead we see Wild Turkeys meandering through the neighborhood from time to time. Wood Thrushes used to call regularly from across the street. Now we rarely hear them on our property. We used to see Red-breasted Nuthatches fairly often in the late '70s and early '80s. Then they disappeared until 1999 when a pair stayed around all winter.

This will be my last "A Birder's Eye View" column. Soon we will move to Hanover, New Hampshire. The birding will be different there. I will miss having easy access to seabirds, but I look forward to learning more about northern woodland species. Perhaps I will actually see a Three-toed Woodpecker, or a Bicknell's Thrush, or a Boreal Chickadee!

Joanne Norton is an avid birder, counts birds for Project FeederWatch, bands birds at Manomet Center for Conservation Sciences, and until recently has been the Master Bander for the New England Wildlife Center.

Two officers who crossed paths with members of his family were placed on paid administrative leave last October. Two former dispatchers have filed sexual harassment lawsuits and the former animal control officer, who reported to Jackson, is also suing the town claiming unfair termination.

Sullivan said there has been no communication from Jackson that his retirement has anything to do with the two officers who are on paid administrative leave. However, he said the town and the department are working together to remedy the situation with the two officers, and the chief's retirement may bring the town one step closer toward that resolution.

Jackson has been on vacation an unavailable for comment on his retirement plans.

Jackson has a long history with the department and the town. He is a 1966 graduate of Cohasset High School who went on to graduate from the University of Virginia in 1970 with a bachelor of arts in foreign affairs. In 1978, he obtained a bachelor of science degree from Northeastern University in criminal justice. He served four years on active duty in the United States Navy. After his active duty he joined the Naval Reserves, until his retirement with the rank of captain in 2000.

Jackson has served as a permanent police officer in Cohasset since 1979, and was hired by former chief Randy Feola. In 1983 he was promoted to the rank of sergeant. He also served as police prosecutor for nine years under former chief Brian Noonan.

Jackson was named chief in February 2002 after a grueling search process that eventually narrowed down a field of more than 54 candidates to four. Jackson was sworn in that March to replace chief Noonan who retired after serving the town for 28 years. Jackson was the only local finalist for the job.

Sullivan said at this point, he isn't sure whether the candidate the board will interview Thursday could potentially be a candidate for the permanent position. However, when the time is right to begin looking for a new permanent chief, a search committee will be convened to help with the process.

Selectmen will be interviewing a new candidate for the position of interim police chief Thursday night at 7:30 in the Selectmen's meeting room. All are welcome to attend.

A grateful town says 'thank you' to veterans front of his parent's home on the common, looking on in awe as the town's "great veterans and stoic gold star mothers" passed by. "These were the men who defeated the Nazis, beat back the Japanese, preserved Democracy in South Korea, and fought communists in Vietnam," he said.

But just as he recognized the courage of those who fought in battle, he acknowledged the courage it takes for mothers, who against all maternal instincts, have time and time again sent their sons and daughters into harm's way to fight for our country. "To our Gold Star and Blue Star mothers. Thank you. Thank you for honoring us all with your presence. Thank you all for your sacrifice and patriotism. Thank you all for your dignity, and most of all, thank you all for your selflessness."

Although Atkinson currently works at the Pentagon, he was deployed to the Middle East on Memorial Day 2003, and had been stationed in both Kuwait and Iraq during this past year. He paid a special tribute to his own mother, who like so many others has had to send her child off to battle. "To my own Blue Star mother, thank you for my life, my values, and your courage during the times I have been in harms way. I love you."

Over the years, Atkinson said our country has experienced many threats to freedom, and while they have come from many places and in many forms, they have all shared a common purpose, and that is the "fervent desire to break down the great spirit of freedom and liberty that each one of us cherish, and yes all too often take for granted as Americans. Just as generations have in the past, and will continue to do in the future, our country's young soldiers will be sent to fight in places like Afghanistan and Iraq to prevent the destruction of our freedom and "to ensure that which is worthy of defending will be carried forward to the next generation."

"I cannot offer more than words here today and my words are a poor exchange for their lives, and the sorrow that some here — and so many elsewhere — have endured. What we can all do here today is to ensure that what our brothers and sisters-in-arms, our sons, our friends did will not be forgotten and who they are will always be remembered. Remembered for as long as young Americans go forth to serve and defend our Nation's interests."

State Lacrosse Tourney
Tri-County @ Cohasset
Today, 5 p.m.

The Cohasset High boys lacrosse team will open postseason play this afternoon (5 p.m.) at home versus Tri-County.

The Skippers earned the sixth overall seed in the Div. 3 state tourney on the strength of their difficult schedule and 9-7 overall record, and the home game that goes along with that honor. Tri-County received the 11th seed in the 12-team field after a 12-5 season against what MIAA officials felt was a far less competitive schedule than Cohasset's.

A win today would send the Skippers to Martha's Vineyard (third seed, 14-3), likely on either Saturday or Sunday, a team the Skippers fell to in the season opener way back on April 7, 7-6.

Of course, first year Skippers head coach Stu Curran will tell anyone who'll listen that the team he has right now barely resembles that squad he started out with—something well attested to, it seems, by the fact the Skippers won six of their final seven games, the one loss a 10-9 setback to fifth seeded Scituate.

For starters, the coach notes, there has been the return from injury of proven seniors Rob Carpenter and Mike Rasmussen. Carpenter provides some much needed depth and athleticism in the midfield while Rasmussen's return seems to have made over the entire offense.

Early in the season, junior Jake Previte and sophomore Aiden Buick were doing the

No CHS tracksters advance to All-State meet

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High track season is officially over.

None of the five CHS tracksters who qualified for this past Saturday's State Class D meet at Weston High were able to snare top four spots, so no one will be representing the school at this Saturday's All-State championships at Holyoke High School.

The highest finish by any Cohasset High trackster was turned in by senior captain Jenn Buckley in the 800, with a seventh place finish (2:28.21). Junior teammate Mary Silvia was right on her heels (2:29.54) in eighth.

Buckley also turned in a 10th place finish in the javelin (94-feet-11-inches) to close out her phenomenal high school athletic career that has seen her earn Mariner All-Scholastic nods in all three athletic seasons (soccer the past two falls, basketball this past winter and track the last two springs).

"Replacing someone like Jenn seems almost impossible at this moment in time," said CHS coach Al Lafountain. "She just did so many things well and was so committed."

A pair of Cohasset junior sprinters also showed respectably on Saturday.

Lindsay Kennedy placed 11th in the 100 (13.68) and Nicole Whitney was 12th in the 200 (28.74).

The 4x800 relay team of Buckley, Whitney, Silvia and sophomore Lisa Musto also placed seventh (10:29.10).

Musto showed a lot of guts just getting out there, as she was running with a pair of stress fractures.

Most of these times were well off previous bests by these athletes, which may or may not have had something to do with Cohasset High's prom being held the night before the meet.

"That's a problem we seem to run into a lot at state meet time, what with proms and graduations," said LaFountain. "I wish the MIAA would take a look at

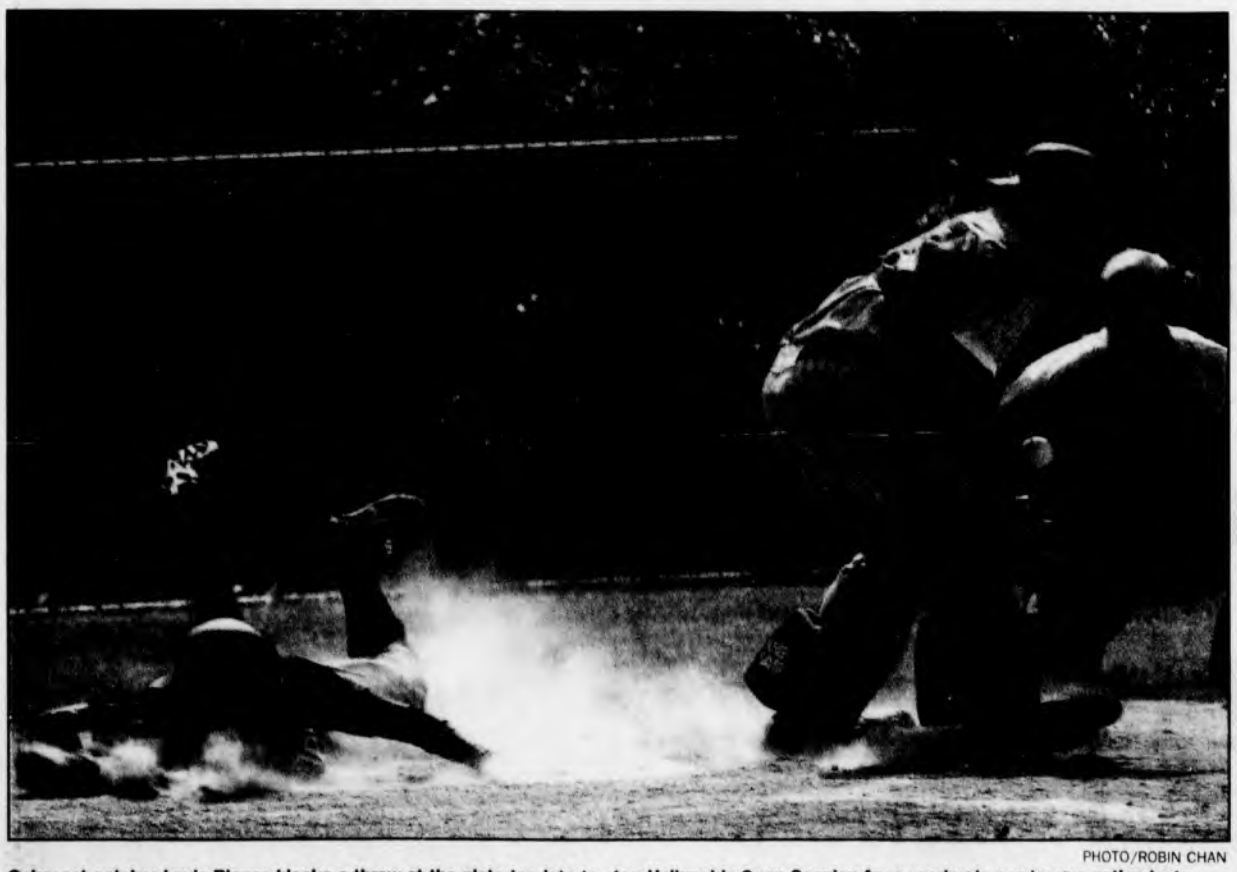
One man wrecking crew

Sacred Heart's Prugno delivers death blow to CHS baseball playoff hopes

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Tom Prugno was a one-man wrecking crew: at least where the Cohasset High baseball team's dream of reaching the postseason was concerned.

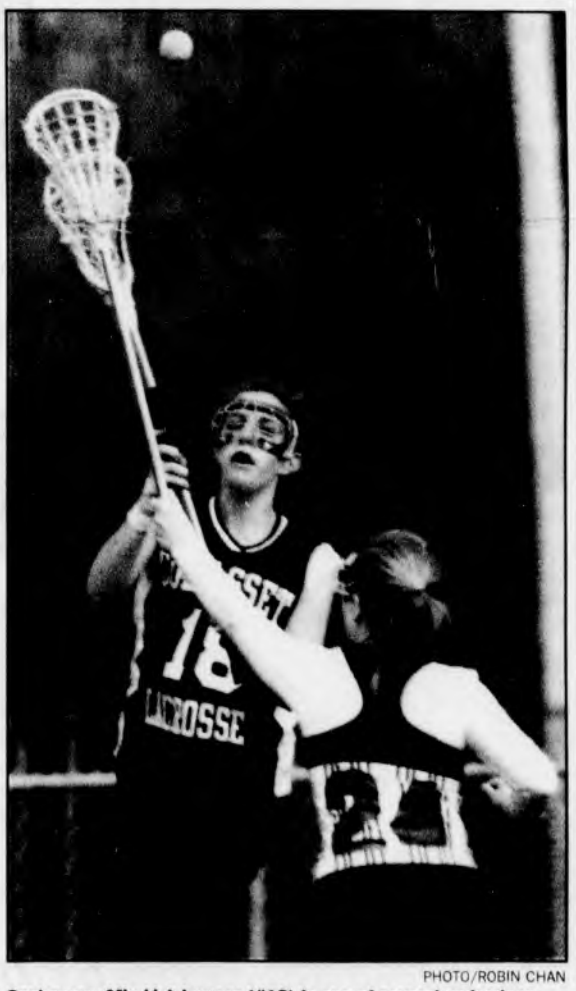
The Sacred Heart senior threw a one-hitter and knocked in three of the four runs with a pair of laser beam triples to lead his team to a 4-1 victory over Cohasset on Thursday, officially knocking the Skippers out of postseason contention.



"In reality, Prugno looked like a man among boys out there," said Cohasset coach Al Galotta, who saw his team drop to 7-10 with the loss, with just one game remaining on the season. "I was told that (Prugno) was going to play in college next year, and I can't say that surprises me. He should do very well at the next level."

The Skippers scored their lone run in the first inning. After senior captain Mike Dooley reached third on an outfield error, team leading hitter Louis Blanco (.436) doubled him home with a shot to left center. But that would be it for Skippers offense on the afternoon.

So Dooley was the tough luck loser, striking out 12 while scattering just five hits. Unfortunately, a few of the baserunners he let reach were batting just in front of Prugno.



The Skippers had topped Sacred Heart on the road just 24 hours earlier, 7-3, to keep their playoff hopes alive a little longer. Sophomore Chris Bryan pitched his best game of the year—a

Adding insult to injury

Injury remains the prevalent theme of lady laxers season right to the end

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

It seemed sadly fitting that their season would end with an injury at the center of it all.

If injury was not already widely regarded as the predominant theme of the 2004 Cohasset High girls lacrosse season, it most assuredly passed all other story lines when team leading scorer Nicole Turgiss went down with an ankle sprain just five minutes into Saturday's first round state tourney showdown at Mansfield.

The Lady Skippers were up by a 2-1 score over the higher seeded host Hornets, with one of the goals coming from Turgiss, when the high scoring senior forward rolled her ankle. Mansfield went on to outscore the locals by a 9-1 advantage the rest of the way to pull out a 10-3 decision and advance to a date yesterday with top seeded Westwood (20-0).

"Honestly, I think a healthy Turgiss could have made all the difference in the world in that one," said third year Lady Skippers head coach Torin Sweeney. "Mansfield really didn't seem to have anyone wit the speed needed to match up with Nicole, and that was opening up chances for not only her but other people."

The Skippers were able to score once more before halftime, sending the hosts into the break clinging to a narrow 4-3 lead, but it was all Hornets in the second half, as the break chance their coaching staff a chance to install a new defensive game plan.

The loss of Turgiss, one of the few veteran players who remained relatively healthy all season, made it possible for the Hornets to double team both key Cohasset playmaker Ashley Faber and second team

Leaders in every sense

Graduating seniors played vital role in moving softball program forward

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Let's quickly get the bad news out of the way. On May 26, the Skippers softball team traveled to Sacred Heart, got off the bus, lost 13- 3, got back on the bus and called it a day…or should we say they called it a 5-13 season.

Beyond a fifth inning double by Alida Tanghlerini, there wasn't a whole lot for the Lady Skippers to crow over following this thorough pummeling.

Coach Deb Bostwick expressed frustration about the game.

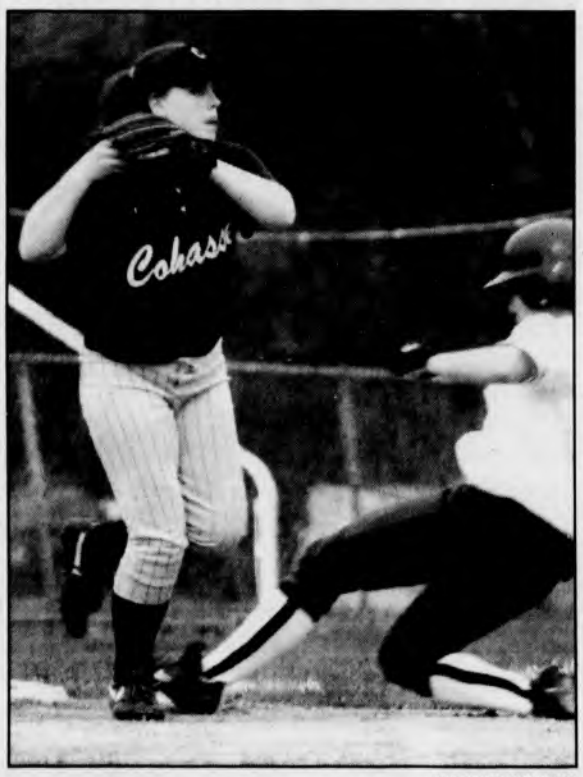
"Both our hitting and our defense was flat," she said. "This was a disappointing last game."

The coach seemed happy to shift her comments away from the game and towards her graduating seniors.

Take UConn-bound Danielle Pinkus for example. Coach Bostwick simply described Danielle as the "quarterback of the infield." Danielle proved steadfast at the crucial shortstop position where she supplied the Skippers with Nomar-like fielding. She also held her own at the plate batting in the cleanup position.

Senior Caitlin Gontarz will also stay in New England. She wants to continue playing softball when she enrolls at UNH. Her Cohasset teammates will miss her zippy and accurate throws. Though Caitlin wished she hit more consistently throughout the season, her teammates credit her with hitting several of the game winning blasts.

Co-captain Rachel Doyle will head south this fall to the University of Richmond. Coach Bostwick described Doyle as "a dedicated leader." Rachel started out the year at third base and switched to second base after game five. Batting out of the number two position, Rachel established a nice reputation for her well-placed bunts and line drive hits to the right side of the field.



Like teammate Rachel Doyle, outfielder Caitlin Condon will leave the New England area for the University of South Carolina. Deb Bostwick admired Condon's ability to strategically think on her feet. Caitlin reliably backed up teammates who might have missed a ground ball or overthrown a base.

Head Coach Deb Bostwick and Assistant Coach Deb Beal expressed great respect for their senior players. In all her years of coaching, Coach Bostwick said this was the first time she could recall none of her players skipping a game or a practice.

At the end of the last home game, Coach Bostwick presented the four seniors with flowers. Many memories and a few tears were shed at the event.

Knowing that their Cohasset days were growing shorter, Bostwick reflected that "these were four ladies with style, charisma, dedication, and love for the game."

"They always made each other feel good about themselves," continued the coach. "They depended on each other, but never excluded others. As they move on, I want Caitlin C., Caitlin G., Rachel, and Danielle, to know how much they've helped me in building the team I have today."

Swinging into action

Girls tennis team appears primed to defend state title

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

As defending state champs, Cohasset has been the highlight of everyone's schedule this season.

And despite the intensity of all their matches, the team has passed just about every test along the way. With a 3-2 win over Hingham last week, Cohasset finished the regular season with a 17-1 record and a 14-match winning streak.

Last Wednesday's match was the girls' second win over Hingham in eight days, although, much like the first one, it was not easy.

Both matches were tied at two as players and spectators turned their attention to the fifth and final match. This time, it came down to number three singles player Chelsea Grossman.

The sophomore got off to a slow start against Hingham's Jackie Cartier, losing the first set, 4-6. After making some adjustments, however, she took the next two sets and the match, 6-3 and 6-1.

One of the hardest hitters on the Cohasset team, Grossman had to change her style and simply out-volley her opponent. Cohasset head coach Gigi Meehan said her player showed some maturity in being able to diversify her game.

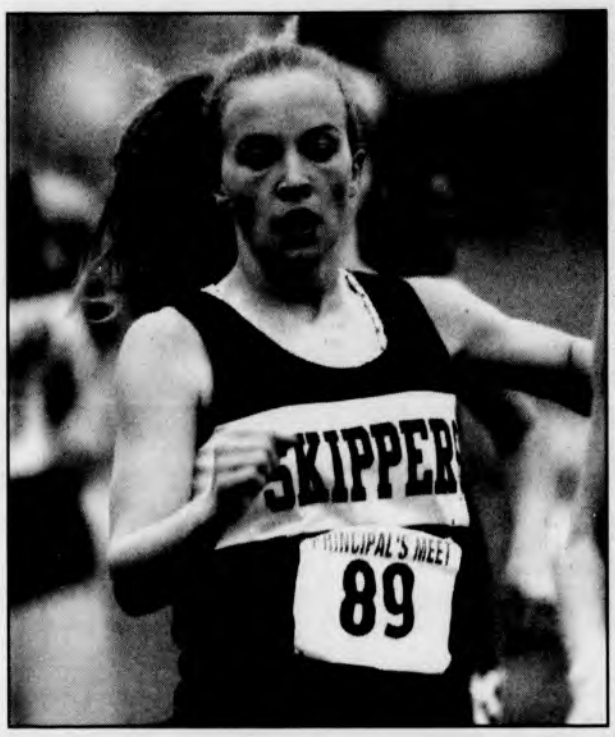
"Chelsea was getting very frustrated, but she was able to adapt her style," Meehan said. "She was able to out-hit the girl and wear her out. That was the strategy."

Another encouraging sign for Cohasset was a win at number two singles for senior Holly Graham. After taking the first set, 6-3, Graham and Hingham's Jamie Landers battled to a tiebreaker in the second set, which Graham won.

The two have played each other a few times in the past, and Meehan said it was a credit to Graham and her ability to pull out a tough match.

"Holly played really well," said the coach. "Jamie played great; probably the best match I have seen her play against Holly. It was great for Holly mentally to get back in there and win."

To complete the singles sweep, junior Liz Stone continued her undefeated season in team play with a straight-set 6-3, 6-1 victory.



The win wrapped up a 17-1 regular season for the Lady Skippers, including a perfect 12-0 in South Shore League play, and was expected to assure them of a top four slot when the MIAA released its seedings and pairings yesterday afternoon for the Div. 2 state tourney. Matches could begin as soon as today. Of course, the Lady Skippers would appear to have a good shot of drawing a first round bye.

that and maybe change the schedule of their meets. Why couldn't we do the meets on a Friday or a Sunday?

"It's tough to ask kids not to attend their proms or graduations so that they can run in a track meet. Those are huge parts of the high school experience. There's no reason they shouldn't be able to do both."

bulk of the scoring, but the addition of the big and skilled Rasmussen alongside them on the attack seems to have let each settle into a more comfortable role. Previte now has more room to move without the ball and find his spots, while the heady Buick has settled more into a playmaker's role.

"Those three guys are complimenting each other better and better each time out," noted Curran.

There was also a period of adjustment early on at the defensive end, with Curran bringing in a few systematic wrinkles, but the quartet of senior captains Mike Devine and Conor Buick, junior Casey Coleman and freshman standout Jeff Brown would appear to have it all just about down now.

And playing in front of a proven senior goalie like Nick Murphy-- who played perhaps his best game of the season in the regular season ending 11-8 win over Canton last Wednesday, with 16 saves-- only makes things easier.

"That has become an extremely cohesive unit," said Curran. "Those guys have shut down some really talented scorers over the last several weeks."

The midfield is also much improved, with players like Sam Steele, Trevor Brady, Mark Davis and DeWayne Morris having really stepped it up over the second half of the season, according to Curran.

I like the way we're playing right now, and I think we're battle ready," concluded Curran. "Sometimes this is just about getting hot at the right time, and right now I think we're hot."

high scorer Lauren Rizzotti. The dinged up Skippers simply did not have any answers.

The team will lose five starters to graduation, including Turgiss and Faber. The others will be Chisten Reardon, Meg Marr and Coleen Richardson.

Nevertheless, Sweeney sounds as if he genuinely expects his team to be better next season, and points to players like Rizzotti (41 goals), Molly Kirk, Mackenzie Holway, Miranda Lanzalotti and Lindsay Durkin as potential cornerstone players.

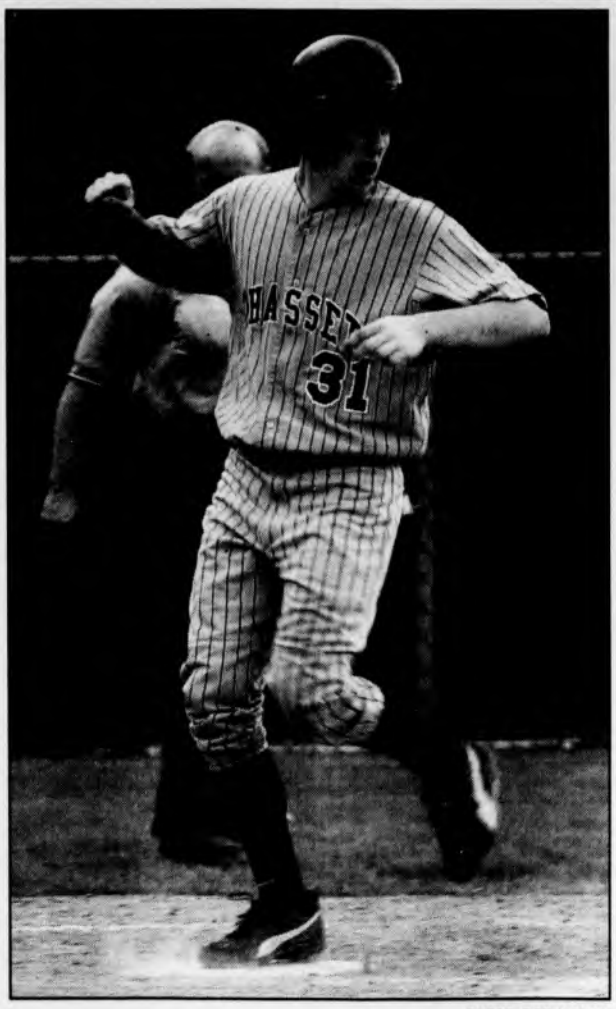
Dodgers scuttle Pirates

Major League round-up

The highlight of the week was a fantastic Dodger win over the Pirates. With the lead changing hands throughout the game, the Dodgers came out on top 11 -10. Jake Wheelright led the scoring charge for the Dodgers with a huge triple to center field. Jay Salerno, Pat McCormack and Justin Yeager all contributed with strong hitting. Getting players into scoring position was a key strategy for the Dodgers and then they focused on getting the ball into play. Chris Brown pitched the last two and fi innings for the men in blue securing the win, along with Jay Salerno. Congratulations to the Dodgers !



The game of the week was the match up between the Mets and the Rangers. On a cold, raw evening on Chase field, more like March than like May, the two teams squared off in a battle of wills, a battle of arms and a battle of defensive strength. Graham Stevenson took the mound for the Rangers and Robbie McCunney pitched for the Mets. Batter after batter faced the pitching dynamos. Strong defensive play and strong pitching kept base runners to a minimum for both sides. The first three innings saw each side retiring the lineups, and no players reached scoring position. Things looked good for the Mets in the bottom of the third, as McCunney struck out the first two batters. However, on a passed ball on third strike, Christian Allard motored to first and got on base. "Wheels" Allard then stole second. Jamie Faber for the Rangers was at bat and walked, and meanwhile, Allard stole third. Faber's at bat was great, fouling off 3-4 pitches by McCunney. The next Ranger then popped up to third, where Met's third baseman, Jeff Durkin, confidently waved off his teammates and caught the ball to end the Ranger's scoring threat. In the top of the 4th, the Rangers retired the first three batters. In the bottom of the 4th, McCunney returned the favor and struck out the side. In the top of the 5th, the game got really interesting. Tom Condon, who once again shows great composure catching for the firing Robbie McCunney, hit one to the right field fence and reached home on two overthrows by the Rangers. The score was 1-0, Mets. The rest of the inning went scoreless. A line drive by Colin Tarpey was caught by a sliding Dean Driscoll in center field for the final out and an end to a potential Met's scoring threat. In the bottom of the 5th, Dean Driscoll then singled. He stole second with the next batter, and then Jeff Charles came to the plate. Jeff hit a double to right field that drove in Driscoll, the tying run. The game was tied 1-1. In the top of the 6th, Max McCleave had a base hit and Sam Leahy came in to pinch run for McCleave. The next batter popped up, Robert Jones walked and then McCunney gets to the plate. A solid double drove in two runs, and the Mets were up 3-1. The Mets then left men on base with the score 3-1. The bottom of the 6th for the home team Rangers began with a Christian Allard walk (who then stole second). Jamie "Big Hit" Faber then hit a double to deep left field to drive in Allard. The next Ranger grounded out to first, but Faber reached third. John Giuggio then comes to the plate and connects for a solid base hit that drives in Faber for the tying run. Giuggio then stole second, and then third and was on his way to stealing home, when the Ranger at the plate struck out to end the game. The final score, Mets 3, Rangers 3.

Cohasset sophomore Chris Bryan, seen here rounding third in win last week over Holbrook, pitched his best game of the season, last Wednesday—a complete game 4 hit, two walk, eight strikeout performance to lift the Skippers to a 7-3 win over Sacred Heart.

complete game 4 hit, two walk, eight strikeout performance—to notch the win.

"Chris really stepped up in a big situation there," said Gallotta. "Hopefully, that kind of performance will give him a boost of confidence going into next season."

The Skippers were scheduled to play a final meaningless home game with Mashpee on Tuesday, but it was rained out, and will not be made up, as both teams are now out of postseason contention.

acted at one point or another, in many different family combinations. In the CDC's production of "Oliver", the whole family participated, including mom, Betts, dad, Wisner, son Wiz, 15, who played the lead role, and daughter Polly, 12. However, for this show, like the Pratts, only the girls will be on stage as Betts will play the Scarecrow and Polly will play a flying monkey.

Betts said having her daughter in the play has been very helpful to her because Polly has always been there to rehearse lines. Because Polly goes to school at Derby Academy, they have some time in the morning on the way to school to rehearse, and Betts said Polly has been a wonderful help.

But for Polly one of the best parts of having her mother in the same play is that as a flying monkey, she gets to pretend to pull the Scarecrow's arm off. "I get to beat my mom up on stage," she said with a smile.

For the Sisson-Game family, all four members will be involved on opening night. Father David Game will play one of the polishers in the land of Oz, while sons Sam, 11 and Adam, 6 will play a member of the lollypop guild and a munchkin. Mom Sally Sisson will play the flute in the orchestra.

While this will be the second production the two boys have been in together, there are sure to be more to come. Sam has had the acting bug since age 6 1/2, when he auditioned for his first play and landed the lead role of "Simba". Has been in five Children's Drama Workshop productions and a TV commercial for the "Arthur" show on PBS. This is his fourth production with the Cohasset Dramatic Club. While Adam also enjoys being on stage, Sally says he is a little more shy on stage than Sam. If his acting career doesn't pan out, there may be a future in his love of soccer and baseball.

Sam may have caught the acting bug from his father, as David has quite a long history of acting. He has held lead roles in many Shakespearean productions back in school and has also directed several plays. During college, he even wrote and performed comedy sketches at Cambridge Footlights, where the Monty Python Players got their start.

While Sally is very proud of all her boys, she said she'll leave the time in the spotlight to them, as she is very content playing in the orchestra for the show.

Performances of the Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of "The Wizard of Oz" will be held at Cohasset Town Hall June 4,5,6,11,12, and 13. Friday and Saturday night performances begin at 7:30 and Sunday matinees are at 2 p.m. Tickets are $12 and can be purchased at Buttonwood Books and Springbrook Kids in Cohasset, as well as the Front Street Bookshop in Scituate. Tickets can also be purchased at the door or ordered by phone at (781) 544-0304. Girl Scout troops receive $2 off the ticket price when reserving group seating. Contact Wendy Guyder at (781) 545-1655 for more information and reservations.

Recycling new focus during arts festival

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While most Cohasset residents see the South Shore Art Center's Arts Festival on the Common as the perfect kickoff to summer, members of the South Shore Recycling Cooperative see it as the perfect event to help promote recycling in the community.

Throughout the three-day festival, slated for Friday June 18 through Sunday June 20, visitors will be encouraged to toss their bottles and cans into recycle bins. Now in its 49th year, this will be the first time the festival has taken on the mission to recycle, and those involved with the project expect it will be a great success.

"It's a great opportunity for us to do something very positive," said events coordinator Diane Kennedy, adding the project would not have come to fruition without help from Merle Brown and the South Shore Recycling Cooperative. "We didn't have the funding or the professionals to help us out," she said, but added with the help from the Co-op, "I think it's going to work out tremendously well for us."

As chairman of the Co-op, Brown said upon hearing his organization had received a grant from the state's Department of Environmental Protection, he immediately thought of the festival as a potential project. The grant was awarded for the specific purpose of expanding recycling capabilities at large events throughout the South Shore.

"I thought it was a good opportunity to recycle," said Brown, because it is a three-day long event that draws large crowds and could promote awareness to a wide range of people.

Kennedy said she estimates there will be roughly 9,000 visitors to Cohasset during the festival, depending on the weather, and recycling should be very manageable. Since the food is usually served in one area of the grounds, it will help restrict food containers to one area, and bins for recycling will be readily available. She also said bins will be located around the premises and crew members designated specifically to help boost recycling will be on hand to encourage visitors to place their cans and bottles in the appropriate containers.

"I think we can do it very successfully," she said.

Kennedy said the help from the Co-op will greatly help the art center because trash cleanup will no longer fall solely on its shoulders. "We do have a crew for trash management," but the additional help will allow the art center to use its crew differently, freeing up staff to attend to some of the other aspects of the festival.

Brown said during the festival, he hopes he will be able to recruit some helpers from the DEP, local Boy Scout troops, and some high school students.

For more information on the Arts Festival, please visit the South Shore Art Center's web site at www.ssac.org. For more information on the South Shore Recycling Cooperative, please visit their web site at www.ssrc.info.

'It's Not History' - Survivors of clergy sexual abuse tell their stories

The Scituate Affiliate of Voice of the Faithful is sponsoring an enlightening talk and discussion at the Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center, 16 Hull St (Route 228), Hingham on Thursday, June 10 from 7-9 p.m. The program is entitled "It's Not History" - Survivors of Clergy Sexual Abuse Tell Their Stories.

Despite the diminishing publicity about the sexual abuse scandal, the effects of abuse do not go away. Oftentimes left on their own to deal with the issues created by abuse, the survivors need support, especially from all Catholics. VOTF is committed to offering that support. Too often, the sexual abuse scandal in the Boston Archdiocese has been viewed and depicted as abuse directed at boys only. While many of the victims have been boys, there have been many girls sexually abused by clergy as well. This program will present the experiences of both genders. At the event, Bill Gately and Jeannie Cratty will talk about how they have dealt with the trauma of their abuse.

Bill Gately is the New England Co-coordinator of Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests (SNAP). In his teens, in the late 60's, he was abused by a Maryknoll priest. Today, Mr. Gately works as a mental health counselor and is studying for a doctorate in counseling psychology. He has been a frequent spokesperson for those who have been sexually abused. Mr. Gately is an accomplished speaker with a riveting tale to tell.

Jeannie Cratty is a victim advocate for SNAP. She is a survivor of childhood clergy sexual abuse who reached adulthood before coming forward with her story of abuse by the family's parish priest. Ms. Cratty, accompanied by her parents, was a speaker (along with Archbishop O'Malley) at the "Clergy Sexual Abuse: Models of Assessment and Treatment," conference for mental health professionals at Boston College in January of this year. The conference was sponsored by the B.C. Graduate School of Social Work.

If you are troubled by the abuse scandal and would like to support survivors and learn how they cope with the effects of abuse, you won't want to miss this event. The speakers have a powerful story to tell. All are welcome. This is a free event, but freewill donations will be appreciated.

For additional information, call Roger Twyman of Scituate VOTF at 781-545-5242.

The Perfect Gift For Dad!

"The Model 88CD is sort of an engineering marvel..." – Gary Krakow for MSNBC

In 1998 Cambridge SoundWorks introduced the best-sounding table radio ever—the Model 88 by Henry Kloss.® With wide-range sound, a terrific FM tuner, dual audio inputs and a built-in powered subwoofer, Model 88 set new standards of performance in its category. Brian Fenton of Stereo Review called Model 88, "the best I've heard." Before long, it was the most successful new product ever introduced by Cambridge SoundWorks.

Town Planner has baby boy

Town Planner Liz Harrington gave birth Saturday morning to a beautiful baby boy. Jonathan Robert Manning weighed in at 8 pounds 4 ounces and both mom and baby are doing well.

Construction to start at Our World playground

Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said after meeting with Muffy Antico of Project Playground and Carl Sestito, DPW Superintendent, it seems as if construction for a new playground behind the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum should begin within the next few weeks.

Buckley said Paul Barry has volunteered to do most of the site work and the DPW has agreed to clear brush and repair the fences. In addition, the DPW has agreed to spruce up the adjacent basketball courts, and will fill and seal the cracks. Jack Worley of the Recreation Department and the Basketball Boosters said they will provide new backboards for the courts as well.

In addition, Roger Lowe, one of the Trustees of the Library, has forwarded photos of a "very tastefully constructed" skateboard park in Marshfield that could be a wonderful addition to the site. A T-ball field and walking path could also be accommodated on site.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she was very glad to see the walking path implemented that could be used by senior citizens in the community.

Buckley said currently the plans for the skateboard park and T-ball fields are all conceptual, but plans can hopefully move forward from here. Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said in the event the Cook property uses the library property as a leeching field, the treated water will flow under the parking lot and would not affect the ability to have a have either a skateboard park or T-ball field.

Salute to the soldiers of D-Day

The lives of billions of people were changed by a few hundred thousand on June 6, 1944, 60 years ago this year. Allied forces storming the beaches of Normandy, France, finally established a solid landward base from which to begin an eastern push through Nazi-controlled France and across Europe into Germany, ultimately bringing an end to the greatest conflict the world has ever known.

The Fort Revere Park & Preservation Society invites one and all to remember the soldiers of D-Day at a brief memorial ceremony at Frenchman's Park on Telegraph Hill, Fort Revere Park, on Sunday, June 6, at 9 a.m. A benediction will be performed before the playing of taps and the raising of the American flag.

For information contact John Galluzzo, President, Fort Revere Park & Preservation Society, at 781-724-7131 or Matt Tobin, DCR Site Supervisor, at 617-727-4468.

Lobster rolls at the Festival on Common

Lobster lovers will thrill to hear that First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church on the Common will again be holding its lobster roll sale Friday, June 18; Saturday, June 19, and Sunday, June 20. The rolls will be sold all day long during the South Shore Arts Center's Festival on the Common. These are all-meat lobster rolls accompanied by a bag of potato chips for $10. each. LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

HEARING LOSS AND BALDNESS

In physical terms, most age-related hearing loss stems from the loss of some of the 15,000 sensory hair cells that line the fluid-filled cochlea, which is the snail shell-like structure of the inner ear. As the energy of sound waves moves through the ear, it is translated into ripples in the fluid of the cochlea. These ripples then push on the hair cells, which are connected to nerve cells that send messages to the brain. With age, the cochlea, in effect, develops bald spots. The most vulnerable hair cells seem to be those "tuned" to ripples created by high-frequency sounds. This is why presbycusis (age-related hearing loss) is usually characterized by an inability to hear children and women's high-pitched voices.

Millions of Americans face the daily challenge of dealing with a hearing loss. And while the number of hearing impaired individuals is on the rise, so too are the ways of dealing with hearing impairments. Don't suffer in silence. Instead, discuss today's available options with a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. PH: 781-337-1144. We offer FREE hearing evaluations, FREE batteries for the life of any hearing instrument purchased, and FREE repairs of any make of hearing aid.

P.S. While nothing can be done to restore lost hair cells, hearing instruments may help this type of hearing loss.

Carol Channing, in person, is star approved

Thanks to her larger than life stage persona, Carol Channing is often impersonated. It is rare, however, for the "Hello, Dolly!" star to actually enjoy the imitations, according to entertainer Richard Skipper. Skipper — who stars in "An Evening With Carol Channing" at Raffael's in North Quincy this week — won the Broadway legend's approval and admiration at the very first performance he gave as Channing 10 years ago.

"The New York Gay Men's Chorus was doing a concert of Jerry Herman music and I was invited to perform as Carol Channing at a post-show party. I had done Carol's voice in other shows, but this was the first time I actually performed in full hair and make-up as Carol, " recalled Skipper last week by telephone. "Carol was in the audience and she loved my show. She even joined my on 'Diamonds are a Girl's Best Friend.' Carol told me she was pleased, because, unlike most other impersonators, I was not cruel to her. She told me it was the first time anyone had done her with such love and such polish."

Skipper, who has a long list of off-Broadway and regional theater credits, wouldn't have had it any other way. "I have the utmost respect for Carol, I don't impersonate or mimic her as much as I pay tribute to her. My entire show is done live, with my voice and no lip-syncing. "

Skipper, 43, says his song-list is from the classic Channing repertoire and more.

"It's funny, because I'm at the same age now as Carol was when she first did "Hello, Dolly!" on Broadway. I do "Before The Parade Passes By" and other songs from that show. About 85 percent of what I do is music associated with Carol, but I also do some songs that she has never done."

That Channing, who first gained fame more than 40 years ago, is still a star today does not surprise Skipper. "A talent like Carol Channing's will always sustain itself. It will always stand the test of time. What really made Carol a star was the same thing that worked for Judy Garland. Both women loved their audience. Carol is not just a performer, she is an entertainer. Her focus is not just on herself, but also on her audience."

J.M Productions and Raffael's Restaurant will present, "An Evening With Carol Channing, Starring Richard Skipper" on June 3-4. After five years, it will mark the final dinner theater offering at Enterprise Drive eatery which will close this later this month

Raffael's restaurants will remain open in both Hull and Walpole. JM Productions plans to announce a new Quincy location for its dinner theater productions very shortly. For tickets and information, call Raffael's at 617/328-1600 or visit www.richardskipper.com

The day Reagan came to town

Makes campaign stop in Cohasset

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Hingham's Jim Claypoole found him charming and congenial — but didn't hold out much hope for his candidacy.

"Within three minutes he made me feel like he was talking one on one," Claypoole recalled about then presidential candidate Ronald Reagan during a campaign stop in Cohasset back in March 1980. "But I concluded he couldn't possibly be elected president."

Claypoole, who is the current chairman of the Hingham Republican Town Committee, said after being in the Massachusetts political environment he mistakenly thought the Bay State's attitude was the attitude of the nation. The following November, Reagan became the 40th US president, beating out President Jimmy Carter and Vice President Walter Mondale. He even carried the state of Massachusetts.

Reagan died Saturday in his adopted state of California from complications of Alzheimer's disease. He was 93.

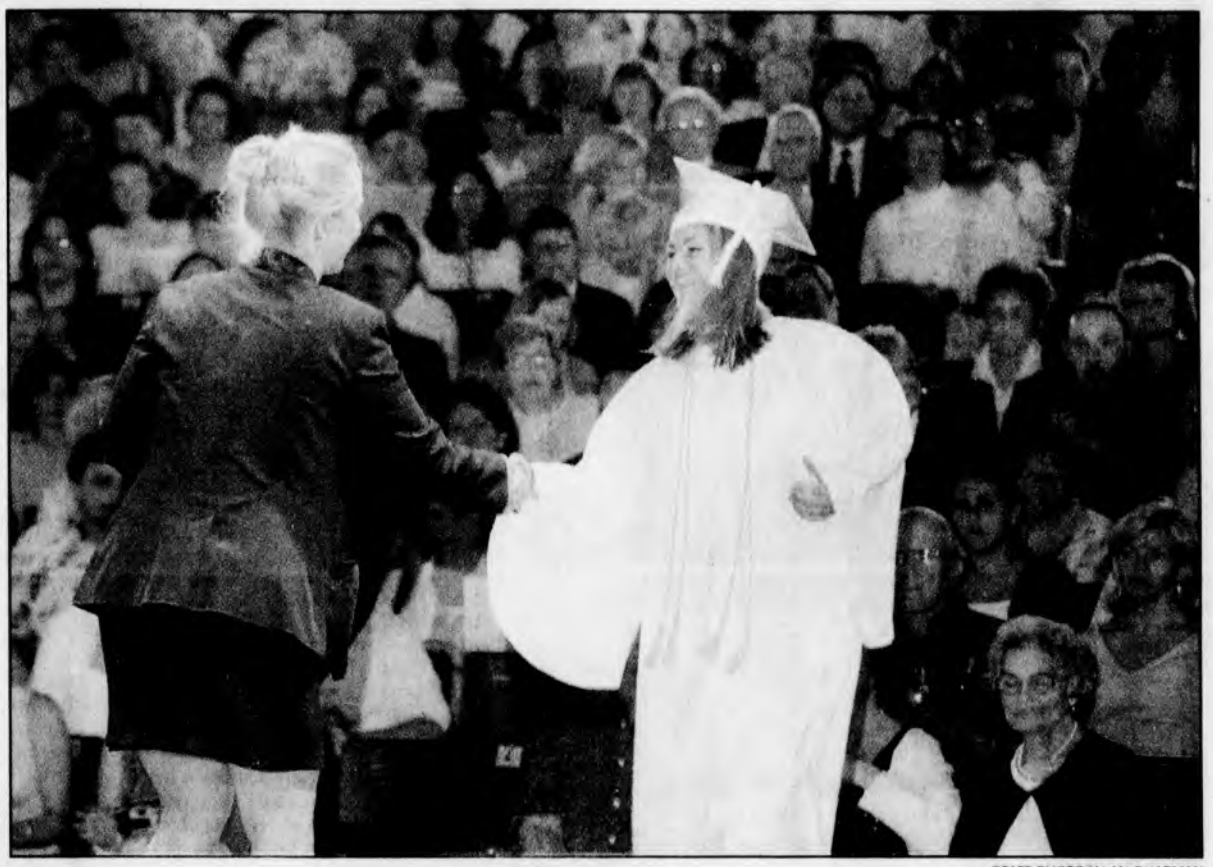
CHS Class of 2004 starts new chapter

86 were awarded diplomas Saturday



By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With Pomp and Circumstance being played by the middle-high school band, and the sun shining outside the tent of the South Shore Music Circus, the 86 members of the Cohasset High School class of 2004, gathered together for one last time to receive their diplomas.

Middle-high school Principal Michael Jones, who will leave his position in Cohasset at the end of this school year, gave a warm welcome to the crowd gathered to honor this year's graduates, and recognized the hard work the students have put in throughout their years of schooling.

Class President Elizabeth Meikleham, the self-proclaimed "welcome wagon" for the ceremony, likened their time at CHS to the "glory days" in the lyrics of the Bruce Springsteen song with that title. She said although she had heard the song many times before, with her upcoming graduation, they suddenly took on a new meaning. For the classmates, who were voted homecoming king and queen, or were ranked in the superlatives in the high school yearbook, or won the Mr. Skipper contest, like Sean Connolly, the memories are priceless and are truly a part of their glory days.

"Who knows when Sean will ever win a beauty pageant again?" she joked.

Emilie Sullivan is all smiles as Jill Swenson presents her with an award from the National Honor Society.

She noted the impact Assistant Principal Jack DeLorenzo had on the Class of 2004, and how underneath his "tough exterior," they grew to find how caring he is, and will always remember his Friday afternoon mantra that they "make good choices."

Supt. Edward Malvey, who is retiring at the end of this school year, gave his sincerest congratulations to the class, noting how tirelessly its members have worked. He gave special recognition to the students who travel to Cohasset every day as part of the Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity, or METCO program, beginning their day earlier than most, and asked those students, their families and host families to stand, while the crowd showered them with applause. "They give more to us than we could ever give back," he said.

Malvey also recognized those veterans and members of the military in the audience, and asked them to stand. "This community, this state, this country, owes you a debt of gratitude," he said, and the crowd cheered.

Malvey then addressed the graduates, and said while it's exciting to send them off into the world, "I'm not sure I want to let you go." However, he said

CHS grad works in corrections

By Kelly Hurley
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

For the seventh year, Cohasset High School alumni Officer Bradley Potolicchio visited CHS to inform students of the U.S. Department of Justice's Federal Bureau of Prisons. Beginning in 1997, Officer Potolicchio fulfilled his passion for public speaking after being invited to speak to Mr. Newkirk's social studies class. After two years he invited fellow good friend and Officer Jason Nogz, graduate of Blue Hills High School Class of 1994, to speak to the class alongside him. Together they have presented the reality of prison life at both Cohasset and Scituate High Schools and hope to soon begin in Canton.

On their off days, the officers receive permission from their supervisors to sign out materials and publicly represent the bureau. During the officers' presentations the students were shown homemade tools, weapons and tattoo guns made of everything from fence pieces, beard trimmers to toothbrushes. Officer Potolicchio's goal is to "give (students) a general knowledge of the institution and open their eyes." He hopes to prove to students that prison "is not a good place…it's the type of place where you don't want to be" by informing them of the truth rather than scaring them into submission.

Brad Potolicchio, a CHS graduate, talks to Jack Buckley's law class about what it's like to be a corrections officer.

As pioneers in the Federal Bureau of Prisons, the officers share their knowledge of the facilities through their passion for public speaking. Being the only ones from their department to take on such a task, Officer Nogz explained his project as being "pretty much unheard of" and that they hope to expand it to "gain a part-time position

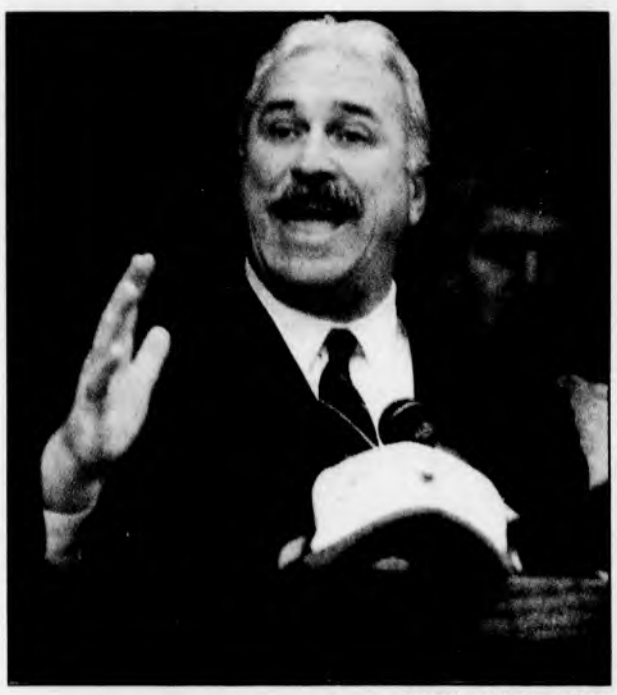
Boston's former top cop to take reins in Cohasset



By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset has found itself a new police chief — at least until this time next year — as former Boston Police Chief James Hussey will take over at the helm of the department, replacing the retiring Robert Jackson.

Pending contract negotiations, Hussey is slated to come on board in Cohasset on June 21, although Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said he thinks Hussey will be around town becoming familiar with his new surroundings before then. Jackson has agreed to give help as needed while Hussey becomes familiar with the department.

In the wake of controversy which some say has turned the department upside-down, the 49-year-old Hussey is said to be just the kind of leader the department needs, relying upon the skills he has acquired during his 28 years with the Boston Police Department. Hussey has held many roles within the department, and is currently directing the Boston Police Academy. Hussey served as acting commissioner for the department for three months, during an interim period.

A certified mediator, Hussey said he looks forward to meeting with each member of the department individually, to gain feedback on what they see as the strengths and weaknesses of the department.

Hussey's duties within the department have not been restricted to policing. He said he has taught civil rights to immigrants, instructed self-defense courses, served as a community liaison in high crime neighborhoods, and worked in the internal affairs division of the department.

"I was recruited to see if we

Save the teachers internet auction

The Committee to Save Three Teachers will have a new auction web site up and running beginning Monday June 14. The committee has signed up to use the services of www.cmarket.com, which is much like the E-bay auction site, but can be used only by non-profit groups. Items for auction include a weekend on a private lake in New Hampshire, a chartered fishing trip, jewelry, sushi-making lessons, and spa services. The auction will run from June 14-24 and roughly 88 percent of the proceeds will go toward saving three teaching positions in town.

Manager Act Review Committee appointed

The Board of Selectmen has appointed Daniel Evans, Barbara Power, Glenn Pratt, Martha Gjesteby, Susan Kent, Melissa Brown, and Helen Daley, to serve on the Town Manager Act review committee. The committee will hold open meetings in the coming weeks, and all are invited to attend and provide input.

Town Manger search committee

The Board of Selectmen will be looking for residents who are interested in becoming involved with the search for a new Town Manager. The board expects to appoint members who will work together throughout July, August and September, to allow the board to hopefully hire a new Town Manager by Oct.1, in time for the next budget season. Interested candidates should contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Questions about train ombudsman

Selectman Fred Koed said he has received many phone calls regarding the departure of Cohasset-Greenbush ombudsman Kristina Patterson, and the subsequent appointment of a new ombudsman by the Waterfield Design Group.

After Patterson's resignation, one of her colleagues was designated by Waterfield to take over her role in Cohasset, but Koed said he would have liked to have heard from Waterfield before another appointment was made.

"It disturbs me," he said, that Waterfield would make an appointment without coming to the town first. "When did they get a contract to appointment an ombudsman?" he asked.

Selectman Rob Spofford said the board should talk to the firm about the appointment and find out what the contract states. He also said there is potentially someone in town who would carry out the duties of an ombudsman, but without the cost. To date, Waterfield has been paid $34,356 for ombudsman services dating back to Oct. 16, 2002.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she believes the firm might have been remiss had it not provided another ombudsman for the town, because it has been awarded a contract for the work. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer reiterated the board needs to take a look at the contract.

Koed said he wanted to know why the town didn't have anyone at recent 106 hearings. "The town didn't have anyone there," he said, and an ombudsman should have been there representing the town. "You can't manage this out of Winchester," he said.

The board said it will look at the contract between the town and Waterfield and discuss the matter at upcoming meetings.

Master Plan review

The Planning Board has scheduled a series of public meeting to review the Draft Master Plan for the Town of Cohasset. The Draft Plan will be reviewed during regular Planning Board meetings held in the months of June, July and August and thereafter, if required.

Planning Board summer meeting schedule (subject to change) is as follows: at 7:30 p.m., June 16, July 7, July 21, Aug 4, Aug 18 in the basement meeting room.

Contact the Planning Board Office at 781-383-3517 to confirm meeting dates and agenda times as the summer progresses.

Printed copies of the Draft Master Plan are available for review in the Planning Board Office, Office of the Town Clerk and at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. An electronic version is available at the Town website, www.cohassetmass.org.

Members of the public are encouraged to attend and participate in the discussion.

Revaluation notice to property owners

The Cohasset Board of Assessors will resume its ongoing revaluation effort as it prepares for recertification by the Department of Revenue for Fiscal Year 2005. During the next few months the assessors' staff will be physically inspecting residential properties in town. Due to the high volume of inspections, the staff will conduct daily door-to-door inspections as time permits.

The staff will perform an interior inspection, noting any changes on the property record card. The entire inspection will take just a few minutes. Measurement of buildings will be verified, if necessary. Digital cameras will be used to produce photos of the exterior of the building for the database.

The assessors' staff will be able to produce proper identification. If the homeowner or a person over 18 years of age is not at home on the first call, a notice will be left asking the homeowner to call for an appointment.

The scope of this update is to test the quality of the town's database and make any necessary corrections.

Planning Board office hours set

The Cohasset Planning Board Office is open Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. This revised schedule of hours will be in effect until Sept. 7. The Planning Board phone number is 781-383-3517.

DeLorenzo to stay, Jones has new job

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For Michael Jones and Jack DeLorenzo, the last four years have been about teamwork. As the as the Principal and Assistant Principal of Cohasset Middle High School, the two have worked in tandem, tackling the challenges of administration together.

But next year there will be some unexpected changes to the duo, as Jones has accepted a position as Principal of Lexington High School, and DeLorenzo, who had planned to enter his retirement years, has decided to postpone that decision for at least one more year, as he has accepted an offer to stay, and take over for Jones.

At the beginning of the school year, the tables were turned. DeLorenzo had announced his intention to leave, and Jones had planned to stay. Jones said this winter, Lexington began looking for a new principal and had not been able to come to a consensus on a candidate, and in light of that, it re-opened its search in May. As part of Lexington's outreach, Jones said he was contacted to see if he would be interested in the job. "I decided I'd go for the interview," Jones said, and "from the get-go" it seemed like a perfect fit.

"It was something I hadn't considered earlier in the year, but it looked so attractive, I decided to take it," he said.

Part of the reason Jones decided to take the job is because of its proximity to his home in Lowell. While working in Cohasset, he has rented a room in Scituate which is where he stays at least four nights a week.

"Given the option of being 25 minutes from home," Jones said it will dramatically change his lifestyle. However, he said his job has been so good in Cohasset, it made the commute worthwhile.

But for DeLorenzo, a Cohasset resident who has sent his children through the school system, staying on to eventually end his career as a principal sounded like the perfect way to enter into retirement. "I spent most of my career as an assistant principal," he said, and when the opportunity presented itself, "I couldn't say no."

> "I don't see we're going to miss a beat."
> — Supt. Dr. Edward Malvey

Jones said because DeLorenzo has worked in the Cohasset schools for so long and lives in town, he has formed very special relationships with the students over the years. "He's known many of the kids since they were tiny," Jones said, adding he thinks DeLorenzo is the "perfect person for the job."

It is evident DeLorenzo, or "Mr. D" and he is affectionately known, has a great relationship with the students. During graduation, he received many hugs from graduates as they received their diplomas. "I believe in setting rules," he said, but added he respects the students, and they, in turn, respect him, which is why he believes he has formed so many friendships over the years.

Supt. Edward Malvey, who will retire at the end of this school year, said he has been working with the incoming superintendent, Denise Walsh, and she will appoint a principal after next year, which may or may not be DeLorenzo. However, Malvey said there was no hesitation on his part whatsoever when he asked DeLorenzo to stay for the interim period, and he has every confidence the school will be in great hands.

"He's the man of the hour. He has the institutional experience, the stability, and the friendly personality," Malvey said, which has allowed him to become well-liked not only by students, but by their parents and members of the community as well. "I don't see we're going to miss a beat."

However, Malvey said Jones has been a wonderful asset for Cohasset and that he "has done a terrific job for the Cohasset public schools." He added Jones came in as principal at a time when there were two major activities going on simultaneously, as the schools had just begun with plans for construction, and were also looking to gain re-accreditation.

Malvey said Jones is a true educator, and where many principals get caught up in the myriad tasks they are asked to tend to, Jones never pushed the education component to the side. "He really got the staff focused on what education is all about," Malvey said.

Malvey said had he not been retiring this year, he would "Sorely miss," Jones, as he is sure many in the community will next year. "He is truly an outstanding educator."

Jones said although he is sad to leave, he knows he is leaving the school in good hands. In fact, DeLorenzo was given high honors when he was named as the state's top assistant principal in 2002. However, DeLorenzo said working with Jones, there was never a large distinction between their two roles, and "It was always like we were co-principals, divvying up the responsibilities."

Next year, with DeLorenzo advancing to take over as principal, current Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill will move up to serve as assistant principal, which DeLorenzo said he is looking forward to. "We'll make a great team," he said.

Police matter costs climb

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Police Department and the town are working to resolve the issues which placed two officers on paid administrative leave last October, and it is hoped a resolution will be decided upon soon. However, the costs associated with the controversy will not go away with the resolution, and the town will continue to pay for some time.

Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said so far, the town has spent around $121,000 on the police controversy, and that includes the costs for Deutsch Williams, which serves as Town Counsel, the court reporter, stenographer, and private investigator.

Buckley said the salary for Officer James McLean is about $966 a week, and for Sgt. William Quigley, about $1085 a week. The two continue to receive pay checks and the department has needed to cover their shifts while they've been out, but that doesn't mean replacements have been needed for every shift. When the officers are replaced, those filling in receive time and a half. Buckley said because every shift would need to be looked at to determine whether one of the officers would have been on, then determine how much overtime was paid to cover that, the exact costs for overtime have not been deciphered.

In addition, the appointment for Deutsch Williams is up July 1 and Buckley said the town will be reviewing whether it is in the town's best interest to keep the firm on board. "We owe it to ourselves and the people of the town," to make sure the attorney's the town has "are the best fit, personally and financially." He said the review is a fairly routine thing, and while it isn't done every year, the town went through a review process for Town Counsel two years ago. He said the town could choose to put out an RFP to see what else is out there, but they haven't done that yet.

Buckley said there is a $54,000 annual retainer for Town Counsel for routine matters. Anything outside the retainer is billed at $160 an hour. In 2004, the town has been billed $264,000 which does not include May or June. In 2003, the town's Deutsch Williams bill was $278,000.

Sgt. Pomarico retires

Sgt. David Pomarico has retired from his position on the Cohasset Police Department. The town received a formal letter of his intention to retire on June 1, and is effective Friday June 11.

Pomarico was recently named in a sexual harassment suit against the town, filed by former dispatcher Barbara DeWolfe.

Pmarico's retirement opens up a sergeant slot in the police department. In addition to Pomarico, there are four sergeants, Sgt. William Quigley, Sgt. David Cogill, Sgt. John Conte and Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon.

Water main flushing continues

The Water Department will continue to flush water mains during the week of June 14. Flushing will take place Monday through Thursday between 9 a.m. and 2 a.m.. The anticipated flushing schedule is as follows:

- June 14 – Spring Street; So. Main St. from Elm to Beechwood St.; Summer St.; Sankey Rd.; Black Horse La.; Border St.; Parker Ave. and streets off So. Main St.
- June 15 through June 17 – Virginia La.; Woodland Rd. and Holly La. Completion of flushing not performed on previous nights. (Please see Channel 10 and note placement of flushing notice signs in street.)

Residents will be provided advance notification in the Patriot Ledger and Cohasset Mariner of the schedule for flushing each segment of the system. In addition, temporary street signs will be placed strategically around the affected area on the day of flushing. Notice will also be provided on the Water Dept.'s web site, www.cohassetwater.org and on the local cable access channel, Channel 10. Residents should monitor the cable channel (Channel 10) for schedule changes.

During the flushing program, some temporary discoloration of the water may occur. Run the COLD water faucet, preferably outside, for a short time until the discoloration clears. If your water is discolored, avoid using hot water until you flush your hot water tank by opening the valve at the bottom of the tank.

Please call the Water Department at (781) 383-0057 with any questions.

Board on hot seat over handling of Hussey appointment

Some say public process skirted

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There has been much talk about having a more transparent government in Cohasset, but actions regarding the replacement for a retiring police chief have some residents concerned much business is still being conducted behind closed doors.

Police Chief Robert Jackson's retirement was announced one week ago Tuesday and James Hussey, a former interim chief for the Boston Police Department, was interviewed and subsequently recommended by the board to be appointed as interim chief two days later. Hussey will serve as interim chief for one year, pending contract negotiations.

Hussey was the only candidate interviewed by all five members of the board, and some residents believe with a position such as police chief, a wider search should have been conducted. In addition, because last Thursday's meeting, which served as a public interview, was the first time the town had been introduced to Hussey, some questioned just how much business had been conducted before that night and why the public wasn't involved.

Wigmore Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave., said he questioned the process which brought Hussey forward as a candidate for the position. "I'm not questioning Mr. Hussey's qualification's necessarily," said Pierson, but added residents were given very short notice about the Thursday night meeting, and many wouldn't have known it was taking place, had they not read it in the newspaper. He said at some point, the town would have found out the board had already made its decision and would not have been given the chance to provide input at all.

Pierson also said there has been some concern that the interim appointment may in fact be a full-time position and at the end of a year, the public would again be provided with a decision the board had made, and Hussey would be the full-time chief, again with no input from the public.

However, Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan explained Police Chief Robert Jackson has been discussing his retirement with the board for the past few weeks. In light of those conversations, Sullivan said the board began reaching out to area police departments with the intention of finding someone who would be willing to serve as interim chief, but before the retirement was official, it was not necessary to make their screening efforts known. "There have been many challenges the police department has been dealing with for the past year or two, and we wanted an interim chief to step in as soon as possible to try to work through the issues," he said.

Sullivan, who is a professional employment recruiter, said he began looking for and screening candidates for the position, and spoke with between six to eight individuals over the phone. However, many of the candidates interested in the position were former police chiefs, and because their retirement packages limit the hours and salaries they can receive, many had to decline the position.

"We need someone to come in and provide stability. We need to build some teamwork and it's very important we get that going on as quickly as possible."
— Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan

Sullivan assured Pierson the appointment will be for one year only, and that Hussey is able to take one year of absence from the Boston Police Department in order to come to Cohasset.

"We need someone to come in and provide stability. We need to build some teamwork and it's very important we get that going on as quickly as possible," he said.

Currently, Hussey is heading up the Police Academy in Boston. When the time comes to appoint a permanent chief, the public will be involved and a search committee will be formed, Sullivan said. Once the year is up, the board isn't sure Hussey will be asked to stay on, Sullivan said.

Pierson asked what Hussey's salary will be once he comes to Cohasset, but Sullivan told him that question was "inappropriate." Pierson said that figure should be public and he questioned why Hussey would leave a reported $148,000 to come to Cohasset where Jackson was being paid roughly $86,000 a year. Sullivan answered because a contract has not been negotiated, a figure is not available, but would be once negotiations are complete. Sullivan declined to provide a minimum or maximum salary for Hussey, who said he is currently paid much less than $148,000.

Gabriel Gomez, 53 Highland Ave., asked how many total candidates were screened and was there a list of potential candidates that Hussey was measured against. Sullivan said he called five different chiefs he knew from various departments, including the chiefs of the Hingham and Wellesley, as well as two attorneys, and conducted some due diligence on his own. He said he inquired about retired chiefs that might be interested in taking on an interim position in the Cohasset department, and he interviewed three candidates himself.

Sullivan said each member of the board has met with Hussey and each conducted an interview with one of his references. Although some members of the board met with some of the candidates, the only candidate all five members met with is Hussey.

Gomez asked how comfortable the board feels that it has only collectively seen one candidate. For such an important position, he would think the board would want to have someone else to compare it to.

Ralph Dormitzer said he met with Hingham's police chief and after that meeting, he "Had a very good sense of who was out there and what was available to us." Dormitzer said he came away understanding Hussey had the kinds of qualities and experience the town was looking for, and that other candidates with similar requirements who are retired might not be available.

Selectman Rob Spofford said while the position is a very important one, it is still an interim position, and he feels very confident after speaking with Hussey that the community will be well served with him at the head of the department.

Residents question Hussey

Because Hussey will be taking over a department that is steeped in controversy, members of the public asked him some questions as to how he would specifically handle situations moving forward.

Former police officer Brian Curran, 289 Beechwood St., who is also Jackson's son-in-law, asked Hussey what he could do to stop retaliation from police officers who keep targeting the same people. "What can you do to ease people's minds?"

Hussey said any complaints about officers should be brought directly to the chief. While he acknowledges that in many cases, it is the officer's word against the civilian's, if the incident is documented, should it happen again, it would be much easier to distinguish a pattern. Hussey also said he would take action on all complaints.

Pierson said from the situation currently going on at the station, "It appears the complaints have been coming from others in the department. How do you deal with a situation like that?"

Sullivan halted the response and said it is too premature to get into that issue. "He doesn't know it to the detail you do," Sullivan said.

Gomez said currently, the department has two officers on paid leave, who may come back to work soon, and there have been rumors circulating that some officers have threatened to leave if they do. "What's your plan?" he asked.

However, Sullivan said, "I'm not sure it's appropriate to get into this," and wouldn't let Gomez ask the question. But Gomez rephrased and Hussey said in a situation where there are both laid-back officers working with proactive officers, it is best to gain feedback from both sides and give everyone the opportunity to be a part of the team. "People have a choice, they can either help, or be obstructionist."

Pierson asked how quickly Hussey thought he could bring replacements in if there were several resignations within the department. Hussey said he would try to work with the officers first, before they resigned, because no one should resign if they don't have to. "We don't want to have good officers resigning," he said.

Pierson also asked whether Hussey would welcome the appointment of a group of citizens to serve as an advisory board, to help come up with a philosophy for the department.

"We absolutely need it," Hussey said.

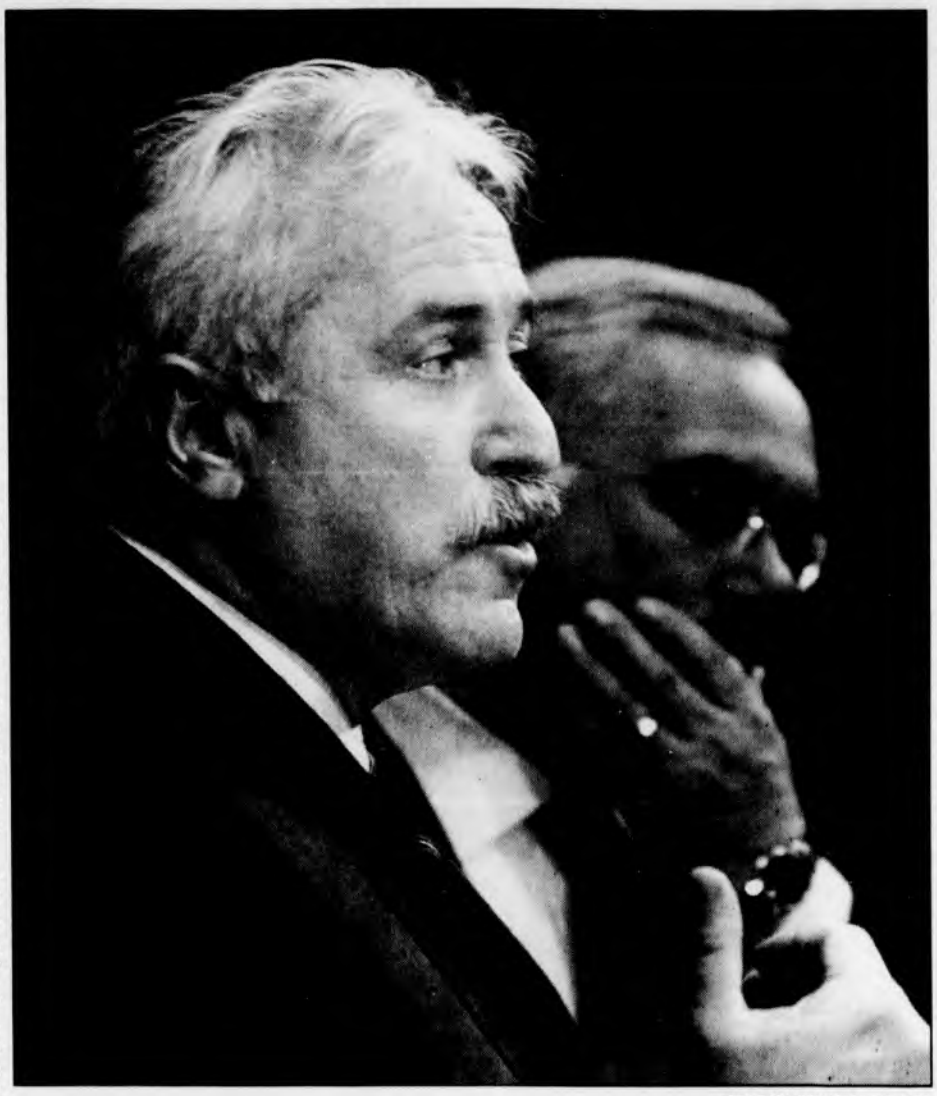
could bring back confidence in the (Boston) police department," he said, adding one of his goals during that time was to help clear the names of some officers that had been falsely accused, while holding other officers accountable for their actions. He also worked in the hate crimes area of the Boston Police Department. "I headed that unit up for 18 months," he said.



Hussey also worked in the Department of Youth Services in the late 1970s, and he has carried the experience he gained there with him ever since. "Working with kids is one of my loves. I've never lost that interest," he said.

Hussey said it's extremely important to work with the schools and would be happy to personally take that role on. He said teachers can be very effective in helping identify students that may be getting into trouble and may need help.

"I'm going to find someone who is willing to do it, or I'll do it myself. Kids need someone they feel they can trust," and said he will start a program with the schools if Cohasset doesn't have one already.

Hussey's love of children has carried over into his second "job," as he serves as an umpire for one of the Little League teams in his hometown of Norwood. "It's one of the jobs people shy away from," he joked. However, he said anyone that has served as an umpire knows you must, "Call it like you see it, and be decisive. You're not right 100 percent of the time, and every once in a while you flub one," he said, but added it's important to "Go with what you think is right and take the good with the bad."

But with all the positive experiences Hussey has had doing police work, just as with being an umpire, he said he has had to take the good with the bad. During the 2004 Super Bowl, while he was serving as acting police commissioner in Boston, riots broke out and a 21-year-old was killed. Hussey was seen by many as the man to be held responsible for the tragedy that occurred that night. However, Hussey explained what happened to selectmen last week, in an effort to help bring light to the situation.

"There are some misconceptions out there," he said, adding by what was shown in the media alone, many people might have preconceived notions about him that are not the truth. Hussey said on the night of the Super Bowl, he was watching the game with his family, and 15 minutes after the game was over, he called into headquarters and was told everything was quiet. However, Hussey subsequently received a call from one of his superintendents who was on the scene, but the rioting was already over.

"It was 15 to 20 minutes, then it was done," he said, and he didn't find out about what had occurred until it was too late. Hussey said he spent the rest of that night talking back and forth with his superintendent and relaying information to the mayor who was out of town. He said he knew the media would need to be dealt with in the morning, and there was nothing that could be done before then, so he finally went to bed around 2 a.m., only to wake up at 4 a.m. to go to the station.

"It's an honor to sit before you tonight, and if you look deeper, I think you'll find I'm someone of character, someone who cares, and I will give you 1,000 percent in all that I do," he said.

Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer asked Hussey if he would have done anything differently during the night of the Super Bowl riots. Hussey responded that the plan put together that night was organized by special units who had developed the plans for the department for roughly four to six years prior to that night's incident. Looking back on the situation, he said he sometimes wonders, "If we had had 400 (officers on duty), would it have made a difference? Possibly, but I accepted the plan brought before me."

When asked by Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan what went awry that night, Hussey said there were a large number of people who were drinking, many of which were underage and were drinking in areas that were not visible. "It's very easy to point at the police when things go wrong, but who's responsible for the kids?"

"I appreciate your being an open book," said Selectman Rob Spofford.

Hussey said he has experience in policy writing, which he believes could help Cohasset. He said he was involved with re-writing the policy on internal affairs in Boston, because he saw that too many violations had been handled at the district level. He believed that only the most minor offenses should be handled at the district level, and helped change that policy for the department. In addition, Hussey said he was involved in re-writing the sexual harassment policy for the Boston Police Department, as well as the domestic violence policy. His efforts helped write a policy that would direct officers in how to handle responding to a call where another officer had been involved in a domestic dispute.

Hussey said he would like to get to know each member of the department individually, and find out who they really are. By getting to know where the officers are from, where they live, whether they are married or have children, he can make better assessments. "We are a team, I'll lead you the best I can, but I'll need your help," he said, adding that nine out of 10 times, when asked, officers will come up with some great solutions to problems.

Hussey said one of the most important aspects of every job he has had is making sure everyone is treated fairly across the board. He said he doesn't let the friendships he builds with fellow employees get in the way of his being able to make the tough decisions. He said during his tenure as chief of the Boston Police Department in 2001, he had six superintendents reporting to him, and during the budget season, he had to make tough choices to ensure all departments had what they needed. "I had to get people to give up what they could, in order to help those in need," he said. "I think people would tell you I was fair."

Selectman Ronnie McMorris asked Hussey why he would be interested to come to a small town like Cohasset after so many years of working in a big city. Hussey replied, "Whether you're in a big or small department, the philosophy should be the same," adding if the majority of police officers are asked why they wanted to become an officer, the number one answer will be that they wanted to help people, and that is how it should be.

Hussey said he will work together with not only the department, but the residents, business owners, clergy and schools, to make sure everyone is working together and pulling in the same direction. "I look forward to that challenge," he said.

Hussey added one thing that must be done in Cohasset is the police department needs to tap into everyone in the community. The department needs to talk to people in the community and figure out what some of the most important issues are that need to be addressed. "We need to do a survey, either on the Web, or in the mail with tax bills, and poll the people on the concerns they have," he said.

Hussey said he believes there are three edicts for police officers: prevention, intervention, and enforcement. He said that if there is any way officers can work to prevent incidents from happening and intervene to help an individual, that is what should be done, but there comes a time when enforcement is necessary. "If I can not arrest someone and help change them, that's a beautiful thing."

Chief Jackson said he watched Hussey's interview on television and thinks he will be a good fit for the town. "He handled himself like a real gentleman, seems well qualified, and will serve the town well," he said.

ART FESTIVAL IS COMING

In 1954, a group of South Shore artists pinned their artwork to clotheslines on Cohasset Common and in so doing planted the seeds for what was to become the South Shore Art Center. Since then the Art Center has grown into the region's largest center for the visual arts. As for the clothesline art show, it has become the most celebrated and well-attended annual arts festival on the South Shore.

St. Sebastian's graduate Paul F. Digan and Headmaster William L. Burke, III.

The South Shore Art Center's 49th Arts Festival will take place June 18 –20. With art and music for all generations, the South Shore Art Center Arts Festival offers something wonderful for everyone—from cutting-edge contemporary art to traditional handmade crafts. More than 90 juried artists will offer a wide variety of handmade items including jewelry, home and garden products, clothing, ceramics, toys, home décor, fine art and photography.

In addition to the individual booths housing these artists, the Art Center presents a Juried Art Exhibition, Members' Show and Young Artists' Exhibition in large exhibition tents. A children's art activity tent offers children and adults an opportunity to explore their creative side while plein air painters scattered throughout the grounds demonstrate their talents and capture the scene. Old-fashioned homemade strawberry shortcake will be served all weekend at the Second Congregational Church annual Strawberry Festival. The Festival Stage presents three days of toe-tapping musical entertainment ranging from singer-songwriters, bluegrass, jazz, to Sunday's annual Father's Day performance by the South Shore Bay Band. Arts Festival hours are Friday, June 18, 2 -7 p.m.; Saturday, June 19, 10 a.m.-7 p.m. and Sunday, June 20, noon-6 p.m. South Shore Art Center Arts Festival is held outdoors, rain or shine. A free trolley shuttles visitors from near-by parking on Sohier Street. A $5.00 donation is requested at the entrance. The South Shore Art Center Arts Festival is sponsored in part through the generosity of Rockland Trust. For more information visit www.ssac.org or contact the Art Center: 781-383-2787.

Deer Hill students find socks drive has legs

Collect clothing for the homeless

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

What began as a lesson in letter-writing has turned into a lesson of compassion and generosity, as the efforts of students in two Deer Hill sixth-grade classes have led to some very hefty donations for area homeless shelters.

On Wednesday, June 2, roughly 800 pairs of socks as well as various clothing items, were delivered to the Pine Street Inn, Barbara McInnis House, and the Family Team offices of the Boston Health Care for the Homeless program, due to the hard work of students in both Susan Horigan's and Vicky Sullivan's classes.

In the sixth grade, Horigan said students learn how to write both persuasive letters and business letters, and that lesson provided the foundation for the sock drive. Horigan said she and her students first brainstormed to think of companies that sell socks, as well as places where they had purchased socks in the past. The students went on the Internet to do research, and each student chose at least one company to write to.

In their letters, students explained they had learned about the kinds of infections many of Boston's homeless have to endure from either not having socks to wear, or from wearing socks that are wet for too long. They asked for donations on behalf of the Boston Health Care for the Homeless program, and sent a brochure from the organization along with their request.

The students went on the Internet to do research, and each student chose at least one company to write to.

"Between the two classes, there were between 50 and 60 letters sent," said Horigan, adding letters were sent to many companies, including Sears, Hot Sox, Lord and Taylor, and Nike, which all responded with generous donations. In fact, Nike was the largest contributor, sending roughly 600 pairs of socks for the cause.

"It is such a good lesson," said Horigan, adding whether they heard back from their companies or not, the students were working to make a difference.

Horigan said at first, the idea to ask family and friends for donations to the cause was floated, but in the end, they decided to write to companies which had the potential to have more of an impact. "We decided to go big," she said.

Dominique Rioux and Betsy Crawford, who are both in Horigan's class, both wrote to Sears, and received a very generous donation not only of socks, but pajamas, underwear, and other items of clothing. "They thought it was a really nice project and they were excited to help," said Betsy.

Dominique said a representative from Sears called the school to talk to the two girls, and the representative asked if they would like more than just socks for their donation. The girls said yes, and "two huge boxes" full of clothing items were delivered to the school.

Three of Horigan's students, Jeff Charles, Dana Valentine, and Kevin O'Connell, as well as Justin Yeager from Sullivan's class, all wrote to Hot Sox, a division of Ralph Lauren clothing. The result was the delivery of a big box of socks and underwear to the school.

Stephanie Sestito who is in Sullivan's class, said she wrote to Lord and Taylor, which also "sent a big box of socks," to the school.

Last week, three of Horigan's students, Sophie Bertolami, Lauren Blaze, and Ali Leger delivered roughly 800 pairs of socks to the three homeless shelters. Sophie's mother Meg, who works for the Boston Health Care for the Homeless program and initiated the idea to become involved with a project to benefit the homeless, drove the girls to Boston.

While at the shelters, the girls met and spoke with some clients. "We thought they would have been different," said Lauren. Sophie added that while they may have "looked a little rough, they were really nice."

The girls said many of the clients they spoke with had fallen into some bad luck, and were not homeless because they had any kind of addiction to drugs or alcohol, which they had expected prior to visiting. By being able to meet the people at the shelters, Sophie said "It makes you realize how much they need it and appreciate it."

For more information on the Boston Health Care for the Homeless Program, please visit their web site at www.bhchp.org, or call their administrative offices at (617) 414-7779.

Meg Bertolami, a parent, and Allie Leger sort stacks of socks to be donated to the homeless.

Deer Hill students show off packages of socks that were provided after they wrote to apparel companies. The socks and other clothing has been donated to homeless shelters.

Cohasset Sailing Club gears up for new season

While summer may be just around the corner, Cohasset Sailing Club Commodore Ann Musto and her Executive Board have been busy for months preparing for the 2004 opening of the Club on July 5, its 44th season. Several new docks have been put in service, repairs and upgrades have been made to many of the boats in their fleet, an impressive staff has been recruited and a number of social events are in the planning stages.

The Cohasset Sailing Club was founded in 1960, with the charter to teach Cohasset youth the art and skill of sailing, while also giving them an appreciation for the rich waterfront resources that Cohasset enjoys.

The Cohasset Sailing Club was founded in 1960, with the charter to teach Cohasset youth the art and skill of sailing, while also giving them an appreciation for the rich waterfront resources that Cohasset enjoys. Today, the Sailing Club continues its tradition, while also offering training to adults. Last year, the Sailing Club trained 181 students and 26 adults in the art of sailing and expectations are that those numbers will grow in 2004. In addition, the Sailing Club deploys a fleet of seven '420's; eight Turnabouts and nine 16-ft. Mercury's, all available to members who pass the Helmsman's Test.

The Cohasset Sailing Club is well-known for the quality of its staff and this year will be no exception. Vice-Commodores Emily Malone and Anne Rowland are pleased with the staff they have this year, which includes a majority of veterans including, Race Team Coach Pat Rynne and Head Instructors Pat Manion and Martha Henderson.

"While we want our students to have fun while learning," says Malone. "We want them to learn sailing from knowledgeable instructors in a safe environment".

This year's staff will include eight senior instructors who are certified US Level One sailors; several Junior instructors and a number of very enthusiastic participants in a new "Instructors in Training" program.

"We're very excited about this", says Rowland. "It give those students with a true love of the sport the chance to develop and share their skills, while, at the same time, allowing us to continue to field a talented staff".

The summer won't be all hard work, though. A number of special sailing events and social programs are planned, beginning with the Launch Party, scheduled for Saturday, July 10. More details on this will follow later, but an early clue is it includes lobsters! The Stanton Series of family races, where parents and students compete together, will continue on specific Sundays in July, with a barbecue afterwards. And, a new program is being offered on Friday evenings in July, the Women's Wind & Unwind, a part of the fee-based instructional program, offering women an opportunity to gather socially, while brushing up on their sailing skills. Finally, it will all come to a close on Sunday, Aug. 22, when the Closing Ceremonies are held, including races in the harbor, a cook-out and awarding of certificates and trophies to students.

The Cohasset Sailing Club is a non-profit organization that depends solely on the time of its volunteers to keep the program running smoothly and the generosity of its members and Cohasset citizens, as well as donations from sailing related organizations. This year, the Sailing Club is launching a fund-raising program in honor of Herb Towle, one of the Club's founders who passed away on Christmas Eve last year.

"Herb was passionate about both Cohasset and the Sailing Club", says Commodore Musto. "He loved sailing and the sea and felt strongly that all of Cohasset's citizens should have an opportunity to enjoy the waterfront, both on and off the water. In the 25 years since Herb helped build the existing Sailing Club building, very little has been done to it and it is beginning to show its age."

Fund-raising efforts will include a summer-long raffle to be awarded at the closing ceremonies and a repeat of the previously successful "Art for Sail" auction sometime in the fall.

Garden tour of 'Seaside Reflections'

The Cohasset Garden Club will open seven of its members' ocean-side and river-view gardens for its "Seaside Reflections" garden tour on June 16. These exceptional gardens, along Jerusalem Road, Atlantic Avenue and the Gulf River, offer views of sweeping waterscapes and craggy ledges, others open to more intimate vistas of orchards, hillsides and tranquil pathways. The tour starts at the historic Lightkeepers' Residence and includes a catered tailgate picnic on Sandy Beach, as an interlude during the tour.

Tickets for the Garden Tour and Lunch are $40 and can be reserved by calling Sarah Pease at (781) 383-1406.

Club President Patsy Dean(center) and Co- Chairs Carmen Schramm and Anne Vanderweil admire one of the Gulf River gardens to be included on the Cohasset Garden Club's "Seaside Reflections" garden tour.

The Cohasset Garden Club, affiliated with the Garden Club of America, was founded in 1925. Its projects and members support a spectrum of national and regional environmental and horticultural initiatives. Proceeds from the "Seaside Relections" garden tour will help the club to continue as an active participant in civic projects throughout the community. The Club has augmented plantings at schools and at the Cohasset Historical Museums, where members have long maintained the gardens. Club members also tend plantings at the Lightkeepers' Residence and care for the Knowles Watering Trough on Atlantic Avenue, a colorful oasis where the design changes with the season.

Tickets for the Garden Tour and Lunch are $40 and can be reserved by calling Sarah Pease at (781) 383-1406. Tickets will be held for pick-up at the Lightkeepers' Residence on the day of the Tour, June 16, from 10 a.m.. Or, they may also be picked up the day before the Tour, June 15 between 9:30 a.m. and noon.

ith the education the students ere given during their years in ohasset, both by the faculty at the hools and their parents and ends, he believes they have been epared well and have all the skills ecessary to become the future aders of this country.

As Malvey prepares to leave his ducational career behind and enter to retirement, he said he feels ry confident he will be leaving ong with the "top group" in ohasset. He again wished the ass the best of luck in the future nd said with a smile, "I have my ubs in the car and a tee time at ree. Good luck."

Salutatorian Tess Foley ddressed her classmates and said uring the past few weeks, they ave all had to endure the feeling of anting to move forward and leave eir small town, but at the same me are clinging to the past and mforts of living in a small com- unity. She said while the past is ot something that can be re-lived, very member of the class has been olded by the events they have ared over the years. While she aid everyone in America will remember where they were on Sept. 11, there are some memories hat only those who are a part of the lass will understand. "I don't know when we'll ever again be surrounded by a group that knows us so well," she said.

Valedictorian Brittany Novak also noted how close the class is, as many have lived their entire lives in Cohasset and have moved through the school system together. "Our family and friends have served as our foundation," she said. She recalled a video played for the seniors at a recent night held for the class, and how cute they looked as children, playing soccer together "before we could even reach the cross bars of the goals," and how they've been working together ever since.

CHS graduate Caitlyn Gontarz receives her merit scholar award.

Over time, Novak said the members of her class have carved many niches for themselves, which have felt like smaller homes within the community. They have worked together in drama productions, have done their best to stay afloat together on the open ocean, have shared wins and losses on the fields, and have participated in volunteer activities such as the Appalachian Service Project.

She said as the members of the class of 2004 make their way in life, they will undoubtedly make other homes where they will feel they have a place, but that doesn't mean everything they have in Cohasset needs to be left behind. "You could say we're closing a chapter, but I don't think it's ever possible to fully close a chapter...While it's true in many ways you can't go home again, we can always revisit this chapter of our lives."

Along with the graduates, some teachers who will be leaving Cohasset this year were recognized as well. Honorary diplomas were given for: the 24-year career of middle-high school nurse Carol Ciciotte; the 34-years of Osgood teacher Marilyn D'Angelo; the 35 years of Deer Hill teacher Frank Deakin; the 30 years of Special Education from Florence Ely; the 32 years of Deer Hill teacher Ray Levine; the 35 years of Deer Hill teacher Joann Magoun; and the 23 years as the Deer Hill librarian for Marjorie Murphy.

As students prepared to accept what is the crowning achievement of their academic careers in Cohasset, Jones stood before them, the last class he will see graduate under his watch in Cohasset, commending members for the work which brought them to this turning point, and wished them well.

"You've distinguished yourselves in so many ways. You've grown up together and despite the differences, you've all begun your lives from one common ground. You'll always remain in my hearts and in my memories, and I wish you Godspeed in the future," he said.

OPINION

Transparent government

Believe it or not, Cohasset isn't the worst offender when it comes to conducting business behind closed doors.

Executive sessions are a common occurrence at town halls across the state. But nevertheless, over the years, we've found that many boards and committees routinely break the law going into executive session to discuss business that should be conducted in the open.

The fact executive sessions are routine and often illegal should serve as a red flag to all citizens, everywhere.

In another town we covered years back, the selectmen went into executive session to discuss diverting traffic from a main street to a small side street. They didn't want the residents on the side street to have advance knowledge about their decision because it would upset them.

You can imagine how those residents felt when they woke up to discover 18-wheelers barreling through their neighborhood. In a nutshell, they felt betrayed and disillusioned. They were also very angry.

The press can only do so much in objecting to executive sessions. Under the Open Meeting Law – which is a paper tiger – boards and committees don't have to tell us very much about the reason for going into executive session.

We have filed open meeting law violation complaints with the District Attorney's office over the years and will continue to do so when we see a blatant violation. It is time consuming and often fruitless to file complaints otherwise.

Minutes of an executive session can be withheld until the reason for the executive session is no longer valid. But without knowing the substance of executive sessions, it's tough for us to tell when the minutes should be made public. And, frankly, with so many executive sessions – it's hard to keep track.

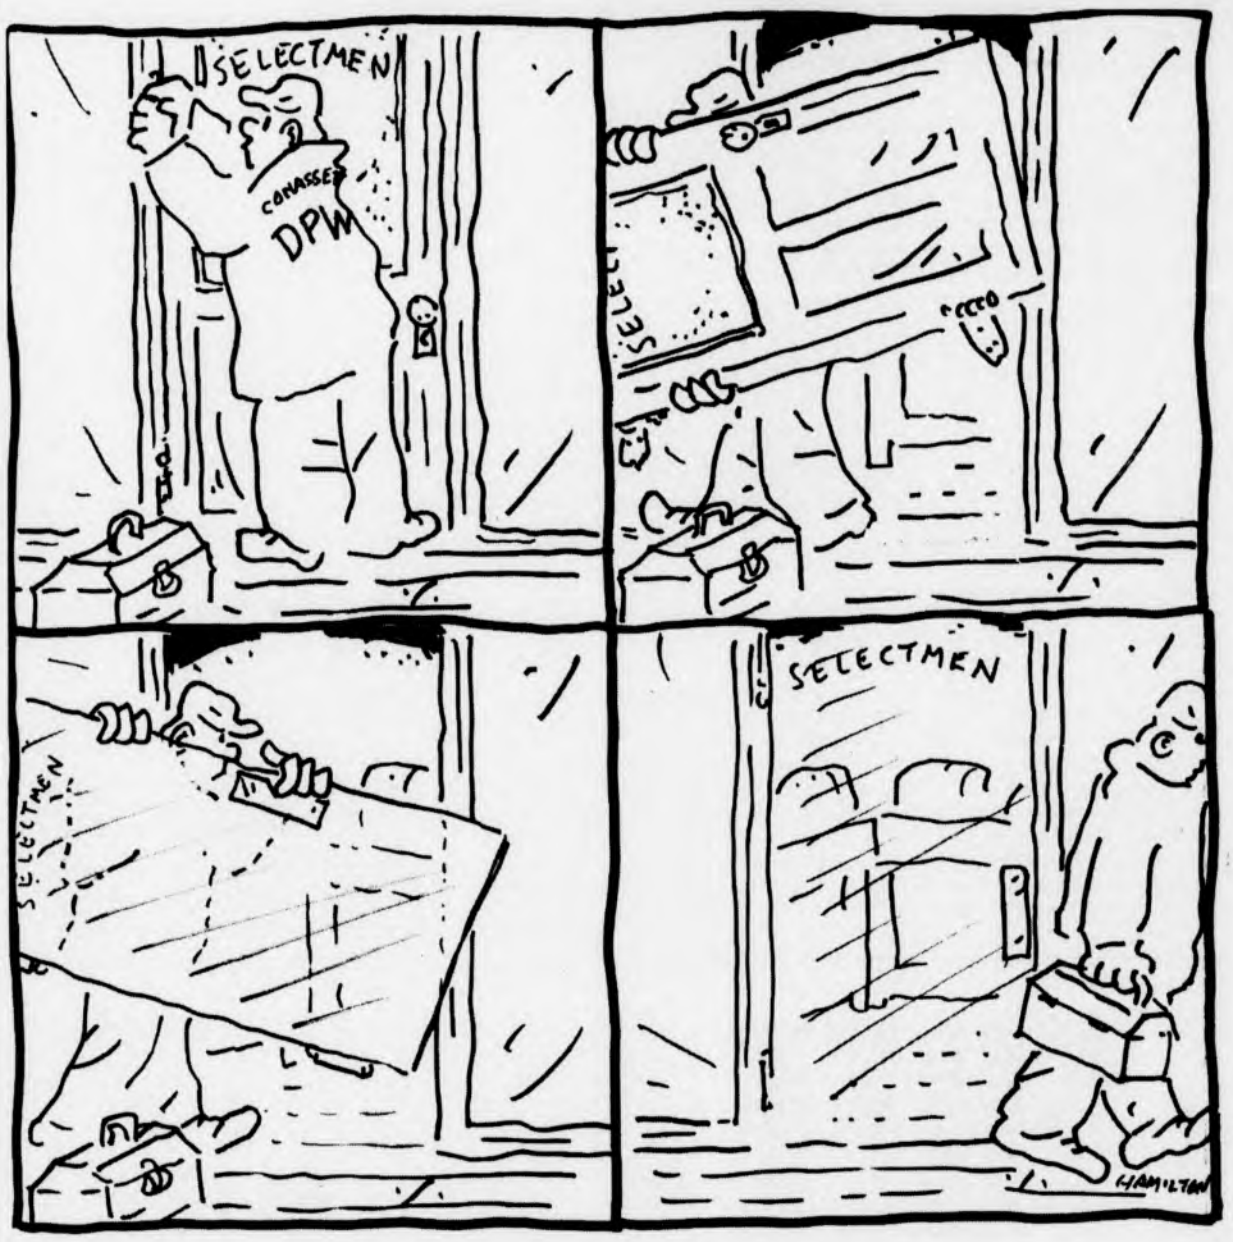
Oftentimes newly elected or appointed board members either don't understand the Open Meeting Law or want to be team players and go along with their more seasoned counterparts in voting to go into executive session. It is also human nature to want to air a controversial subject with the board in secret to test the waters, so to speak.

However, it is critical that all elected and appointed officials keep in mind that executive sessions – for contract negotiations, certain real estate or personnel matters, and pending litigation — should be kept to an absolute minimum. Going into executive session is also a choice. There is no law requiring one.

In light of all the litigation Cohasset is embroiled in, selectmen have been calling executive sessions during nearly every meeting. We have no way of knowing whether these are legitimate or not.

With five members on the board, we'd like to believe that these executive sessions are justified. That each member is a police officer, so to speak, ensuring the public's right-to-know is paramount. We also sincerely hope that all discussion is limited to the subject of the executive session and doesn't stray to other issues.

In our view, the ends never justify the means. It's the process that the public needs to be part of, not just the decision itself.



With all the changes going on at Town Hall, this is an opportune time to make government more "transparent." Let's see executive session minutes which are no longer restricted routinely put in the correspondence packet each week. We shouldn't have to ask.

We'd also like to see email correspondence in the packet. The use of email is one of the single, biggest challenges that "transparent" government faces. It's too easy for emails to be forwarded from board member to board member, which could constitute and illegal on-line meeting. Emails concerning town business are public documents.

The police and Town Manager controversies have awakened some of the electorate that is now demanding more openness. While these rabble-rousers are not making any friends at Town Hall, it's important to remember that by pounding their fists – others may benefit down the line.

If you disagree, just think about those residents who woke up to the sounds of tractor-trailers on their street.

Don't tinker with Town Manager Act

TO THE EDITOR:

Why all the nattering to the effect that "The town Manager has too much power, "the Town Manager Act needs to be revised to downsize his authority" and similar amateurish prescriptions.

If you have money to invest, which company would you invest in? The one in which the Board of Directors is afraid to employ a decisive take-charge-and-get-things-done type of CEO, lest the Board's influence be diluted? Or the company whose Board recognizes the need for such a CEO, and sees him or her as a pragmatic means for efficient and timely application of its policies and of conduct of the company's business? Which company will survive? Which the better rate of return?

Wouldn't you prefer a company whose CEO can choose and control his or her department heads, instead of a company so foolish that he or she doesn't choose, and hence doesn't entirely control, hie subordinates?

Our investment in our homes is only part of our investment in the Town, it is supplemented by an annual payment called "taxes". Hence it's not a bad idea to select the most effective form of government. Democracy is sufficiently exercised by the town meeting process and by electing the selectmen, the school committee, and a few regulatory bodies. We don't profit by mocking democracy by selecting all other officers and department heads by popular vote.

Let's keep in mind the blunt old adage: "If it ain't broke, don't fix it", and refrain from tinkering with the Town Manager Act.

Appalling display of intimidation of press

TO THE EDITOR

On Tuesday, I, and the audience of the Cohasset Selectmen's meeting, witnessed and appalling display of an attempt to intimidate the press by Selectmen Michael Sullivan and Ronnie McMorris. This raw display of power was directed at the Patriot Ledger and the Cohasset Mariner but even more egregiously at the reporters, Lisa Campenella and Samantha Brown that were present.

The public vitriolic criticisms were obviously intended stop the press from reporting negative stories about Cohasset by intimidating the reporters. They were charged with fabricating stories and creating connections from unrelated coincidences. They were accused of failing to talk to the community at large and basing their stories only on quotes form people that intended no good to Cohasset.

Compounding this abhorrent behavior was the disregard for the common decency of inviting these reporters to answer the charges that were made against them personally and against their papers.

When Selectman Ralph Dormitzer challenged these outlandish actions, he became a target for the Sullivan/McMorris attacks.

What I witnessed was appalling. It represents my worst fears of the disregard for the civility and was a crude attempt to manipulate the media. Certainly this is not becoming of the representatives of this Town.

I felt compelled to write this letter since commentary on the matter by either paper may be viewed as being defensive or unfair.

Times present town with an opportunity

TO THE EDITOR:

Recent events have brought unprecedented changes to Cohasset. In the short time since our last Town Meeting and general election, our Town Manager, Police Chief, School Principal, Student Services Director and Police Officers have resigned, an "interim" Police Chief has been named, a new Superintendent of the public schools has been hired and the list goes on. While initially unsettling, these changes present a unique opportunity for the Town and its elected and appointed officials.

Cohasset must seize this opportunity. The question is what shall we make of it? Public confidence in local government is essential to its success. It is not only time for a thorough assessment of our form of government, but of our policy making practices as well. This is the time to learn from past errors, not to defend or deny them. We must insist that our elected and appointed officials learn from the past and embrace the future.

Cohasset is a small Town of enormous capacity, generosity and talent. Together, we can chart a course for future health, prosperity and civic pride. Now, more than ever, it's time for every resident to get involved and let your voice be heard.

Remembering Ronald Reagan, and celebrating American ideals

MARY JANE HANRON

Words of admiration and affection abound in these days following the death of our beloved President Reagan. Efforts to pay tribute to him seem inadequate in the shadow of the greatness he inspired within the hearts of the citizens of this noble nation. Even his detractors and former political adversaries offer anecdotes of genuine fondness and gracious praise.

In this blessed free society, we all have preferred forms of expression. To those of us who choose the written word, a true challenge presents itself as we are reminded of Mr. Reagan's eloquence, timing and soft but commanding persuasion. Celebrating American ideals or relating his ever effectual "stories", otherwise known as "jokes" held the same passion and conviction as informing the nation of his plans and beliefs, or consoling the bereaved in their sadness. Since learning of his death late Saturday, despite much reflection upon the importance he played in my life, until this moment, my pen has fallen silent.

The first vote I cast in a presidential election was in 1980. I was an idealistic journalism student, living and loving life and enjoying the boundless options available to those of us just beginning our journey in adulthood. At the time, the Nixon presidency with all its complexities was a focus of study, particularly in journalism schools which had been filled with aspiring "Woodwards and Bernsteins" as a byproduct of Watergate. It was a fascinating time to be a student; this constitutional crisis had happened during our lifetimes, as had the tumultuous resignation of the President, followed by the brief and controversial, albeit ultimately healing term of Gerald Ford.

A consequence of the distrust and skepticism that permeated the United States following these events was the election of a well intentioned but unimpressive former Southern governor, Jimmy Carter. As Mr. Carter's term progressed, so did the troubles of the country. Domestic setbacks continued. Americans were held hostage overseas. Our military had been rendered inadequate due to extreme reductions in defense spending. Uncertainty crept across the nation and shrouded college campuses as talk of reinstituting the draft surfaced. The newspapers called it "malaise". More precise descriptions would label it "pessimism", "hopelessness" or "fear".

Meanwhile, a charming gentleman, a former Hollywood star turned conservative spokesman and GOP luminary grew large upon the horizon. He believed in America, embraced the determination and strength of its people, and thus won the hearts of those in every cross section of the country. Included among them were many of those who recently had come of age and eagerly awaited their first opportunity to have a voice in the selection of a President. The gentleman's name was Ronald Reagan.

The first vote I cast in a presidential election was in 1980. I was an idealistic journalism student, living and loving life and enjoying the boundless options available to those of us just beginning our journey in adulthood.

As he first became a national political figure, he was known to many of us new to the voting ranks as the man from the TV show, "Death Valley Days" who introduced the commercials for "Borateem". (A few of us, like me had heard of his talent and handsome good looks from our star struck mothers, who extolled him as the remarkably attractive and disarming actor in "Kings Row " and "Hellcats of the Navy")

Reagan returned national pride to a position of esteem in America. Countless young people of this new decade embraced Mr. Reagan and his philosophies. He reinforced the idealism, traditional values and infinite vision that had been instilled upon us as children at home with our families. At the dinner table, in grammar and secondary school assemblies, in neighborhood organizations and yes, as college students, future leaders and contributors to American society, we had been prepared for this legacy, pondered these principles and how we would each play a role in their fruition.

During the next eight years, President Reagan's unfailing belief in all things American provided a foundation for those of us entering the workforce, building lives and participating in this marvelous society outlined so thoughtfully by our Founding Fathers. There are no adequate words to describe his contribution to this country and to those of us who waited to fulfill its destiny. Possibly, even the timing of his death is an eloquently vital statement about the future. In his infinite love for the United States; in his final farewell, has he asked us to pause and consider our dedication to this nation? Do we need to contemplate the importance of our steadfast devotion to freedom, democracy and strength through world leadership?

Our nation treads in unprecedented waters. We face an enemy never before encountered. This is not unlike the state of affairs more than 20 years ago, when Mr. Reagan came to the helm of our nation. Communism, not terrorism was the foe. Determination, strength, unity and optimism were the answers. Though the enemy is different, as Americans, our answers are the same.

Let us honor President Reagan by contemplating all it means to be American, and by supporting the values we hold, as well as those in office who fight to keep them dear. May we do this with compassion, loyalty, kindness and good humor. I chose this course in 1980. I choose it again today. Despite the absence of words to honor this grand American, memories of his legacy and his part in the growth of young American voters at the time of his presidency and thereafter may be what he would have desired. May we have faith and stay the course as America strives to broaden the reach of freedom across the globe. May God Bless Ronald Reagan.

No spanking in People's Republic

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

For a while there I thought the People's Republic of Brookline was about to open up a rich new field for legislative exploration. Or exploitation, take your pick.

But, alas, they chickened out at the last minute.

The Town Meeting was confronted with a resolution that "encourages parents and caregivers to refrain from the use of corporal punishment" when dealing with their recalcitrant youngsters, which was immediately recognized as an anti-spanking measure.

The Town Meeting voted to table Article 16 on the warrant indefinitely by the surprisingly large (for Brookline) margin of 105 to 78

Ah, there's hope for Brookline yet. Maybe some time in the future the members will be able to salute the flag at Town Meeting and the town's foreign policy will be amended now that the fighting is over in East Timor.

The Town Meeting was confronted with a resolution that "encourages parents and caregivers to refrain from the use of corporal punishment" when dealing with their recalcitrant youngsters,

But don't hold your breath. Those are pretty radical ideas for Brookline or Cambridge or even Amherst, where they were asking seriously not long ago to consider changing the name of the town because the original Amherst was mean to the Indians — or Native Americans, as they are called in Amherst.

Brookline's anti-spanking resolution was proposed by an engineer named Ron Goldman (no, not the waiter friend of O.J.'s ex-wife), who is most often described as "childless" and confesses that he was not spanked personally as a child.

"If it's not okay for an adult to hit another adult, why is it okay for an adult to hit a child? This is intended as a suggestion. It's about raising awareness," he said, speaking like a true Brooklinite.

It's hard to argue with that if you're childless but if you have a child and he likes to hold his breath until he turns blue and they won't let you trade him in for a more tractable model there's nothing better than a good whack in the nether regions to raise his awareness.

It's like the man with five strapping brothers who once told an interviewer, "Our old man never hit us kids — 'cept in self-defense!"

One Town Meeting member, Ben Birnbaum, father of three, was quoted by the Herald, as venturing the thought, "I know children who occasionally got a smack on the butt who turned out fine." Careful, Ben, talk like that in Brookline can get you into a witness program.

Brookline's problems with spanking brought to mind the old saying, "Spare the rod and spoil the child." I wondered where that came from. Not from Brookline, to be sure.

The original idea apparently comes from, of all places, the Bible. Proverbs 13:24 advises us that "those who spare the rod hate their children, but those who love them are diligent to discipline them."

But the actual phrase word-for-word was penned by the 17th century, minor English poet, Samuel Butler, who wrote:

"Love is a boy, by poets styled.
"Then spare the rod and spoil the child."

At the same time, the English monk/poet George Herbert was advising parents:

"Throw away thy rod,
"Throw away thy wrath,
"O my God!
"Take the gentle path."

Herbert, needless to say, would go over big in Brookline.

HEALTH NOTES

Low-carb diets and heart disease

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

According to Stephen Barrett, M.D., author of a Web page http://www.quackwatch.org, many promoters of dietary schemes would have us believe the fallacy that a special substance or combination of foods will automatically result in weight reduction. There are about 3,500 calories in a pound of body weight. To lose one pound a week, you must consume about 500 fewer calories per day than you metabolize. To lose weight, you must eat less, or exercise more, or do both. Most fad diets, if followed closely, will result in weight loss — as a result of caloric restriction. But they are invariably too monotonous and are sometimes too dangerous for long-term use. Moreover, dieters who fail to adopt better exercise and eating habits will regain the lost weight — and possibly more.

Most low-carbohydrate diets do not attempt to limit the intake of proteins, fats, or total calories. Promoters claim that unbalancing the diet will lead to increased metabolism of unwanted fat even if the calories are not restricted. This is not true, but calorie reduction is likely to occur because the diet's monotony tends to discourage overeating. Low-carbohydrate diets also produce ketosis. Ketones are a byproduct of fat metabolism (the breaking down of fat into energy). Normally, your body is efficient at removing these, but when certain enzymes are absent or damaged, the amount of ketones in the body can build up to dangerous levels. Ketosis can lead to coma and death if untreated.

The AMA Council on Foods and Nutrition, Consumer Reports, and many individual experts have warned that the unlimited intake of saturated fats under a low carbs food plan can increase the dieter's risk of heart disease.

The nutrition committee of the American Heart Association has issued a science advisory warning that high-protein diets have not been proven effective and pose health risks. The report covered the Atkins, Zone, Protein Power, Sugar Busters, and Stillman diets. The committee stated:

- Such diets may produce short-term weight loss through dehydration.
- Weight loss may also occur through caloric restriction because the diets are relatively unpalatable.
- The high fat content may be harmful to the cardiovascular system in the long run.
- Any improvement in blood cholesterol levels and insulin management would be due to weight loss, not the change in composition.
- A very high-protein diet is especially risky for patients with diabetes because it can speed the progression of diabetic kidney disease.

The American Heart Association has cautioned: "A high intake of saturated fats over time raises great concern about increased cardiovascular risk."

In 2003, experts who evaluated reports indexed since 1966 in Medline found that weight loss was associated with longer diet duration and calorie restriction but not with reduced carbohydrate content. The researchers concluded: There is insufficient evidence to make recommendations for or against the use of low-carbohydrate diets, particularly among participants older than age 50 years, for use longer than 90 days, or for diets of 20 g/d or less of carbohydrates. Among the published studies, participant weight loss while using low-carbohydrate diets was principally associated with decreased caloric intake and increased diet duration but not with reduced carbohydrate content. Bravata DM and others. (Efficacy and safety of low-carbohydrate diets: A systematic review. JAMA 289:1837-1850, 2003.)

Promoters claim that unbalancing the diet will lead to increased metabolism of unwanted fat even if the calories are not restricted.

The bottom line

Although short-range studies have found that low-carbohydrate diets can produce weight loss, no study has demonstrated that such diets are safe or effective for long-term use. If you are planning to reduce carbs at the expense of guidelines promoted by most nutrition authorities, you are taking an undue risk.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Fiscal crisis may not materialize this year after all

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

June is always about the money at the State House, this one seemingly more so than most.

With the Legislature taking up seemingly a different billion-dollar bill every other day, attention in the building is on bonds and budgets and bottom lines. The House considered 183 amendments with almost no debate and sent a $2 billion package of transportation maintenance and improvement projects to the Senate. Meanwhile, House Ways and Means Chairman John Rogers said the six budget conferees expect to have a final legislative budget on the governor's desk by June 12 – an unusually workmanlike performance for budgeteers if the goal is achieved.

In some ways, this year has turned out to be the fiscal crisis that wasn't. In January, one expected much more of a sense of trauma in June. The negative reaction and dire predictions have not only subsided, they've been obscured by a steady stream of positive reports about revenue collections – so positive that a major emerging and unresolved question of this budget season is what to do with a surplus projected at about $500 million. Gov. Mitt Romney said last week the fiscal developments make tax cuts and a host of new spending initiatives suddenly possible.

But that rosy perspective only extends so far – perhaps only as far as Beacon, Bowdoin and Joy streets. If you run a shelter or a state agency or you're among the cut, it's a crisis. In early spring, Gov. Romney's own highway commissioner warned potholes would go unfilled this summer, and his public safety secretary said important parts of the security agenda would be neglected, under the Legislature's budget. Presumably, that hasn't changed. The picture wasn't made prettier by a break in the good news on revenues last week. The state announced that collections in May were off 6.4 percent from last year, with one more month of income for fiscal '04 left.

And the optimism certainly doesn't project as far as Springfield, where they absolutely know this is a crisis. The city's top officials were in the office of state Auditor Joseph DeNucci last Thursday, persuading the Municipal Finance Board to sign off on a state guarantee for Springfield's bonds. With the city's credit and operations at risk, Gov. Mitt Romney filed emergency legislation offering $50 million in grants and interest-free loans and proposing to put city operations under the control of a $2 million state-dominated receivership board. The bill was on the fast track before public employee labor unions, fearing an erosion of worker rights, temporarily delayed it.

Effects of local aid and state and local budget cuts don't just visit the urban centers in Springfield – the Globe told the gloomy tale of how Andover had to cancel a promising program to equip all public school children with laptops – the sine qua non of modern business and science.

Yet the obvious harbingers of recovery — the revenue numbers — have lifted a significant part of the pall that lay over the business of the State House for a number of years, as reps and senators and agency heads played the bad guy. Romney is on shaky ground if he starts criticizing the Legislature for not spending enough. Yet it could be that a fiscal year that started out being about what to eliminate and who to lay off winds up being about what to restore or how much to sock away now that the good times – maybe – are returning.

Gov. Mitt Romney said last week the fiscal developments make tax cuts and a host of new spending initiatives suddenly possible.

• Finneran says tax hike is premature — The governor restated his position that the growing surplus calls for a reduction of the state income tax rate to 5 percent, and filed legislation to that effect. But House Speaker Thomas Finneran, D-Mattapan, said the time for that has not arrived. "We're on the path of stability and it might be a little bit premature to go and have a celebration, a tax-cutting celebration," Finneran said.

• MTF: give UMass more power over its finances— In a new report, "Removing Barriers to Educational Excellence at the State's Public Research University," the Mass. Taxpayers Foundation calls for the University of Massachusetts system to retain 100 percent of the tuition students pay; that money now flows through the General Fund and part of it sometimes stays there. MTF also said the UMass board of trustees, not the Board of Higher Education, should set tuition, and called for a number of other managerial reforms to make the UMass system more autonomous.

• SJC says welfare dept. had the right to cut utility benefits — Reversing a Superior Court finding, the Supreme Judicial Court ruled that the welfare department last year was within its rights to cut "emergency aid" benefits intended to help recipients pay utility bills. The benefits did go out because of the Superior Court injunction and subsequent legislative appropriations, but the SJC noted a similar situation could arise again anytime. Essentially, the justices found that there was nothing in the department's discretionary benefit-setting powers to prevent future cuts in the name of avoiding overspending.

• State could re-open enrollment in prescription advantage — Officials at the Executive Office of Elder Affairs are considering a 30- to 60-day open enrollment period for Prescription Advantage, the insurance program for medication for seniors. An EOEA spokeswoman told the News Service the state could announce the open enrollment period June 15, but the details are still under review.

• Romney taps Logan security commander to head state police— Gov. Mitt Romney appointed Major Thomas Robbins as the new superintendent of State Police. Robbins, who is currently Logan Airport's security commander, joined the Massachusetts State Police in 1980. He was one of 22 candidates who applied for the position and one of four who were interviewed by Romney.

ASSISTED LIVING FACILITIES AND BACKGROUND CHECKS (H 4390)

House 147-7, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a bill allowing assisted living facilities to conditionally hire a job applicant for a position that involves direct care with residents, pending the receipt of criminal offender record information (CORI) on the applicant. The measure also requires the facilities to monitor the duties of the conditional employees during the waiting period. Current law allows nursing homes to conditionally hire these employees but does not permit assisted living facilities to do so. Override supporters said the bill simply gives assisted living facilities the same options afforded to nursing homes in order to ensure they have enough workers to care for their many elderly and disabled residents. They argued that many assisted living facilities are currently unable to hire adequate staff to care for their residents because applicants are not willing to wait for the results of the CORI check and often choose to take a job elsewhere. They said the bill is a reasonable compromise that allows the state Office of Elder Affairs to develop specific regulations for the monitoring of the conditional employees and includes sufficient safeguards to protect residents while ensuring that they receive necessary services. Override opponents said the new temporary exemption would weaken a system designed to protect these elderly and disabled residents. They argued that the exemption could result in ex-felons being allowed to provide direct care to residents until the facility receives the results of the CORI check. They noted that the vague provision requiring "monitoring" of the conditional employees is a well-intentioned but inadequate safeguard. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill allowing the hiring of conditional workers. A "Nay" vote is against the bill).

STOP TRANSPORTATION BOND AMENDMENTS (H 4766)

House 124-27, approved an order prohibiting the filing of any additional amendments to a $2 billion transportation bond bill. Supporters of the ban said that legislators have had many hours to file amendments and argued that it is time to finish debate on more than 160 amendments and complete action on this important measure. Opponents of the ban said it is unfair and undemocratic to arbitrarily ban further amendments and argued that the ban erodes the power and input of individual members. (A "Yea" vote is for the ban. A "Nay" vote is against the ban).

90-DAY GRACE PERIOD FOR RENEWALS (S 2282)

Senate 37-0, approved an amendment giving a 90-day grace period to an individual with an expired firearm identification (FID) card or license to carry (LTC) if the licensing authority has not acted on the person's renewal application. Amendment supporters said this important change would simply give responsible gun owners a grace period instead of unfairly allowing their licenses to expire because of a law enforcement backlog in handling applications. They noted that many gun owners have complained that their licenses have expired while they are awaiting a decision from authorities. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment allowing a 90-day grace period).

CREATE FIREARM LICENSING REVIEW BOARD (S 2282)

Senate 37-0, approved an amendment creating a seven-member Firearm Licensing Review Board to hear cases of persons who have been denied an FID card or LTC because they were convicted of certain misdemeanors. The amendment also gives the board the power to restore the person's right to reapply for the card or license. Amendment supporters said that under a 1998 law, these people have automatically and unfairly been denied renewals. They noted that the amendment simply allows a small group of people, including some who were convicted of minor youthful indiscretions, an opportunity to reapply. They noted that the amendment is narrowly drawn and would still prohibit appeals by offenders convicted of more serious misdemeanors including drug crimes, firearm crimes and domestic abuse. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment creating the board).

INCREASE LICENSE TERM FROM FOUR TO SIX YEARS (S 2282)

Senate 25-12, approved an amendment increasing from four to six years the period for which an FID card or LTC is valid. The amendment also provides $50,000 in funding for a newly-created review board to hear cases of persons who have been denied a card or license because they were convicted of certain misdemeanors. Amendment supporters said the increased period is reasonable and would help compensate for a 2002 hike from $25 to $100 in firearm licensing fees. They also noted that it is important to fund the review board in order to allow it to function. Amendment opponents said the increase to six years is unnecessary and goes too far. They argued that it would result in important background checks on renewal applicants being performed every six years instead of four. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment making licenses valid for six years and providing $50,000 for the review board. A "Nay" vote is against the amendment).

The day Ronald Reagan came to Cohasset

dent, California governor, and Hollywood actor is being fondly remembered by a grateful country. A staunch fiscal conservative who believed in a strong defense, Reagan earned respect from political allies and foes alike.

Reagan's 1980 campaign stop in Cohasset, organized by then state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and her husband Philip, was followed by a gathering at the former Hugo's (now Atlantica) on Border Street.

It turned into one of those unique Cohasset affairs. Reagan's plane was snowbound in South Carolina, so he was late to the event held at the high school which was packed with a crowd of some 1,200 people.

Dr. Ed Woods of Cohasset played the bagpipes and Jack Conway of Jack Conway Real Estate, served as the emcee. The men kept the audience entertained until Reagan and his entourage that included his wife, Nancy, arrived.

"I had the loudest voice, so they asked me to be master of ceremonies," recalls Conway with a laugh. Conway, who keeps a framed photo of himself with Reagan and a letter from the former president in his Norwell office, said Reagan's charm won over the audience.

One person asked a question about the U.S. giving up the Panama Canal that Reagan did not hear. Nancy Reagan glanced at Conway, who immediately held his hand up and asked the man to stand up and repeat the question.

Drawing by John Anderson of East Bridgewater (formerly of Hingham).

"Afterwards, Reagan smiled at me and said, 'thank you, Jack,'" Conway recalled. "Reagan did a great job and had the room cheering."

John Cafferty of Hingham, who is the Republican State Committeeman for the Plymouth-Norfolk District, was a Democrat when he met Reagan that day in Cohasset. Cafferty, a friend of Mary Jeanette Murray's, was included in the small group of about 20 people who headed to Hugo's.

"After two minutes with Reagan and I was hooked on him from that day forward," Cafferty recalled. "He spoke beautifully." Cafferty described Reagan as about 6 ft. 2 ins. with jet-black hair.

"I told him I was a Democrat," Cafferty said. "And he told me I'd be a Republican someday. He said he was once a Democrat, too."

Wigmore Pierson of Cohasset, who is an "amateur presidential scholar," numbers Reagan as one of the four best presidents of the 20th century – along with both Roosevelts and Truman.

"He clearly had a commitment to his ideals and values and was able to communicate those to the public," he said.

Pierson hadn't yet moved to Cohasset back in 1980, but he did have occasion to meet Reagan in Washington, D.C. a year later. Although the meeting was very brief, it's a moment that Pierson will never forget.

"At about that time John Hinckley was getting off the bus," Pierson recalls. Just about 24 hours after Pierson met Reagan, Hinckley made his assassination attempt outside the Washington Hilton.

In Cohasset, Reagan joked with the crowd that he'd come to town to "get some sunshine" after being stuck in a foot of snow on a South Carolina runway, according to a local newspaper, the Mirror.

The Mirror reported Nancy Reagan delighted members of the audience by asking them for the state as an anniversary present. The couple had just celebrated their 28th wedding anniversary. [Reagan carried Massachusetts by just 3,829 votes out of 2.56 million cast in 1980 but won the state by a big margin in 1984]. Reagan said his reforms in California and his "turning red ink to black" as proof he could run the country

Mary Jeanette Murray remembers Reagan as down-to-earth and very sweet. "He was a plain Joe, I really liked him," she said.

Cohasset's Polly Logan, who served on the Republican National Committee in 1980, recalls stopping by the high school that day. She also met Reagan on several other occasions, as did Conway and Pierson.

Logan, who hails from Iowa, said Reagan's eyes twinkled and he possessed small-town, mid-western charm. Reagan's humble roots were planted in Dixon, Ill.

"He almost had as bad a childhood as Clinton's," Logan said. "He led a very simple life."

Logan also said Reagan had a great sense of humor and his years as an actor provided him with the ability to hold an audience and make his points. She bemoaned Pres. George W. Bush's "sing-song" speech pattern. "It wouldn't hurt if we sent all candidates to acting school," she joked.

Woods, who played the bagpipes while the Cohasset crowd waited, said the Murrays asked him to fill in the gap. He was also impressed by Reagan.

"He was a magical guy," Woods said.

Conway recalls inflation was soaring, unemployment was high and the stock market was in disarray when Reagan was running for president back in 1980.

"He was calm and took it all in stride," Conway said. "He was an honest, ethical and determined person. He had a lot of commonsense.

"The guy was great," he said. "We have not seen that kind of love for a president in a long while."

Summer almond fruit tart shouldn't be missed

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

A few years back, I started making freeform summer fruit tarts, the American version of the galette. Make a one-crust pie dough, roll it out, top it with fruit, sprinkle a few tablespoons of sugar on top, and then bake. It's rough and ready, great for summer entertaining. The next step was to add a frangipane (almond) filling along with the fruit.

For the pie pastry, I use a basic American dough which combines Crisco and butter. If you are averse to cooking with hydrogenated vegetable oil (i.e. Crisco), you can use all butter, but the resulting dough will be a bit less flaky. (One can use a variety of other doughs but this is the simplest to make and roll out.) I found it best to roll the pie dough into an 11-inchcircle which is then folded over to form a 9-inch tart. The pastry needs to be very well chilled in order to shape the tart. Limp dough falls apart.

For the almond filling, I started with nothing more than a simple layer of ground almonds that simply sits under the fruit. Our tasters barely knew that they were there. Next, I tested a real frangipane, a homemade French almond paste made from almonds, sugar, egg, butter and flavorings. I tested toasting the almonds first but preferred them raw. Starting with slivered almonds is best since they have to be ground extremely finely. A half-cup of sugar was just the right amount and the sugar and nuts need to be ground together so that the nuts don't turn into almond butter in the food processor. One whole egg was just right, using an extra white, as suggested by some recipes, simply made the filling too loose for this application. For our fruit tart I omitted the usual vanilla extract and reduced the almond extract to 1/4 teaspoon. Finally, I used a modest four tablespoons of butter to make the tart hold together better and to not overpower the fruit.

I tried using berries, stone fruit, and even rhubarb in the tart. My favorite variations were the peach, plum or apricot. With the peach or apricot I didn't mind a few blueberries thrown in. The amount of fruit to frangipane can be tricky — if too much fruit is used, the almonds get lost, and if too little fruit is used, the frangipane raises up and takes over. Four cups of fruit worked best in our 9-inch tart. I cut the peaches into1/2-inch wedges, the plums and apricots I quartered. I found the fruit needed a tiny bit of sweetening, so I tossed it with a bit of lemon juice and a tablespoon of sugar to balance its flavor with the frangipane. If I used any more sugar the tart was too sweet.

Baking the tart was a bit tricky since I needed the crust to be well browned, the fruit soft and juicy, and the frangipane cooked through. For best results I started the tart at 400 degrees and after 20 minutes lowered the oven to 375 where it remained for 20 to 25 minutes longer. It should be cooled for about 20 minutes before serving. Unlike fruit pies, this tart can be served slightly warm. To make the tart look extra special it can be glazed with apple jelly that has been heated and brushed on shortly after the tart comes out of the oven.

Summer almond fruit tart

If making the tart with peaches or apricots, a small handful of blueberries adds an extra burst of color and flavor. You can make the pie dough with all butter if you like, but the dough will be a bit harder to roll out and will also be less flaky.

For the pie dough:

5 tablespoons cold unsalted butter
1 1/4 cup all purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
5 tablespoons cold vegetable shortening (e.g., Crisco)
4 to 6 tablespoons ice water

For the Frangipane

1 cup blanched slivered almonds
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/8 teaspoon salt
1 large egg
1/4 teaspoon almond extract
4 tablespoons unsalted butter cut into 4 pieces and softened to cool room temperature

To finish the tart

4 cups prepared fruit, i.e. peach pits removed, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch wedges, or pitted apricots or plums, quartered
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon granulated sugar
1/4 cup apple jelly (optional)

1. For the pie dough: Cut the butter into 3/4-inch pieces and place in freezer for 15 minutes. Mix flour, salt and sugar in a food processor fitted with the steel blade. Place the Crisco, cut into 1 tablespoon lumps, into the processor along with the butter pieces. Pulse 8 to 10 times (1-second pulses) or until the dough appears slightly yellow and pebbly in texture and starts to ride up the sides of the processor bowl. Turn the mixture into a medium bowl. Sprinkle 3 tablespoons of ice water over the mixture. Using a rubber spatula or your hands, fold and press down on the dough until the dough sticks together, being careful to evenly distribute the water. You may need to add up to three tablespoons more water if the dough will not come together. It is better for the dough to be too wet rather than too dry. Form the dough into a ball, flatten into a 4-inch disc, wrap in plastic and refrigerate for at least thirty minutes. The dough should feel firm but not hard.

2. For the frangipane: Process the almonds, sugar and salt in food processor until the almonds are very finely ground, about 45 seconds. Add the egg and almond extract and process until combined, about 10 seconds. Add the butter and process until well-combined and smooth, about 10 seconds longer. Set aside.

3. To finish the tart: Heat the oven to 425 degrees and adjust a rack to the lower position. Line a cookie sheet or jellyroll pan with parchment paper. Roll out dough into roughly an 11 1/2 inch circle on a lightly floured surface. Trim away the rough edges leaving a tidy 11 inch round. Transfer dough onto parchment lined sheet. (Drape dough over the rolling pin to transfer. A dough scraper or flat spatula works well.) Spread the almond cream onto the pie dough leaving a two-inch border. Toss the fruit with the lemon juice and sugar and place in an even layer over the almond cream. Lift the two-inch border of dough up and over the fruit and filling. (Dough will drape over the fruit in folds.)

4. Place tart in oven and bake for 20 minutes. Reduce temperature to 375 degrees and bake for an additional 20 to 25 minutes or until the crust is well browned, the fruit is soft and any exposed frangipane is lightly browned and puffy. Cool on a wire rack for at least 20 minutes before serving. May be served warm or at room temperature. For the optional glaze the jelly should be heated until bubbly and smooth and then brushed onto the surface of the fruit (don't glaze the crust) once it has cooled for about ten minutes.

Steven Gould at Senior Summit

Steven Gould of Cohasset Knoll joined 250 other seniors and activists from across Norfolk County at Norfolk District Attorney Bill Keating's annual Senior Summit on Friday, May 21. The program's goals were to build strong relations between area groups that serve senior citizens and to provide seniors with information to keep them safe and healthy.

The Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles presentation on functional impairment addressed both the difficulties that elder drivers face - Massachusetts alone has 60,000 licensed drivers over age 85 - and strategies to compensate for them.

First round tourney ouster a bump in road for young boys tennis squad

By Lou Molinari
CORRESPONDENT

Rain, rain go away. It didn't happen. At least it didn't happen down in Seekonk last Thursday.

The rain came down, Seekonk's points made it up to three and that was all she wrote or he wrote, in an on-going effort to be P.C. (For those of you in never-never land, that's Politically Correct).

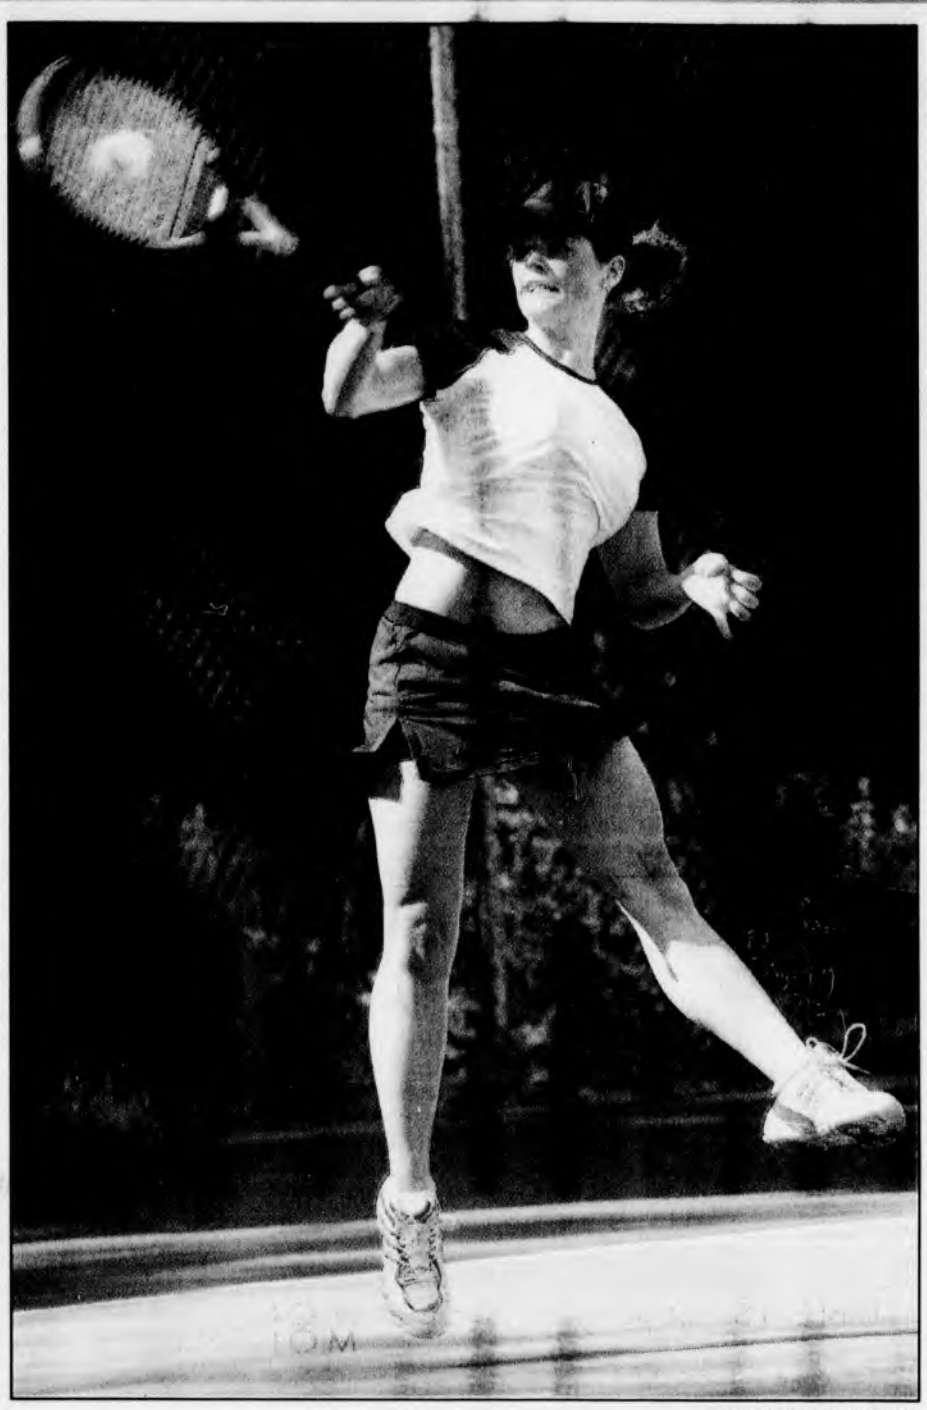
The best Cohasset boys tennis season since coach Kent Parrot took over three years ago came to an end in the preliminary round of Division Two play, as Seekonk defeated the Skippers, 3-0.

"It was just awful out there," claimed Parrot. "The rain just made it unplayable With Seekonk leading, 3-0, it was the right time to call the game."

The rainy end brought Cohasset's excellent season to 12-8. The best part of the big winning season is that it's a young Cohasset team. Things will only get better for the Skippers.

Two of the players returning next year are All-League sophomores Dan Sullivan and Nils Sceery.

Sullivan was the team's number one singles player and Sceery held down the team's number two singles spot.



The number three singles position was held by freshman Blain Morin this season. Along with the three singles spot, the second doubles team of freshman Rich Donzo and sophomore Kyle Dattola should also be a year better next spring.

Cohasset will lose one senior to graduation, Andrew Wise, who made up one half of the first doubles team.

According to coach Parrot, Sceery was the team's leading scorer this season, finishing up with a 14-4 record.

"It was a very good season," said Parrot. "The team did very well and, best of all, it's a young team, a very young team at that.

"The team will only get better. A number of the team's member play at tennis clubs and practice just about year-round."

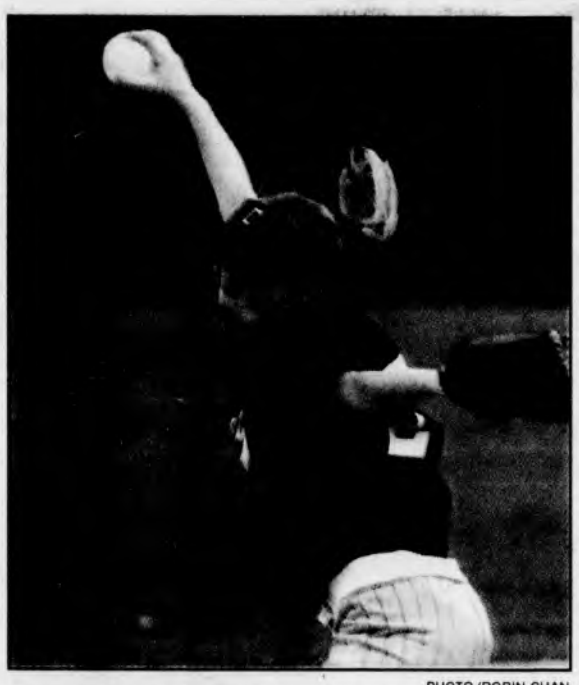
Girls tennis team advances to semifinals with shutout of Canton

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

In some alternate universe, maybe it is the Cohasset girls tennis team that can't beat Canton.

Here on Earth, however, the two squads faced off in the state tournament for the fourth straight year on Tuesday. And for the fourth straight time, Cohasset came out on top, cruising this time to a 5-0 win.

The victory earned the girls a south sectional semifinal date at Medfield, yesterday, after the Mariner went to press. With a win yesterday, Cohasset would take on the winner of Ursuline-Old Rochester in the sectional final today.



Four matches in four days is a tough stretch, but Cohasset handled the first half of it with relative ease, as both wins over Canton and Mansfield on Monday were done in about an hour.

After Tuesday's match, head coach Gigi Meehan said her team appeared to be peaking at the right time.

"They came out so fired up today," she said. "The whole team was cheering everybody on. There was just a lot of team spirit, a lot of camaraderie."

Considering how well everyone played, it would have been hard to not get excited. All five

These looks prove deceiving

Young softball team showed major upgrades in year two

At first glance, Cohasset's 5-13 varsity softball record appears second class, especially up against the likes of their SSL rivals such as Harwich and Abington. A closer inspection, though, reveals a team poised to excel in future seasons.

Of course, the girls of the blue and white recognize they have work to do, especially on offense.

Despite the disappointing win-loss record, team morale ran high. Coach Deb Bostwick closely monitored the ways in which her players interacted with each other. Both inexperienced players as well as veterans were treated with equal fairness and attention. Annoying cliques never surfaced during the season.

Other factors contributed to the positive outlook. The pitching squad included some jaw-dropping talent. Freshman Christina Pinkus started the season strongly with 16 strikeouts. Unfortunately, in a heated Carver game, Christina injured her pitching arm. Virginia Spofford and Katie James stepped up to the mound following Pinkus' injury. Katie racked up nine strikeouts by means of a killer fastball. Virginia Spofford ended the season with a staggering 50 strikeouts.

On a team basis, hitting never surfaced as a strong variable. However, if one looks at hitting on an individual basis, you could see how good morale never sagged. Katie James batting average in 2003 ended at .156. This year, she clobbered her way this year to end with a .408 average.

Catcher Casey Anderson bettered last year's .310 average by ending this year with a .361 mark. Seniors Caitlin

Skippers sail on from Martha's Vineyard

Laxmen advance to semifinals with win over Vineyarders, 10-4

Boys lacrosse semifinals
Skippers at Dover-Sherborn
Friday, 3:30 p.m.

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Stu Curran has been telling anyone who'd listen how far his Cohasset boys lacrosse team has come since he took over the program at the beginning of this season. On Monday, perhaps the best evidence to date supporting these bold assertions came, as the Skippers traveled to Martha's Vineyard and avenged an earlier season home loss with a relatively easy 10-4 win.

The win earned the Skippers a lot more than a pound of flesh, however; it also advanced them into a semifinals showdown in the Div. 3 state tourney at Dover-Sherborn tomorrow afternoon (3:30 start).

"That won't be an easy match, but we're playing very good lacrosse right now, and it's almost difficult to imagine us losing right now," said Curran. "It wouldn't surprise me at all if we're playing for a (state) championship next week."

The Skippers lost two of their better players to injury early on at Martha's Vineyard Monday in senior middie Mark Davis (thumb injury) and junior attackman Jake Previte (rolled ankle), the team's leading scorer. Both scored a goal before the injuries hit, and their losses left Curran a little anxious as he scrambled to compensate.

He needn't have worried.

Previte's normal attack line partners Mike Rasmussen (goal, assist) and Aidan Buick (two goals, assist) took on a greater load, and offense came from a few unexpected sources as well. Junior Sam Steele (two goals) and sophomore Jake Kovak (goal) helped fill the voids.

Freshman Mike Bunstein also scored a key third quarter goal that helped the Skippers begin to take over clear control of the game.

The defense did the rest.

MAJOR LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Athletics

Last week the A's faced the Cards in an "A" game format. Brendan Doonan pitched for the A's for three innings and struck out 7. Andy McKenna pitched three innings and struck out 3. It was a pitching and defensive battle. Big hits came from Doonan (double RBI, and a triple), Andy McKenna a single and a triple, and base hits from Johnny Maher (RBI) and EJ Culhane. Strong defensive play came from Maher, Mike Monaco behind the plate, Culhane at short and Jack Murphy in center field. The A's went on to win 3-0. In a match up versus the Dodgers, the A's came out on top in an action packed game. Rookie Chris Murphy took the mound for the first time and displayed confidence and composure. Chris struck out 5 hard swinging Dodgers. Derek Froio pitched the middle innings for the A's in his major league debut. Derek fielded a few ground balls that came back at him and assisted in the put outs. Other game highlights include two home runs by veteran Brendan "my son" Doonan in back to back at bats. Other strong hitting came from Johnny Maher with a triple, Jack Murphy with a big single to center field and EJ Culhane. Chase Murphy expertly shored up left field catching a pop up and a line drive. The A's final game of the week, was also their toughest. The A's faced the Red Sox in a rematch of last year's championship contenders. Brendan Doonan pitched the first 5 1/3 innings, with Johnny Maher coming in relief. Doonan registered 11 strikeouts against the Sox, however it wasn't enough as the Sox sent the ball into the gaps and won 6-1. Brendan Doonan smashed a double with an RBI for the A's only run. Once again, Chase Murphy in left field used his speed and agility and made a tremendous diving catch in left field to end the top of the 5th inning. In a tough loss to the Pirates, the A's with their rally caps came back from an 11-2 deficit to score 5 runs in the top of the fifth inning. Andy Mckenna started the rally with a double.

Brendan Doonan, Johnny Maher, Jake Kissick and, Jack Murphy who each went 2 for 3, with 2 RBI's each, EJ Culhane and Chris Murphy, led the scoring charge for the A's. Derek Froio, Sean McKenna and Chase Murphy all reached base to help the A's get into scoring position. Thomas Barrett caught a shot to right field to end the 4th inning run-up by the Pirates. Due to darkness, the game was called and the A's momentum was cut short, and they lost 11-7.

Cardinals

The Cards faced the A's in a great match up this week. Todd Emanuello started on the mound for the Cards. He registered three K's in two innings. John Kearney doubled into left field in the bottom of the 1st for the Cards big hit of the game. John Collins played solidly at 3rd, fielding many A's line drives and making the out throwing to first.

Ben Campbell shored up the infield at short stop, stopping the hard drives by the A's. Todd Emanuello, who moved to catcher in the third inning, made a great run saving tag on an A who was stealing home on a passed ball. Very alertly, Todd scooped a passed ball and lunged for the tag at home plate. Despite solid team play, the Cards came up on the short side of the 3-0 score. Earlier in the week, the Cards were triumphant over the Pirates, 5-1. It was a tight game with the score 2-1. Tight, that is, until the last inning. Pitching was solid for the redbirds, with John Kearney striking out six, Todd Emanuello striking out three and Ben Campbell, closing the game and striking out four Pirates. Alex Harper had an RBI single that led a Cards rally late in the game. Pat Kearney also contributed with an RBI single. Dan Sullivan led the defense, shoring up the outfield and making several nice plays. The Cards next game was against the Rangers. Todd Emanuello pitched three innings of one run ball. He also had two big hits that broke the game open and led to a strong Cardinals win over the Rangers. Kevin O'Connell was the defensive strength for the Cards, controlling the infield for several putouts. Offensively, O'Connell had three big hits, Sebastien Braga contributed a strong double that kept the winning rally going. John Kearney pitched three solid innings, striking out six. In a loss to the Mets, the most exciting play of the season happened when Ian Porter stole home from third to score the tying run. Versus the Dodgers, the Cardinals, players and coaches alike, put on their rally caps in a great game. Kevin O'Connell and Todd Emanuello shared pitching duties, each registering three strikouts. Ben Campbell closed out the game on the mound for the Cards. Pat Kearney went 3 for 3 at the plate, with an RBI. Campbell and Emanuello each had strong doubles. Alex Harper in center field and John Collins on third led the defensive charge for the redbirds. The final outcome, Dodgers won by 2 runs.

Red Sox

The Red Sox had a spectacular win over the A's and tough losses to the Pirates, Mets and Rangers. Jordan Berry registered another home run in a losing effort to the Pirates, while Jodi Rosano pitched three solid innings. The big game for the Sox came against the A's on the eve of Memorial Day. In the "A" game format, Jordan Berry pitched great for the Sox with nine strikouts. The Sox defense was flawless. Diving catches and smart in field play kept the A's from scoring. Berry caught two pop ups in the infield. Nick Cannon robbed an A's batter with a athletic diving catch on a shot to left field. Luke Ernst in center field made two spectacular catches on big hits, a sliding catch in the bottom of the fourth and a diving catch in the bottom of the sixth inning. In the bottom of the 5th inning, rookie Kyle Livingstone made a big league diving catch on a line shot to first base. Kyle said "when I saw the ball coming at me, I kept my eye on the ball and dove for it and caught it". Jodi Rosano played solidly behind the plate, keeping the A's from advancing around the base path. Offensively, Jack Carrier and Jeff Cavanaro sealed the win for the Sox each with an RBI triple in the top of the 5th inning. Other hits came from Sean Ahearn and Garrett Canney. Sluggers Jordan Berry and Jeff Cavanaro registered RBI doubles in the top of the 6th inning to put a "W" in the win column for the Red Sox. Later in the week, Jordan Berry hit a home run versus the Mets. Jeff Cavanaro, Kyle Livingstone, Pete McKenna and JoDi Rosano shared pitching duties for the Sox, but the Met's sluggers were on target for the night.

Dodgers

In another match-up, the Dodgers faced the A's. Chris Brown at shortstop controlled the infield. Hits by the A's were expertly handled by Brown who assisted in the put outs. Brown confidently handled a line drive in the top of the 3rd inning and then turned the double play with a throw to 1st to catch the base runner off the bag.

Tyler Judge pitched well for the Dodgers. Johnny McGoldrick was phenomenal at second base with a diving grab in the 4th inning for the out and then on the next batter, he fielded a blooper and tagged the runner going to second for back to back outs. In the next inning, McGoldrick caught a high pop up for an out. Offensively, the hit of the game was a shot by Jake Wheelwright to center field that one hopped over the fence. In baseball terms, this was a ground rule double, with an RBI. Chris Brown then followed up with a two RBI double. Also reaching base for the Dodgers in this game were Jay Salerno and Johnny McGoldrick with base hits, and Patrick MacCormack and Mitchell McNary.

The Dodgers and the Rangers toughed it out to a 6-6 tie. Vincent Kennedy had a great game pitching for Dodgers and he knocked in the tying runs with a 6th inning double.

Jake Wheelwright just missed hitting a home run, with the ball hitting the fence six inches below the homerun line. He made a spectacular catch in center field for one of the season's great plays. Veteran Justin Yeager pitched three rock solid innings for the men in blue. Chris Brown, Mitch McNary and Jay Salerno stay focused at the plate, providing great offensive action. The Dodgers posted a strong win over the Cardinals in their last outing of the week. Justin Yeager and Chris Brown shared pitching duties, with Jay Salerno closing the game out for the Dodgers. Strong, solid base hits to put men into scoring position allowed the Dodgers to come out on top. Yeager, Brown, Salerno, Johnny McGoldrick, Mitch and Dean McNary and Pat MacCormack all put the ball into play allowing runs to score with solid base hits.. Defensively, the Dodgers executed a perfect "pickle" on a Cardinal player attempting to steal home from third. Jake Wheelwright played solidly at third base. He fielded a line shot and then quickly threw it to first for an important third out in the third inning.

Pirates

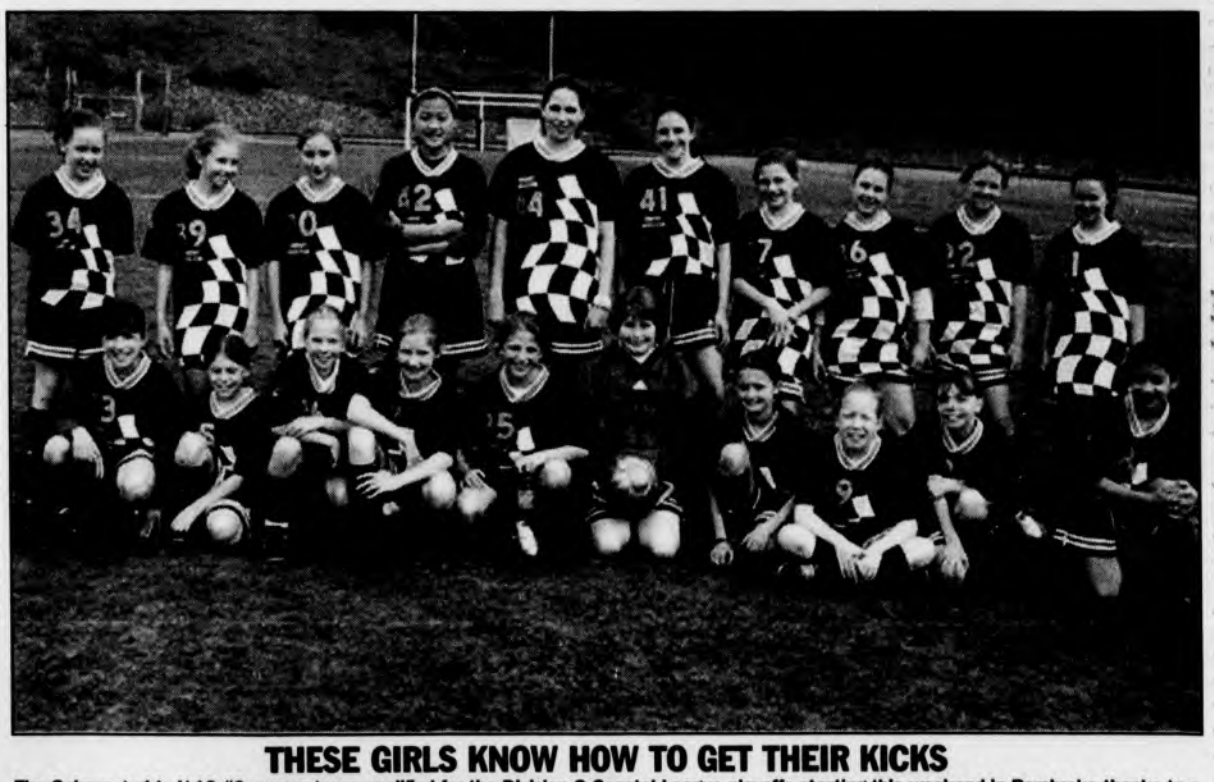
The Pirates had an up and down week with a strong win over the Red Sox and tough losses to the Cardinals, Dodgers and Mets. Against the Cardinals, Tom Buckley pitched great one run ball and then made a tremendous diving catch in center field. Travis Craven was solid at second base. Once again, Geoff Evans played strongly behind the plate, quietly controlling the base runners with his ability to pick off any body who dare try to steal. Austin Meyer played with great confidence at short stop. It was a 2-1 game through five innings. The Cardinal bats came alive in the 6th inning. Chris Walsh, on the mound for the Pirates snagged a line drive for the first out of the inning. However, the boys in black & gold couldn't hold on and the Cardinals earned the victory. Versus the Mets, it was the top of the fifth, and the Pirates were down 4 to 1. Robbie Hill hit a huge RBI triple to make the game 4 -2. In a risky move, Hill then went to steal home, only to be tagged out by the Mets pitcher who was covering the plate on the passed ball. In the bottom of the inning, Thomas Buckley was pitching. Austin Meyer at short stop fielded a hard line drive that could have resulted in extra bases. Buckley then struck out the next batter, a base hit by the Mets moved the base runner to third. Buckley then returned the Mets favor, and tagged the advancing runner out at home. The final Mets batter of the inning was struck out by T-Buc. Despite all this great action, the Pirates couldn't cross the plate in the top of the 6th inning and the Mets went on to win.

Mets

Last week, slugger Robbie McCunney had a walk off home run. In an action packed game against the Red Sox, Robert Jones pitched three strong innings, allowing only one hit, which happened to be a homerun by Red Sox ace, Jordan Berry. Rookie Taylor Golz pitched well for two innings, followed by an inning of relief from Max McCleave. McCleave was a powerhouse at the plate for the Mets, going 4 for 4, including a double and 4 RBI's. David Hernon went 2 for 4 with a double to right center field. Sam Leahy hit a beauty, a double in fact, to deep left center field, that one hopped to the fence.

In a strong outing versus the Dodgers, Robbie McCunney and Robert Jones shared pitching duties. Tom Condon was terrific, going 3 for 3 with 3 RBI's. Once again he played great behind the plate, catching for the Met's hurlers. Charlie Pham had a great catch in right field for a putout. The Mets went on to win 9-2. In a close matchup with the Pirates the Mets were up 3-1 in the bottom of the 4th inning. With Max McCleave on third, Robert Jones hit a shot to center field to score McCleave and go up, 4-1.

Drew Cobin had a solid six innings on the mound for the Mets, still firing strikes in the final inning. The Pirates had a man on third, in scoring position who attempted to steal home on a passed ball. An alert Cobin, covered home plate coming from the pitcher's mound to tag the advancing runner out. In the top of the sixth inning, with the tying run on first base for the Pirates, Tom Condon, from behind the plate fired the ball to Robbie McCunney who was covering second to throw the advancing base runner out. The Mets went on to win 4-2.

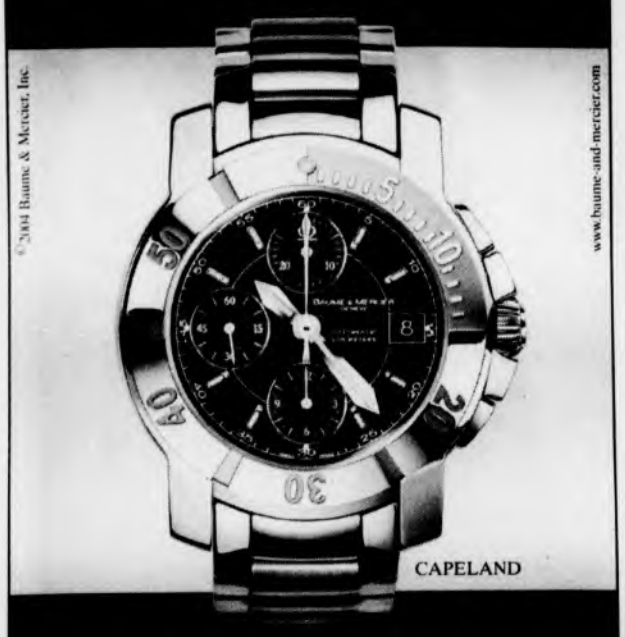


Rangers

Facing the Cardinals, Robbie Mahoney at third base displayed veteran level performance.

According to coach Steve Giuggio, "Robbie was awesome!". Jamie Faber led the team with three hits. Eamon Davis and Chase Stebbins shared pitching duties. Davis notched three strikeouts versus the Cardinals and Stebbins pitched one run ball. Davis led a Ranger rally with a gigantic double to center field that hit the fence. Jeff Charles, Graham Stevenson Christian Allard and Dean Driscoll continue to demonstrate team work and hard hitting for the Rangers. Despite heroic efforts, the Rangers fell short to the Cards, losing 12-4.

Later in the week, the Rangers battled the Dodgers to a 6-6 tie.



The Ranger bats were red hot in a terrific game versus the Red Sox. Veteran John Giuggio hit a huge triple in the top of the third inning, which was followed by an inside the park home run by Eamon Davis. Davis hit a shot to deep right field, and with his head down, following his coaches instructions, Davis motored around the bases with lightening speed. Jamie Faber pitched for the Rangers in this "B" game matchup. The Rangers went on to win 10-6.

Girls tennis advances to semifinals with shutout matches were straight-set wins, with no one losing more than three games in a set.

Perhaps the most promising development over the first two matches of the tournament has been the first doubles play of Courtney Caron and Rachel Garber.

Cohasset made a lineup change a few weeks ago, with Garber and Chelsea Grossman switching between third singles and first doubles.

The new team got off to a slow start, but their play of late has turned first doubles back into a position of great strength for Cohasset. Their match with Canton may have been their best yet.

"The girls they played were very aggressive," Meehan said. "But both girls played great. Rachel went over them with top-spin lobs, and Courtney was just hitting it through people. And both were great with their serves."

Also turning it around of late after some season-ending struggles is second singles player Holly Graham. Against Canton, the senior put together a strong 6-3, 6-0 win.

This came after an impressive 6-1, 6-2 win over Mansfield freshman Lauren Desmond on Monday. Graham played her style perfectly, returning every shot her opponent made and waiting for her to make a mistake. The Cohasset senior also had several strong backhand winners from the baseline.

Grossman and Liz Stone both won on Monday without losing a single game, and each won Tuesday by the score of 6-1, 6-1. The number two doubles team of Emilie Sullivan and Corey Evans also won both their matches easily, displaying an unbeatable mix of strong serving and great reflexes at the net.Of course, things are a little different this year compared to last. As defending state champions, Cohasset has the proverbial bulls eye on their backs. And it may be even bigger than that, according to the coach.

"We have a bulls eye that covers our entire bus," Meehan said. "Clearly, the dynamic is different when you're the state champion. Everyone is gunning for you. It's been a tough position to be in, but the girls are really rising to the occasion."

If Cohasset is still alive as you are reading this, they will have risen to the occasion even further.

Skippers sail on from Vineyard

FROM SKIPPERS, PAGE 19

Senior captains Mike Devine and Conor Buick shut down Vineyards top attackman, and junior Kevin Dinsmore did a superb job, according to Curran, of filling in for the ailing Casey Coleman (mononucleosis).

"Kevin did a great job stepping into some big shoes," said Curran, "and Mike and Conor did just what you want your leaders to do. They've been so solid all year, but they both stepped up to an even higher level."

And senior netminder Nick Murphy was simply superb, stopping 17 of the 21 shots Vineyard players put on net.

More good news came the day after the game, as it was learned both Previte and Davis should be fit for duty for Friday's semifinals showdown.

Skippers 21, Tri-County 2

Not a lot of suspense here, obviously.

The host Skippers got a balanced effort to put this one out of reach early, with Aidan Buick leading the offense. The sophomore attackman finished with three goals and three assists, but seemed to have a direct hand in virtually every one of the early goals that helped the Skippers build their insurmountable lead.

"Aidan just took over in the early part of the game and we never looked back," said Coach Curran.

Junior attackman Jake Previte finished with a game best five goals and four assists, and the third member of the starting Cohasset front line, senior captain Mike Rasmussen, added four tallies.

Senior Mark Davis (goal, assist) played a strong game in the midfield, as did Trevor Brady, DeWayne Morris, Mike Bunstein and Jon Grimm (goal, assist).

The defense played well, with Leo Clougherty and Kevin Dinsmore doing a nice job stepping in for Casey Coleman (mononucleosis) at longstick. Regular starters Mike Devine, Conor Buick and Jeff Brown also did a nice job of helping to compensate for their downed running mate.

In net, senior Nick Murphy stopped four of the five shots he saw in the first half before giving way to his backups in the second half. Junior Chris Simms let in one goal in the third and sophomore Ben Libby shut the door in the fourth.

Cohasset players, such as Christina Pinkus (left), came a long way this spring, but they also had some fun, as demonstrated by Katie James (right).

Young softball team showed major upgrades

FROM SOFTBALL, PAGE 19

Gontarz, Rachel Doyle, and Danielle Pinkus respectively jumped from .200 to .358, .279 to .345, and from .327 to .351.

Freshmen Christina Pinkus finished off the season with a high average of .389, while Laura Campedelli batted a highly respectible .394.

To celebrate the end of the 2004 season, Coach Bostwick hosted her team members at Bertuccis in Hingham. As part of the dinner the coach recognized certain players for their outstanding contributions including:

Sophomore Katie James - Best Offensive Player Award

Casey Anderson - Defensive Player Award

Caitlin Gontarz - Most Improved Award

Rachel Doyle - Coach's Award for help and dedication

Danielle Pinkus - Most Valuable Player Award

Melissa Crowley-Buck - Golden Glove Award for exceptional fielding.

"This season, we successfully proved we can compete with most SSL teams. We are a young and a growing team. With work we can become a top team," reflected Coach Deb Bostwick.

Casey Anderson echoed her coach's sentiments: "Right now, we have limitless potential. We can build on what we have."

First-baseman Erin Liddell also thought the Skippers could become championship contenders if they could further boost their confidence and hitting.

Coach Bostwick has already outlined her strategy for starting the 2005 team with a competitive edge. She has lined up AA baseball player Lew Rettman to run a softball clinic at Freedom Field during the off-season. Casey Anderson plans to help out at the camp.

Additionally, Bostwick has encouraged next year's hopefuls to take advantage of the new batting cage at Freedom Field or to play in a summer softball league. She also suggested her players explore the possibility of attending a highly-regarded camp at Wheaton College.

Youth lady laxers just keep on rolling

The rains proved a more daunting opponent than Norwell or Pembroke for the Cohasset youth girls lacrosse teams on Sunday, June 6 at Deer Hill School.

Pembroke, for the second time this spring, simply used the rain as an excuse to avoid playing Cohasset, standing up the Cohasset White team. Norwell might have wished it had done the same, given the outcome of games at three different age levels.

The day started with Cohasset playing its first-ever game for 11-and-Under players, girls in grades three and four. Those children have played in a clinic all spring, instead of playing games, but you never would have known it was their first game by looking.

Whitney Jaffe opened the scoring and Danielle Healy finished off a feed from Claire Oswald as Cohasset got off to a 2-0 lead. Stephanie Brierly made several outstanding saves in the net, and a defense led by Ellie Tedeschi, Amanda and Nicole Farren, Taylor Kennedy and Zoe Whilton did a great job keeping Norwell at bay until late in the stanza. Were it not for two goals taken off the board, Cohasset would have entered the break much farther ahead than 2-1.

Norwell took control of the game early in the second half, scoring two goals to take a lead. But Cohasset's midfield play - led by Hope Kissick, Amber Silvia, Kate Bodner, Watson Leffel and Alison Whelan - turned the tide, even though Cohasset had trouble scoring. Jaffe's second score of the day tied the game and Sarah Evans finished a terrific afternoon with the game-winner with just moments left in the game. Danielle Frederick played the second half in the goal, standing tall to preserve the win.

Cohasset's older girls took the field next, with the Blue 13-U team (5th and 6th grades) squaring off against Norwell. While Cohasset was undermanned compared to its usual standards, it made little difference, as this game was a route from start to finish.

Hannah Burgess and Maddy Altholtz each scored three goals and picked up one assist, with Anna Michalowski and Sophie Bertolami adding two goals each, as Cohasset dominated the play. Bertolami and Lindsay Davis each added an assist.

Megan Richardson and Eliza Kinnealey were dominant in the defensive zone and Kate Hillman created several outstanding scoring opportunities at attack. Olivia Murphy and Whitney Jaffe split four saves between them to capture the shutout.

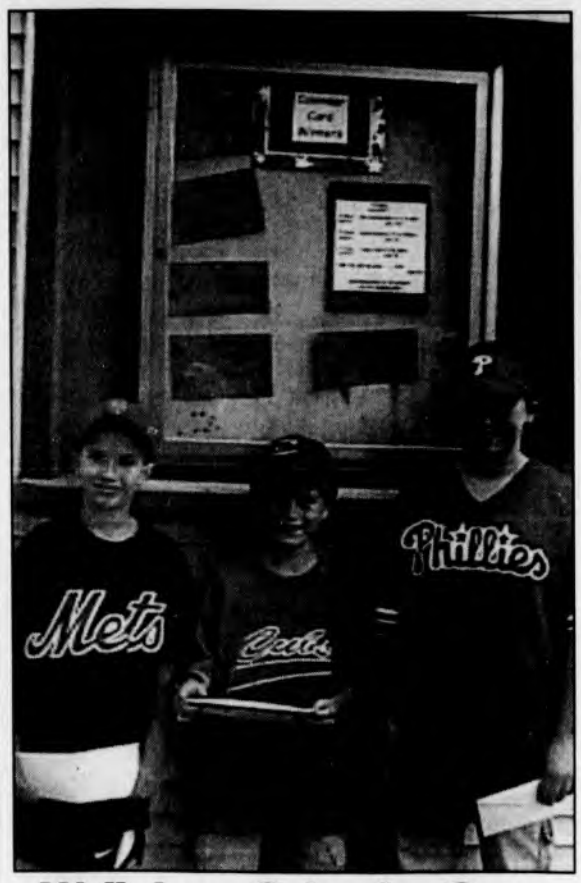
The shutout loss meant the Norwell 13-U team was O-for-Cohasset this season, having lost via shutout to Cohasset Blue in May. The combined score of the two games was 22-0.

The unbeaten Cohasset 15-U team was equally dominant in its turn on the field, romping past the visitors 11-2. Gabriella Flibotte scored a natural hat trick to open the game, and both she and Katelyn Ryan finished the day with four goals each. Katie Gaumer, Maura Barnes and Paige Strecker added solo scores, with Strecker, Sarah Brown and McKenna Teague adding one assist each on the day.

As good as the offense was, the defense was even better, frustrating Norwell at almost every turn. Lindsay Hill led the way, but Liz Tetrault and Natalie Hunt both put together their best defensive efforts of the season. Flibotte and Thomson Jaffe split the goaltending chores, splitting three saves between them.

Earlier in the week, the girls 15-U team squared off against Hull, and after trading early goals and staying at 1-1 for about 10 minutes, Cohasset scored six unanswered goals to blow the game open. Sixth-grader Thomson Jaffe's play in net was also a first-half highlight, stopping five of the six shots she faced; her first save marked the 200th stop she has made in three seasons playing in the cage for Cohasset's youth girls, and she would finish the afternoon with eight stops.

After a three-goal Hull rally opened the second half, Jenny Cahill's score on a solo dash to the net woke Cohasset up, and the home team cruised from there, winning 13-6.



Gabriella Flibotte led the way on the day with five goals and two assists, but Katie Gaumer's hat trick included the play of the day, knocking down an outlet pass from Hull's goalie and depositing the ball in the back of the net.

Grace Clougherty picked up a goal and an assist, and Caitlin Mahoney, Kaley Madge and Madeline Leahy added single markers.

The 15-U girls are 7-0-1 on the season, with powerhouse Duxbury coming to town on Sunday, June 13. The Cohasset 13-U girls are a combined 8-2-2 on the season.

Both officers began working for the all male Federal Medical Center (FMC) in Devens, Mass. last spring as correctional officers. Employed alongside 50 other officers, Nogz and Potolicchio work to protect the inmates and facilities, while defending the public from escapees. Never in the FMC's history has an inmate escaped, but this does not stop attempts and the level of protection from the officers. Being a medical center, the FMC houses 1,500 inmates who are mentally and physically ill and is fully equipped with a hospital wing. The facility also houses inmates of all levels of security from the age of 18 to 80. In order to maintain an eye over every inmate, each shift of 50 officers requires a random search of five cells or common areas, known as "shakedowns."

In order to work for the government law enforcement, the officers explained their eight-week training process in Brunswick, Ga. For eight weeks, more than 75 different organizations learned every possible scenario within the confines of the old Naval Base on which it resides. There individuals become fully prepared to continue at any level of law enforcement because of the camp's basic training.

CHS students in Jack Buckley's law class are shown a weapon fabricated in prison by an inmate.

Currently residing in Hull, Officer Potolicchio plans to continue his involvement in the government law enforcement. After working as a harbormaster, correctional officer at Norfolk Sheriff's Department, an environmental police officer and as an animal control officer, Potolicchio has found his niche in the government's justice position. After working at the FMC for the past year, Officer Nogz will also continue in the government law enforcement.

Through the officers' presentations, students were made knowledgeable of the truth in prisons, the lack of privacy and the limitations of visitors or mail. By avoiding scare tactics, students were able to see a non-violent approach to fighting crime, rather than the abuse they are exposed to daily. With support, Potolicchio and Nogz hope to expand their presentation and to educate more students on their knowledge of government law enforcement and the U.S. Department of Justice's Federal Bureau of Prisons.

Kelly Hurley is a senior at Cohasset High School.

Dean Morrissey in Scituate art exhibit

By Matthew J. Gill
MGILL@CNC.COM

Lovers of fine art and children's fiction have a reason to celebrate together this weekend.

Scituate's Dean Morrissey, who's both an accomplished painter and writer, will showcase both of his professional talents this weekend when for the first time, he will display his artwork in the town of Scituate.

Visitors to the exhibit, which will be housed in a friend's spacious wooden barn at 292 Clapp Road, will have the opportunity to view approximately 35 of Morrissey's oil paintings, sketches, and lithographs as well as a handful of the seven colorful children's books he's published in the last decade.

Morrissey's first book, Ship of Dreams sold more than 400,000 copies and ascended to the third spot on the New York Times bestseller's list. The newspaper also named the book one of the best illustrated children's books of 1994.

Images from the book are so popular, they have appeared on the cover of FAO Schwartz' Christmas catalog, as well as in the windows of Saks Fifth Avenue stores across the country.

A full-time painter since the late 1970s, Morrissey will take a break from his busy schedule in front of the easel to chat with visitors on Saturday and Sunday, and sign any of his children's books.

In his paintings, Morrissey often incorporates images from Scituate — The Quarterdeck shop on Front Street has appeared in a handful of paintings — as well as the portraits of numerous neighbors, friends, and relatives.

In his paintings, Morrissey often incorporates images from Scituate — The Quarterdeck shop on Front Street has appeared in a handful of paintings — as well as the portraits of numerous neighbors, friends, and relatives.

While painting his own renditions of characters from Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol, Morrissey elicited the help of Scituate's Billy Damon and Marty and Peter Noenicky to stand in as models in contemporary British attire.

"I've discovered over time if I use people that I know, or places I'm familiar with," said Dean, "it adds an intangible that can make the difference between a competent picture and an inspired picture."

A self-taught artist, Morrissey worked in New York for more than ten years as a freelance book-cover illustrator, winning numerous awards, prior to the release of Ship of Dreams.

He's since completed award-winning works including The Great Kettles: A Tale of Time, The Christmas Shop, and The Monster Trap.

Although he was working in his field in New York, and winning awards for his efforts, Dean said he eventually cane to realize the paintings he was creating as jacket covers and posters for others had very little to do with him, and it left him "creatively wanting."

The writing and painting he's been completing for the children's books — and the often personal connections represented within —however, have refired him for the work which he describes as a "lifelong pursuit" that may never have an end.

"This has restored me to do what I really love to do," he said.

"Dean's work is very different," added his wife Shan Morrissey, who with the art barn's owner Cynthia Robbins, has been busy preparing the art pieces for exhibit.

Like Dean's work, this weekend's display of his images will also be "different," said Shan, as not a single traditional easel will be used.

Instead of hangers and a standard arrangement of images on a gallery wall, Shan and Cynthia have employed the use of wood boxes and antique tables and chairs to properly display the paintings with a nostalgic look.

The arts barn will be open to the public Saturday, June 12 and Sunday, June 13 from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and all of the images on display are for sale.

For more information on the show, call Shan Morrissey at (781) 545-6261

The control group learned specific method to ease the behavior while dealing with the associated stress. Although this study is ongoing. The preliminary results point to ways to improve both the patient's care and carepartner's well being. Carruth will share the findings, as well as helpful techniques of caregiving.

This meeting is free and open to the public and will be held at the Hingham Senior Center, 224 Central St., For more information, call JoAnn Mitchell at 781-749-5417 or Ruth Scully at 781-740-2426.

Couple says restoring antique Cape was labor of love

Home featured on House Tour

By Constance Gorfinkle

Jonathan and Isabel Asher will be welcoming visitor to their home, the John Leavitt House, for the Hingham Historical Society House Tour, June 13.

The expanded Cape at the Corner of Common and Main streets in Hingham seems to beckon from another time. In high summer, hollyhocks and roses in flamboyant hues compete for the passerby's attention, while the house itself maintains the elegant poise it has possessed for two centuries.

This is the home of Jonathan and Isabel Asher, who, in just five years, have restored the John Leavitt House to its ancient charm, while adding amenities that make present-day life comfortable.

Visitors will have a chance to see what the Ashers have accomplished on June 13, when their home will be one of five antique residences on view in the 80th annual Hingham Historical Society house tour.

Isabel, who grew up in colonial Duxbury, and Jon, whose affection for old houses was nurtured in his hometown of Rhinebeck, N.Y., knew they wanted a large cape "with a small yard," and the Leavitt house filled the bill.

For the couple, who came to Hingham from the Washington, D.C. area, where Jon had worked as a technical information advisor to the Federal government, it was love at first sight, says Sandy (as Isabel is known to her friends).

"After 30 seconds, we knew we wanted this house to be our home forever," she added. The Ashers felt that way despite the fact that the front door opened into a tiny entry where ductwork was plainly visible, a new and reconfigured kitchen was needed, and a slew of fixes – inherent in any antique - had to be addressed.

Not that the house hadn't been cherished by its previous owners, many of whom had been descendents of John Leavitt. And it had the added advantage of being in another family for half a century.

Filled with light from large windows and a sense of airiness due to high ceilings, the Ashers' home is a blend of luxurious and cozy. Sandy, who plainly decorates from the heart, and is an avid collector of antiques, has filled the house with appropriate period pieces that provide a link to its 18th-century beginnings, such as the spare and graceful candelabra that hangs over the dining room table. There is even on display a child's crutch – unearthed during the restoration – which she estimates to be at least 200 years old.

But it is how the old and the new have been married to create a welcoming atmosphere that makes the house a gem.

"We wanted people to feel at home here," Sandy says simply.

The Ashers have achieved that goal. Though the kitchen – designed by Hingham architect Sally Weston — was gutted, and a wall moved to create the space needed to accommodate a table, an island, storage and modern appliances, the room invites a visitor to take time out from the stress of modern life. That is underscored by the cabinets in warm ivory — built by carpenter Ben Wilcox — that capture the Federalist style of the house, and by the attractive needlepoint cushions in an old-fashioned floral design made by Sandy that cover the stools in front of the marble-topped island.

Intricate needlework is a special skill of Sandy's. That can be seen in the framed works hanging on her dining room wall, whose subjects are chairs rendered in exquisite needlepoint. Sandy, as well, collects chairs in miniature, delightful examples of which show up in unexpected places.

Besides her and Jon's love of antiques, which takes them to shops and shows throughout the region, the decoration of each room, she says, always is inspired by a work of art. Thus in their lovely bedroom, which is dominated by a four-poster bed, Sandy indicates a painting of roses, whose design is echoed throughout the room, including in the delicate lace curtains on the windows.

Though the point of their restoration was, indeed, to restore, it was necessary for the Ashers to add a couple of things to the house — two rooms to be exact, a sunroom that opens to their lush garden and an office for Jon above it. But by replicating the house's original windows in the sunroom and using fabrics that recall another era, the journey from the 18th to 21st century is seamless. As for Jon's office, that is clearly his private domain and, therefore, has to make no concessions to an earlier time.

Having fulfilled this labor of love, the Ashers are busy these days researching the John Leavitt House. Though it is agreed upon among experts that the oldest part of the structure probably does date to the late 1700s, the couple are looking for documentary proof to establish the exact date. That requires looking at all the old probate records, a process that has taught them a lot about their predecessors and about the responsibilities of owning a historic house.

Jon puts it plainly: "We're merely the stewards of this property."

Also on the tour are Old Derby, Old Ship Meeting House, Hingham Cemetery, Hingham Common and Old Ordinary, the society's house museum, where on view will be an exhibit of antique tools from the Society's collection.

Tickets for the Hingham Historical Society's 80th annual house tour are $15 in advance and $20 on tour day. In advance, they are available at Bowl & Board, Andrew Zona, Noble's and Whitney Gordon, in Hingham Square; the Public Library, on Leavitt Street; Noble's, in Lincoln Plaza and Queen Anne Plaza, and the Glass House, on Route 53.

Tickets on tour day will be sold only at the Old Ordinary, 21 Lincoln St, after 10 a.m. Beginning at that time also, tickets may be exchanged for tour books. The tour runs from 1 to 7 p.m.

Refreshing addition to House Tour

By Constance Gorfinkle
SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

The Hingham Historical Society House Tour, which takes place on June 13, may be 80 years old, but for this organization it's never too late to try something new. For the first time, a restaurant will provide the refreshments for those taking part in this venerable event.

Bridgeman's, the popular Italian restaurant that has been drawing crowds since it opened two-and-half years ago across from Nantasket Beach in Hull, will serve wood grilled bruschetta and eggplant involtini (eggplant stuffed with sausage, mushrooms and ricotta cheese) at Old Derby, the Society's headquarters on Main Street.

For the owners of Bridgeman's, Joe and Susan LaSpada, this will be a labor of love. Hingham residents for the past six years, and the owners of an antique home themselves, they have long appreciated the work done by the Historical Society to promote awareness of Hingham's history and to educate the public on the importance of preserving that history.

Susan, who often has gone on the HHS house tours, and is in the process of restoring the couple's 1817 home on lower Main Street, "had been asked by the Society to put my own house on the tour. But I thought a better idea would be to donate the refreshments, even though we realized it would be a big commitment to serve the 700 or so people it's estimated will be on the tour."

"MY BIG MOUTH COULD MAKE YOU A MILLIONAIRE!"

"I'm under deadline to create 1,000 new millionaires in record time! Will you be one of them?"

Robert G. Allen
Founder,
Robert Allen Institute

My name is Robert Allen and I love a good challenge! That's why, over the years, I've become well-known for my bold and daring challenges. And now I need to teach you how to become a millionaire!

Why do I need you to become a millionaire? The answer is simple. I've accepted a tremendous challenge to do so. I promised my publisher I'd create 1,000 millionaires in time to promote my new system on various top nationwide television and radio shows across the country. Therefore, I need you to make money, lots of money, and start making it right away.

Over the past 20 years, more than a million people have attended my Real Estate training seminars across the country and around the world. Countless numbers of them are now financially independent, and numerous millionaires attribute their wealth to my teachings.

So it's not a question of whether I will reach my goal — the only question is: Are you going to participate and become one of the millionaires I am going to create?

If you think you are, simply come to my upcoming, FREE workshop in your area to learn more about this exciting opportunity that just may change your life!

I Just Can't Pass Up A Challenge!

Here's a brief history of the challenges I've faced in becoming a best-selling author:

My first challenge, and the one that initially thrust me into the international spotlight, was when I said, "Send me to any city in America. Take away my wallet. Give me $100 for living expenses. In 72 hours, I'll buy an excellent piece of property, using none of my own money."

The LA Times called me on my challenge and sent me to San Francisco. Fifty-seven hours later, I had taken title to seven properties, generating assets worth $722,000!

A few years later, I did the St. Louis Challenge when I said, "Send me to any unemployment line in America. Let me select someone that is broke, out of work, and discouraged. In two days time, I'll teach him my strategies for Creating Wealth. In 90 days, he'll be back on his feet with $5,000 in the bank, never to set foot in an unemployment line again."

The couple I chose earned $5,000 cash in 90 days and over $100,000 in the next 12 months. It changed their lives forever.

Next, I accepted a challenge from Regis and Kathie Lee to come on their show and do the same thing.

From the audience, I selected a young woman named Pat who was a part-time school teacher. Under my guidance, she earned over $20,000 in the next 90 days — and we went back on the show to tell about it!

Now I'm working on my next challenge. Here's what I said, "Send me a group of people who want to become financially independent, and be able to do whatever they want for the rest of their lives. Let me teach them my strategies and advise them for the next 12 months. In record time, I will create 1,000 new millionaires!"

I need you to become a millionaire, and I need you to do it now! Are you ready to accept my challenge?

LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

A (FREE) RADICAL APPROACH

While there is no substitute for ear protection for guarding against the hearing loss that can result from exposure to loud noise, researchers are looking for other ways to deal with noise-induced hearing loss. That is because loud noise does not always damage the delicate inner ear immediately, just by brute force. In most cases, it provokes the inner ear into making harmful oxygen molecules called "free radicals." In an effort to prevent free-radical damage, researchers are experimenting with using such antioxidants as vitamins C and E. Hints of possible benefits of this approach include a small Finnish study in which, after a night at a disco, subjects reported less hearing loss and faster recovery with the use of antioxidants.

If you would like to learn more about better hearing, the time to act is now...and the people to help you with your hearing needs are at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. We take our job of providing each individual with personalized service very seriously, including sophisticated testing, choosing the most appropriate hearing instrument, expert fittings, and follow-up care. We understand too that hearing is a family affair, so we also encourage you to bring friends and family with you to 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, to learn how they can help you, too. PH: 781-337-1144.

P.S. Other hearing research involving antioxidant compounds centers on N-acetylcysteine (NAC), which is already approved by federal authorities for treating overdoses of acetaminophen.

Not all burners lit for Cook Estate senior housing project

Septic issues at the forefront

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Six months after the town opted to purchased the Cook property, it is still without a plan for wastewater disposal, has spent more than $97,000 during fiscal year 2004 on the project — which does not include the $200,000 deposit paid to secure the deal — and Town Counsel has been asked whether the project will need to go back out to bid.

While the money that has been spent will be covered by the $925,000 the town will gain from the deal, every dollar used to cover costs associated with the project takes away from the profit the town is slated to gain. However, Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said it was necessary to spend some money on the project because without proper testing on site, the town would not have known whether it was a good investment and should move ahead.

Plans for the development, which will be known as "The Villages at Deer Hill," include 95 units of senior housing.

Voters at the 2003 special Fall Town Meeting allocated $4.5 million for the purchase of the 22-acre parcel of Cook-owned property, located off Sohier Street, and the property was then marketed to developers along with the town's 8.7 adjoining acres. Sullivan said the town will continue to work toward making this project work and said the Board of Selectmen will give the public an update on the progress being made at one of its upcoming meetings.

Plans for the development, which will be known as "The Villages at Deer Hill," include 95 units of senior housing. Plans currently feature 60 townhouse style attached condominium residences, spread throughout four duplex buildings, 12 triplex and four quads. There will be two rental apartment buildings, one with 18 units and one with 17, for a total of 35 mixed-income rental apartments. At the time the bid was accepted, developers expected construction to be complete by December of 2006.

The town is currently working on solving the problem of disposing of wastewater from the Cook estate site, which has affected the project's ability to move forward. Preliminary testing, which took place before the Requests for Proposals went out, suggested an on-site system would be feasible. Further tests, which took place after the town had accepted a bid, have concluded that is not the case. The town is looking at land to serve as a leaching field for the Cook property, and would run pipes down the street to a second parcel that could handle the wastewater.

Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said the $97,000 spent to date on consultants, engineers, appraisers and town counsel, will

Cohasset joins $7 million club

Whitehead Road site gets top dollar

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

When a property sells for upwards of $7 million it's bound to raise a few eyebrows even in a upscale town full of homes with ocean views that routinely sell for a million-plus.

A brick, Georgian colonial on Whitehead Road has done just that here in Cohasset. H. MacKenzie Freeman, a noted eye specialist, at 100 Whitehead Road has sold his 15-room house for $7.3 million in a private sale.

The house, built in 1908, sits on a 2.3-acre island promontory at the mouth of Cohasset Harbor and possesses the most spectacular 360-degree vistas including an unfettered view of Minot Ledge Light.

Tom Hamilton, president of Dean and Hamilton Realtors on Elm Street, sold the home to Freeman some 26 years ago for about $500,000. At the time it was the largest residential sale for an individual home on a lot in New England, Hamilton recalled.

The then owner Arthur Harrington was leaving Cohasset to work for Harold "Hap" Brown, Secretary of Defense in the Carter Administration.

Another previous owner was John Fox, publisher of the Boston Post, who was in desperate straits financially. Fox is remembered for publishing a page-one editorial endorsing John F. Kennedy when it was expected the paper would back the Republican, Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. in the 1952 US Senate race. Some described it as the "$500,000 editorial" because JFK's father Joseph P. Kennedy, who learned Fox needed cash, reportedly gave him a loan in that amount. According to published reports, the Post endorsement is credited with helping Kennedy win the senate seat, set-

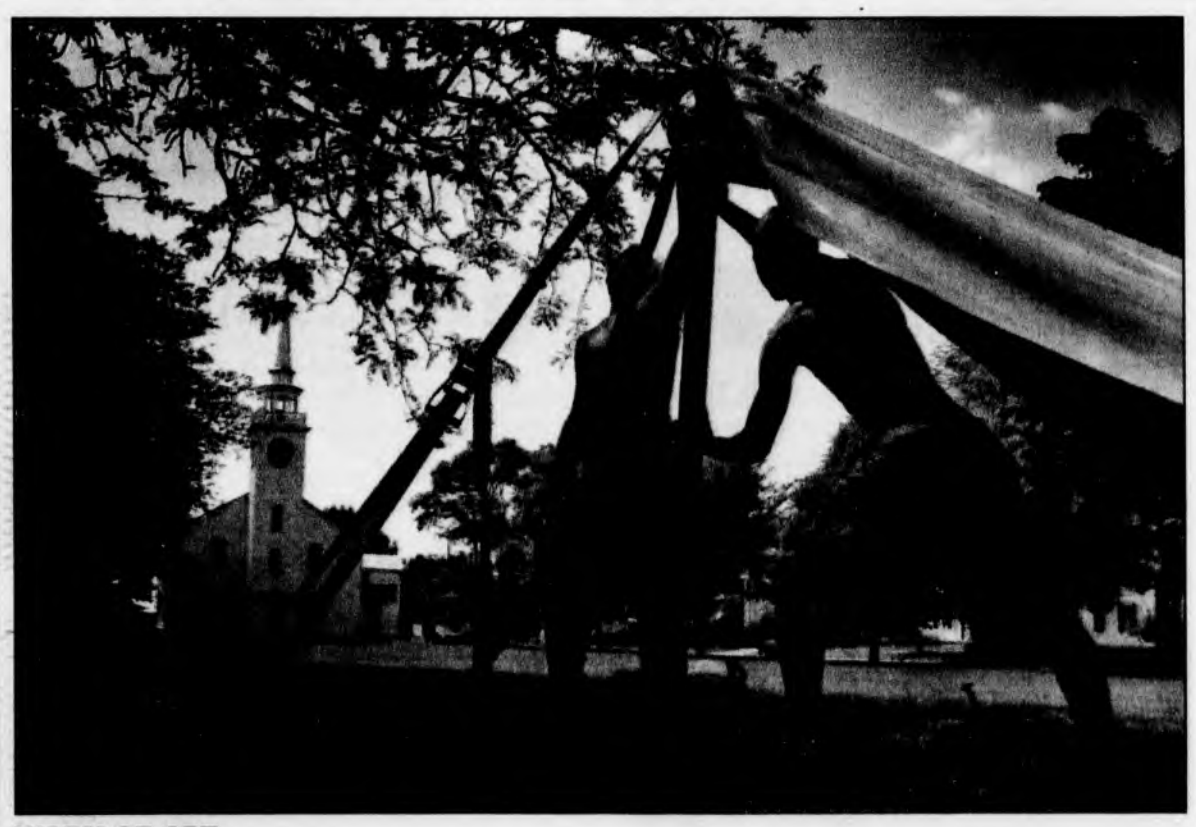
Preserving the pictorial past

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset is a town rich in history, and many have captured its essence in the pages of books. Most recently, members of the Cohasset Historical Society have joined the ranks of authors who have put their heart and soul into preserving the town's past, through the publication of the most recent book, "Images of America: Cohasset."



The Historical Society has produced the first pictorial history of the town, bringing the images from days of summer homes and fishing villages back to life.

Authors David H. Wadsworth, historian and former curator for 20 years, Paula Morse, co-president, and Lynne DeGiacomo, executive administrator, began working on the book last spring. A photographic history of the town, its roughly 130 pages are filled with black and white images of days gone by. With photos of the common, the villages — as there used to be three — and residents from school children to fishermen to those who only spent their summers in town, the book depicts a wide variety of photos from Cohasset's history, with detailed captions to help give readers insight.

Many of the photographs for the book came from the Historical Society's archives. While Wadsworth said he was primarily responsible for pulling the photographs from the archives, DeGiacomo and Morse were responsible for their page layout. All three shared in the writing.

"We have a very fine photo collection," said Wadsworth, adding the book only represents one-tenth of the society's collection. Since the book has been printed as part of a series of books which all depict the history of towns and cities

'Hunger banquet' served up at CHS

Part of program on worldwide problem

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Imagine having a small bowl of rice, one slice of bread and a cup of water at Cohasset High for lunch and not being on a fad diet?

Then imagine having that for your only meal of the day and being glad to receive it.

For 80 percent of the high school students Friday – the meager lunch provided a window into what much of the world faces on a daily basis: hunger.

In a creative program to illustrate the problem of world hunger, green or pink tickets were distributed during lunch to students who volunteered to participate in the program. Those who got the pink tickets – about 20 percent representing the "haves" — sat at tables in the cafeteria adorned with white tablecloths and had their pick of sandwiches and rollups, potato chips, salsa dip, salads, dessert, milk and orange juice. Their classmates – representing the "have-nots" — sat a small distance away on the floor on gym mats with a small bowl of rice, slice of white bread, and a cup of water.

The program conducted in conjunction with National Hunger Awareness Day sprang from the social studies classes at the high school. Social studies teachers incorporated hunger awareness into the curriculum over the past two weeks. Postings along the school corridors with messages such as "16,000 children die each day of hunger" or "32 nations face a food emergency" stood as reminders of the world hunger crisis.

At first it was difficult Friday for the "haves" not to gloat as they looked over the makeshift fence to their fellow students, who had so much less to eat. But then the guilt set in.

"I like being able to eat all this," said Courtney Hurley, a junior, and one of the "haves." "But I feel bad. It's a shame not being able to share."

A few salads were soon spotted

On June 7 at 7 p.m. the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency called the towns of Sector 2B by radio to check in for the hurricane drill. At the Cohasset secondary Emergency Operating Center, Cohasset emergency management director Arthur Lehr directed the effort for Cohasset and was assisted by Hal Coughlin, Cohasset's RACES radio officer with help from a fellow amateur radio operator Bob Callahan of Scituate.

This training drill simulates emergencies caused by a hurricane and reports from radio operators around town were radioed to the Cohasset Emergency Operating Center where they were then relayed to the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency Region 2 Headquarters at the state prison grounds in Bridgewater.

In the event of a disaster and the telephone/cell phone systems are down, as was the case during Sept. 11, 2001, these amateur radio operators can communicate with state agencies and the Red Cross. Other towns participating in this drill were Scituate, Hull, Hingham, Marshfield, Whitman, Kingston, Plymouth, Bridgewater, Bröckton, and Pembroke.

All-facilities stickers on sale at Town Hall

The "all facility sticker" for the next fiscal year is on sale during normal business hours at the town hall and at the DPW garage on weekends from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and Monday-Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. An "all facilities sticker" will be $30, the second vehicle $30 and seniors is $15.

This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility, Sandy Beach as well as, include parking at all areas in town that require a sticker. In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at the Dept. of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town.

Avalon appeal in Land Court Tuesday

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Although the Zoning Board of Appeals gave AvalonBay, the 200-unit apartment complex proposed off Route 3A, the go-ahead last October, the project has not yet broken ground.

That's because a short time later, the water commission appealed the ZBA decision to issue Avalon a comprehensive permit over concerns wastewater from the apartments would negatively impact the Lily Pond Watershed, the major source of the town's drinking water.

"We have serious concerns the 40,000 gallons of effluent per day we estimate the project would generate – however it's treated – would adversely affect the Lily Pond Watershed," said Water Commission Chairman John McNabb.

But Scott Dale, vice president of development for Avalon, says that's ridiculous.

"If you clean it to drinking water standards how could it have any effect at all?" asked Dale, who said the design estimate for the package treatment plant is 36,000 gallons per day but the project is expected to generate about 25,000 gallons of wastewater per day.

Avalon filed a motion to dismiss the water commission's appeal on the basis the commission has no standing. The motion to dismiss and the water commission's opposition to Avalon's motion are what is before the Land Court in Boston at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Concerns about the effect of storm-water discharge on Lily Pond and hazardous waste cleanup are also part of the water commission's appeal.

The ZBA issued AvalonBay a comprehensive permit under Chapter 40B, the state law that allows developers to skirt local zoning regulations in exchange for providing 25 percent affordable housing. Cohasset is vulnerable to "40 B" projects that usually include higher density than a town would otherwise allow because Cohasset falls below the state threshold of having 10 percent of its housing stock as affordable.

The Avalon project cannot go forward while the appeal is pending and during the appeal process, the town is still vulnerable to more "40-B" projects because the state won't allow the units to count until the developer pulls the bulding permit. The state encourages rental housing, so with Avalon, which is a rental project, all units — affordable and market rate — would be counted toward the town's affordable housing inventory and would put the town at the 10 percent goal set by the state.

As a condition of the comprehensive permit, Avalon must obtain a groundwater discharge permit from the state Department of Environmental Protection prior to construction. The town will also conduct a peer review during the groundwater discharge permit process.

But the ZBA conditions did not satisfy the water commission.

McNabb said the water commission is also not confident that privately owned and operated treatment plant would stand the test of time. He pointed to the treatment plant, which has had problems, at 100 Pond St., a cluster development of cape-style condominiums built in 1984.

But Dale said package treatment plants are tightly regulated and licensed by the DEP.

"You can take a negative approach toward anything," Dale said about McNabb's theoretical argument. "But the fact is there are many examples of privately owned and well maintained package treatment plants across the state."

The Avalon site, which was occupied by Webb-Norfolk Conveyor, is also a hazardous waste site where some chemicals from the manufacturing process contaminated the soil in amounts that well exceed state limits. The commission does not think the ZBA should have issued the comprehensive permit until the area is fully cleaned up.

Concerns about storm-water discharge and its effect on Lily Pond is also part of the water commission's appeal although the ZBA said Avalon must adhere to a comprehensive storm-water management plan that was detailed in its decision granting the permit.

Avalon's motion to dismiss the water commission's appeal is based on a case in Hingham. The state Supreme Court ruled the Hingham Planning Board did not have legal standing to appeal the Hingham ZBA's issuance of a comprehensive permit for the Erickson Retirement Campus off Whiting Street because it was not an aggrieved party. The Hingham Planning Board had appealed because the ZBA did not have a guarantee that at least 25 percent of the units would be accepted as affordable by the state.

McNabb said the Cohasset case is different. "We are a municipal corporation that sells a product that could be damaged by this development – that's a world of difference."

"We have serious concerns the 40,000 gallons of effluent per day we estimate the project would generate – however it's treated – would adversely affect the Lily Pond Watershed."
Water Commission Chairman John McNabb

But Dale said he thinks Avalon will prevail Tuesday. "We're asking the judge to dismiss this whole issue and we're hopeful he will."

He said if the water commission has concerns about the wastewater treatment facility then the avenue to voice those concerns is through the DEP groundwater permit process.

Dale said Avalon is still committed to the project and is in the process of preparing the groundwater discharge permit application to be filed this summer with the DEP. He said Avalon also has some more work to do with the state regarding traffic and access issues.

"We are also working everyday with testing and evaluation for the package treatment plant," he said. "Our level of activity has not slowed down. In fact, we are having a greater level of activity."

He also said cleanup of hazardous waste at the site is the landowner's responsibility. Avalon's purchase of the property is contingent on obtaining all the necessary permits. Dale said the property owner is in the process of going through the necessary regulatory stops with the DEP to cleanup the site.

McNabb said the water commission did try to reach a settlement with Avalon out of court but was not successful. "We did try to settle it to save legal costs on the town side," McNabb said.

Nevertheless, McNabb said the water commission is confident it has a good case. "We are doing our best to protect the drinking water supply for the residents of the town," he said.

Others were also opposed the Avalon project, including a citizens group, but the water commission filed the only appeal.

Not all burners lit for Cook Estate senior housing project

not be reimbursed if the deal does not go through. So far, the town has asked for an extension on the closing until Oct. 31 of this year. The town can ask for two additional 30-day extensions, which will cost the town $20,000 each time. At the closing that money would deducted from the purchase price of the land. It is unclear whether that money would be refunded should the deal fall through. The town also needs to obtain a groundwater discharge permit from the Department of Environmental Protection as well as a special permit from the planning board before the closing can take place..

Northland Residential, the company the town has been working with to develop senior housing on the Cook site has been paying for the additional testing on the possible leaching sites, said Buckley. So far, test pits have been dug behind the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, in the Music Circus parking lot, on Red Fox lane, and the town is looking at the possibility of digging at Wheelwright Park. Buckley said the town has needed to pay for Health Agent Joseph Godzik to witness all the tests, and the town has provided its own backhoe.

The Request for Proposals, which laid out what the town would like to see developers incorporate into their plans, asked developers design with an on-site septic system in mind. However, since an on-site wastewater system is no longer an option — meaning the bid specifications changed after bids accepted — raising the question of whether the project will need to go back out to bid. Sullivan said it is Town Counsel's opinion that the project will not have to be re-bid because it was an even playing field at the time the RFPs went out.

The sites which have been tested around town are not looking favorable for accommodating a leaching field, and the sewer commission has denied Northland's request to hook up to town sewer. But that doesn't mean the quest to sewer the project is over. At the sewer commission meeting in April when the board denied Northland's request, Chairman Ray Kasperowicz suggested bringing the matter before Town Meeting to let the residents decide.

However, the sewer commission has told other developers – including Cedarmere which is proposing senior housing on the former Hayes Estate off Beechwood Street – there is no capacity.

Sullivan said it is a possibility the town will vote on whether to allow the Cook estate to hook up to the sewer at the fall Town Meeting. He added if the Cedarmere developers wanted, they could get together 10 signatures and get themselves on the Town Meeting Warrant as well.

The town began spending the first of the $97,000 last July, when former Town Manager Mark Haddad approached the advisory committee to ask for a reserve fund transfer of $25,000 to pay for GLC's consulting services. He felt he needed a company to help market the Cook property to developers and the advisory committee obliged. That money was added back into the reserve fund at the November fall Special Town Meeting.

The Board of Selectmen's general expenses were increased by $24,820 at Town Meeting as well, to cover the bill from engineer John Cavanaro, who dug test pits as the first part of the due diligence for the Cook property. In addition, this January, Haddad came before the advisory committee again to ask for $25,000 to pay for hydrogeologic testing, a second phase of due diligence, done by Coler and Colantonio on the Cook site. Those costs, in combination with other fees from town counsel and appraisers total the $97,000.

The $200,000 deposit the town has already put down should be reimbursed from Northland at the closing. Northland put down $100,000 at the signing of the purchase and sale with the town and is supposed to put down the other $100,000 when the town and the company sign the land disposition agreement.

Cook property expenses for FY 2004

Coler and Colantonio — engineering services	$24,969
GLC Development — consultants	$41,306
John Cavanaro — engineering services	$14,098
Thomas Mulhern — appraiser	$4,200
Deutsch, Williams — town counsel	$12,679
Total	$97,252

Fall 2002-June 2003
Board of Selectmen sends letter to Cook heirs, asking if they would be willing to grant the town an easement to access the town property that abuts the Cook property, allowing the town to build affordable senior housing on its parcel. Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris, Selectman Michael Sullivan, and Town Manager Mark Haddad meet with David Rosen of Landvest, the company hired by the Cook heirs to market the property, and are told the heirs are not interested in an easement, but would be interested in working with the town to create senior housing on the site.

June 3, 2003
The Board of Selectmen holds their first meeting in executive session to discuss the possible acquisition of the Cook property. The board discusses sewer capacity for the development as well as neighborhood concerns.

June 10, 2003
The Board of Selectmen, along with Ray Kasperowicz, John Beck, and Sean Cunning of the sewer commission and Al Moore, Robert Sturdy, and Peter Pratt of the planning board, meet in executive session to discuss various issues pertaining to the purchase of the Cook site, including neighborhood concerns.

July 15, 2003
The board discusses the request made by the Cook heirs that all discussion pertaining to the purchase of the property be conducted in executive session until either the town purchases the property or declines interest. Haddad says he needs $25,000 to hire a consultant to formulate an offer to the Cooks. Because the Community Preservation Committee would not entertain the matter in executive session, Haddad said he would like permission instead to approach the Advisory Committee, and the board agreed.

July 17, 2003
Haddad comes before the Advisory Committee to ask for a $25,000 reserve fund transfer to hire a consultant to formulate an offer to the Cooks. The committee gives its permission.

Aug 12, 2003
Haddad informs the board in executive session of the appraised value of the Cook estate, and the board gives Haddad approval to begin negotiations for the purchase of the Cook estate.

Sept. 9, 2003
Haddad tells the board in executive session that the town has offered to purchase the Cook estate for $4.25 million.

Sept. 16, 2003
Haddad informs the board the Cook's have accepted the town's offer, and that the purchase will be subject to both Town Meeting approval and the procurement of a buyer and developer for the property.

Sept. 30, 2003
Haddad tells Planning Board selectmen are optimistic an on-site septic system for the Cook site will work.

Oct. 7, 2003
Selectmen sign the purchase and sale for the Cook property, and Haddad says due diligence on the property can officially begin. He said he has received bids from three companies and hopes due diligence can be completed by the end of October.

Oct. 14, 2003
Selectmen hold public hearing on Cook estate where residents are told the estimated tax revenue for the project is $400,000 a year.

Oct. 20, 2003
Haddad comes before the Community Preservation Committee to request they provide the funds to pay for due diligence on the Cook property. However, documents suggest, Haddad had already hired John Cavanaro of John Cavanaro Consulting to conduct site surveys and soil evaluations and Coler and Colantonio to conduct a 21E assessment. Haddad states after the meeting, that he wouldn't feel comfortable marketing a piece of property to developers if he hadn't done the proper testing on the site.

Nov. 17, 2003
Voters approve the purchase of the Cook Estate for $4.5 million, with a selling price of $5.2 million. A reserve fund transfer of $25,000 passes, which is used to replace funds borrowed from the Advisory Committee, and the Board of Selectmen's general expenses are increased by $24,820 to help cover Cook costs as well.

Dec. 3, 2003
Town begins advertising the Cook Request for Proposals and a due date for bid proposals is set for Jan. 22, 2004. Haddad announces residents will be asked to participate in the bidder selection process.

Jan. 7, 2004
Haddad comes before the Advisory Committee to ask for a reserve fund transfer of $25,000 to pay for a hydrogeologic study, to be conducted by Coler and Colantonio.

March 15, 2004
The Board of Selectmen sign a revised purchase and sale agreement with the trustees of the Cook estate that extends the closing date to October 31, 2004 if the town has not obtained a groundwater discharge permit by July 31, 2004, provided the buyer applies for the permit by March 31, 2004 or at a time as mutually agreed to by both parties. If necessary, the closing may be extended for up to two 30-day periods, but the town will be asked to pay $20,000 for each 30-day period. At the closing, the deposits will be applied to the purchase price.

March 16, 2004
Northland Developers are selected to work with the town to build on the Cook estate.

April 14, 2004
Mariner reports preliminary testing on the Cook property has shown the on-site system the town had planned will not be feasible. Haddad says alternate solutions are being looked into, but it will not affect the project's ability to move forward. Haddad says a mounded system would virtually create a mountain on site. In addition, because there are many issues surrounding sewer tie-ins and available capacity, Haddad said that option may not be viable either. In addition, results from the 21 E assessment show the site passed that test.

April 14, 2004
Northland Residential files for a town sewer connection.

April 22, 2004
The Mariner reports testing conducted behind the Paul Pratt Memorial Library indicate its soils may be able to serve as a leaching field for the Cook property.

April 29, 2004
The Mariner reports the water commission has doubts about whether leaching to the library is a viable alternative. While the commission is working with the town to help try to resolve the wastewater issue in the best interest of the town, the commission thinks the land could be too close to the Sohier Street and Ellms Meadow well fields and that the Department of Environmental Protection might not grant a groundwater discharge permit for the site.

May 19, 2004
Soil tests are conducted at the South Shore Music Circus parking lot. Cavanaro witnesses the tests along with Health Agent Joseph Godzik. Both agree the water table is too high to consider the site as a leaching field for the Cook estate.

May-Present
The town continues to search for a wastewater solution and have dug test pits on Red Fox Lane and are looking at Wheelwright Park as alternate sites. The town may be asked to vote at the fall Special Town Meeting this November to hook the project up to town sewer.

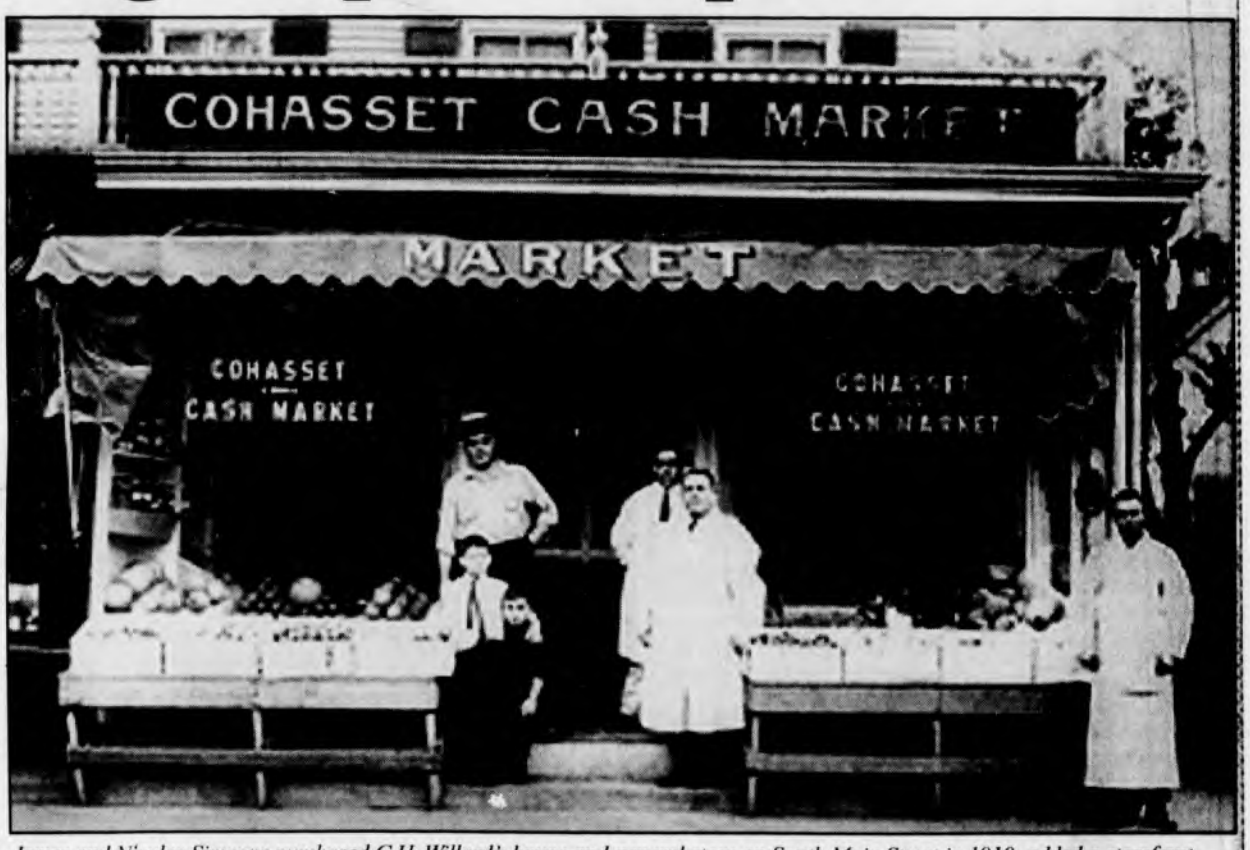
across the nation through photographs, the publishers gave limitations on the number of pages and photos which could be included, which in turn limited the choices the three had.

Because the Society's archives have more than 2,000 photos total, and the book only allowed for roughly 200, there were some tough decisions to make. "It was hard. We had to eliminate some great photos," said DeGiacomo, adding there was a lot of shuffling around, but in the end, they were all very pleased with the results.

Other surrounding communities such as Scituate, Hull and Weymouth have all published books in the same series, and the publishers approached Cohasset's Historical Society with the idea that they publish one too. "They said it's time for Cohasset to do one," said Morse, and the three were happy to oblige.

When the three set out to compile the books, Morse said they had to decide which subjects they wanted to cover, keeping in mind they had limited space. "We knew we wanted people," said Morse, and they knew they wanted each chapter to be the same size, and had to work to lay the photos out accordingly, chapter by chapter.



Working in the new Historical Society building, which used to serve as the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, provided the perfect work space, said Morse. There are many big tables so the photographs were able to be laid out and organized with plenty of room.

Even with the extensive photo collection of the society, the three wanted to reach out to the community and see if there were any interesting photos residents had, which were unlike the photos in the archives. "The people we reached out to were so willing to help," said DeGiacomo, adding many went into attics and barns looking for unique photographs that could be included in the book. DeGiacomo said she is sure there must be many people in town who have photos of Cohasset's past stored away somewhere, and the society is always happy to accept donations of photos or are happy to make copies and return the originals.

The three say they hope their book can be used as another resource, alongside the three volumes of the town's history. "There's so much more to the story than we could write," DeGiacomo said, as the captions for the photos can only say so much, and the volumes of the town's history can help provide much of the story behind the photos in the Historical Society's book.

In the future, the Society has plans to build an exhibit where each chapter of the book can be represented by photos and artifacts in the Historical Society building. "When people come here to pick up or buy their books, they can get a closer look at Cohasset," DeGiacomo said. She added the exhibit will be sponsored by the generosity of Glenn Pratt.

To purchase a copy of "Images of America: Cohasset," please stop by the Historical Society to fill out an order form, or order by phone at (781) 383-1434. Half of the proceeds from the sale of the books go toward the society when purchased at the Historical Society building. The Historical Society is open from 10-4 during the week, and visitors are always welcome.

James and Nicolas Simeone purchased C.H. Willard's house and general store on South Main Street in 1910, added a storefront, and opened the Cohasset Cash Market. James stands at center front, with meat cutter Frank Rego behind him and Eugene McSweeney to his right. Next door is the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company.

Frank Browne's drugstore was relocated to the Tilden Block from South Main Street in 1913. Here Minot Browne stands behind the counter of his father's pharmacy, where the town's first soda fountain was found.

'Hunger banquet' is served up at CHS

CFS students line up in the "have-nots" line for a bowl of rice, slice of white bread and water.

being handed across the fence to hungry classmates.

As part of the program, students also brought in non-perishable food items and other groceries for the Cohasset Food Pantry that is housed in the rectory at St. Anthony's on South Main Street.

Matt Steele, whose wife Marjorie Steele is the director of the food pantry, was on hand at CMHS Friday. He added a perspective that some of the students hadn't thought about: Cohasset has people in need.

Steele said the pantry, which is in its 12th year, is currently helping 30 families that come twice a month for assistance.

"They are no different than you or I," Steele said. "They are not homeless, they've hit a rough spot." He explained the food and other items donated by the students is especially needed this time of year because the bulk of donations come during the holidays.

Chelsea Richardson, who is one of the students spearheading the program, said hunger in eastern Massachusetts is a "silent epidemic." She said for about 170,000 children in the greater Boston area, summertime doesn't mean "fun in the sun" but going hungry because school that provides them with breakfast and lunch closes for the season.

Social Studies teacher Jack Buckley thanked the PSO and Cohasset Diversity Committee for their support of the program, Bob Levy and the cafeteria workers, and the three students who helped organize the "hunger banquet," Chelsea Richardson, Ricky Lordan and Molly Kirk.

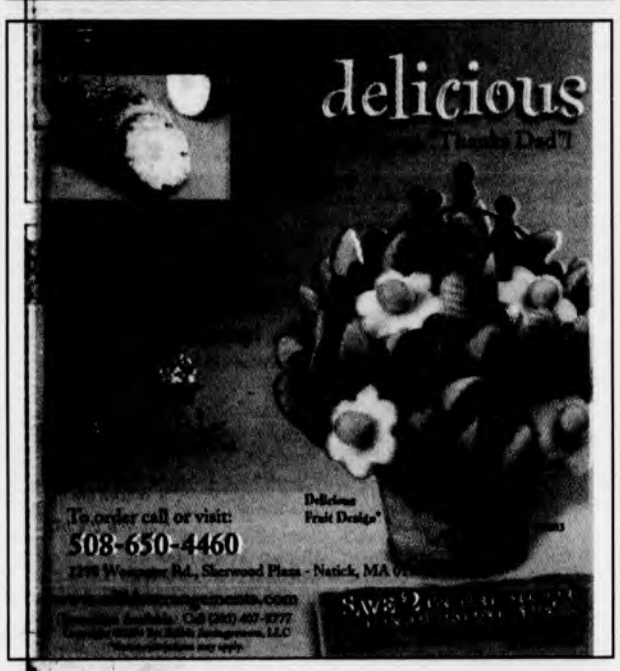
Principal Michael Jones explained participation in Friday's hunger banquet was voluntary, although most students did take part. Some could not because of health concerns, he said.

For the "have-nots" Friday's lunch was a learning experience.

"It was helpful to see the numbers," said Kelsey Bell, a sophomore, about the percentage of people in the world that are going hungry. "Only six tables have food."

Ben Bolster, a sophomore, said the program provided a good look into people who are not as privileged.

And 10th-grader Steve Abrams said the bowl of rice wasn't enough for him.



"I'm still hungry," he said.

Facts about world hunger

- 842 million people across the world are hungry.
- In the developing world, more than 1.2 billion people currently live below the international poverty line, earning less than $1 per day.
- Among this group of poor people, many have problems obtaining adequate, nutritious food for themselves and their families. As a result, 798 million people in the developing world are undernourished. They consume less than the minimum amount of calories essential for sound health and growth.
- Undernourishment negatively affects people's health, productivity, sense of hope and overall well-being. A lack of food can stunt growth, slow thinking, sap energy, hinder fetal development and contribute to mental retardation.
- Poor nutrition and calorie deficiencies cause nearly one in three people to die prematurely or have disabilities, according to the World Health Organization.
- 153 million children under 5 in the developing world are underweight. Worse yet, 11 million children younger than 5 die every year, more than half from hunger-related causes.

More questions surround MBTA ombudsman position

Board disagrees over role, contract and who should tackle the job

The MBTA pays for the service through the town's Greenbush railroad mitigation agreement.

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

What began as an item during the selectmen comment period of Tuesday's meeting turned into an hour-long discussion as Selectman Ralph Dormitzer suggested the board try to resolve the issues surrounding the Cohasset-Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority ombudsman position, which serves as a liaison between the MBTA and the town.

The MBTA pays for the service through the town's Greenbush railroad mitigation agreement.

In May, board members began questioning the ombudsman's role, then held by Kristina Patterson, because they said they hadn't been kept up to date on the work being done.

Patterson, who worked for Waterfield – which is the design group hired by the town for both the village revitalization and James Brook flood control projects — resigned from Waterfield May 14 and the company appointed a new ombudsman. Board members then questioned whether it was in Waterfield's purview to appoint another ombudsman or appoint their own.

Because the board had not seen the contract, it was unclear whether Waterfield should have contacted the town to gain input on a new ombudsman.

Dormitzer said after reading the contract, he had some serious concerns that the wording suggests neither party can terminate the contract without the other party's consent. If the town had questions about the ombudsman's performance at any time, this contract would suggest there is nothing that can be done to break it without Waterfield's consent. "My recommendation is to ask them to relive us from this contract," Dormitzer said.

Dormitzer added he feels the ombudsman should be someone from the town who can serve as an advocate for residents. When the position was initially advertised, he said roughly 15 people applied from the town, and "So far as I know, not one of them was interviewed." He added that Waterfield applied for the position the day before the process was to end, and that the company, which operates out of Winchester, was chosen rather than someone from the town.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris suggested tabling the discussion to another meeting because it should be included on the agenda. She said she would like to be able to review the contract before having the discussion.

But Selectman Fred Koed said the contract, which was not available at Town Hall when the board requested it, was available in the board's information packet for the week, and should be discussed. He said he tends to agree with Dormitzer that the ombudsman should be someone from the South Shore or the town who is in and around Town Hall consistently.

However, McMorris said when the board is talking about "nullifying a contract for an amount over $100,000," it should not be taken lightly and should be a scheduled item on the agenda and that Waterfield should be brought in to be a part of the discussion.

If the board is questioning whether to terminate a position based on performance, "We need to be clear on what the terms are," McMorris said, adding the ombudsman was not supposed to serve as an advocate for the town, but to help handle complaints brought to her by residents. She said the MBTA allocated money to the town for the position, and the board needs to be careful about what role they're asking the ombudsman to play.

But Dormitzer said the conversation really shouldn't be about Waterfield, but about people in the town who were given the impression the ombudsman would be a local person. "The ad was targeted at townspeople and the day before the closing, Waterfield comes in," he said. "Whether some engineering firm from Winchester should be an advocate for this town I think is a philosophical question."

McMorris said it is important for the board to remember its role and realize it is not their job to hire or fire employees — that is the job for the Town Manager. She added the discussion should be continued to a later date and if Dormitzer has concerns with the advertisement, he should bring a copy so the board can see it and be fully informed.

Dormitzer then brought the contract back to the forefront and read: "Neither party may assign, transfer or otherwise dispose of this agreement or any of its rights hereunder or otherwise delegate any of its duties without the prior written consent of the other party. Any such attempted assignment or other disposition without consent shall be null and void and no force and effect." He said that passage is, "Unusual and surprising," and that he can't believe that's the kind of contract the board would want the Town Manager to enact. "We can't even reassign this based on performance," he said.

McMorris said she has not heard any complaints which would lead the board to terminate the ombudsman, and that Waterfield has been keeping a log of any interaction with residents of the town and therefore, the company should be present for the conversation.

However, Koed reiterated Dormitzer's point and said the fact that the contract can't be broken is very unusual. "Where was the contract? It wasn't at Town Hall. We had to go to Winchester to get it," he said.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said the contract has already been signed and when you have a contract with a vendor, if there are some issues that arise during that time of service, it has not been the town's practice to automatically dismiss them. "Not everyone who has been elected to this board has liked everything that happened before you (Dormizter) got on," he said, adding a Request for Proposals went out for the position and the decision to hire was made by the designated representative of the town at that time.

Dormitzer said the board should decide whether it wants someone from the outside to do the job. However, Sullivan said the matter has already been decided, the contract is signed, and the town hasn't even had any conversations with Waterfield.

McMorris said Dormitzer is insinuating Waterfield isn't getting the job done, and she said she hasn't heard any complaints.

Koed brought up the Barnes property on 3A which is near the tracks and station site, and said "No one told them they were losing their business." He asked what the ombudsman should be doing if not helping the local businesses with the train coming to town.

McMorris said the ombudsman was supposed to intercede on resident's behalf, but not take on the responsibility of a representative of the board of selectmen or anyone else. "Their job is not to represent the community," she said.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he is "Not a fan of breaching contracts," and asked whether the town could dovetail a local person to work with the ombudsman and serve as an advocate. Sullivan said until recently, the Town Manager has served in that capacity.

Dormitzer said he recently saw some MBTA plans which were 90 percent complete and were still showing many things that were against what the diagnostic team had told Cohasset was happening in town. He said someone needs to be keeping an eye on what is happening with the plans to make sure the changes are made, and he thought the ombudsman was that person.

McMorris said that is why there are two members of the board of selectmen who have been asked to serve as a representative for the town.

But Koed, who serves as the MBTA liaison, said the town is paying more than $100,000 for an ombudsman, and they should be responsible for looking over the plans. "I don't think that's the job of a selectmen who makes $83 a month," he said.

The board said it will invite Waterfield to attend a meeting within the next couple of months to iron out the details of the ombudsman position.

Press coverage is called into question

Two selectmen lash out at media

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Due to an editor's production error, this story which came out of last week's selectmen's meeting did not run in last week's Mariner. It was posted on the Cohasset Mariner web site but did not appear in print.

Selectmen have been under intense scrutiny by both the public and the press in recent months, as many controversial issues have surfaced in rapid succession.

Tension hit a boiling point last Tuesday (June 8) when Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan and Selectman Ronnie McMorris attacked the local press. They criticized coverage of recent events and challenged credibility of the journalism being practiced, accusing local papers of fabricating stories not based on fact.

Sullivan said he thinks there is currently a "very inaccurate perception of this community," which has been portrayed by the media, especially the daily Patriot Ledger. While he said the board is dealing with some issues and there have been "bumps in the road on occasion," it is nothing the town can't work through. In addition, he said he has spoken to many people who "appreciate the efforts being put forth to resolve these issues."

Sullivan said the Patriot Ledger should reach out beyond the small "circle of friends" who are continually quoted in articles, to those who believe the board is acting in the best interest of the town.

"The community has a very positive spirit, and the whole community does not need a major dose of Prozac as the Patriot Ledger would lead people to believe," he said.

Sullivan said problems in town revolve around five or six employees, and a downtown project that is not going "as smoothly as it should have been." People continue to move to the town and like living here, he said, and that needs to be kept in perspective.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said there has also been an image given to the town that it is somehow the "perfect" community. "It is made up of average people, and many live in modest homes," she said. She added that people continue to go about their daily lives, making doctor's appointments, taking their children to school, and "we're not perfect," but the media — including the Cohasset Mariner — has jumped on certain issues and splashed them across the front pages.

McMorris also said Chief Robert Jackson, who just retired, and his family have "been put through the wringer." She said Jackson has seen his family's reputation and his own reputation brought down because of allegations and not facts, which were printed in the papers.

McMorris accused the media of taking pieces of information and piecing them together to "create a story," every week, which are based on allegations and unnamed sources. She made reference to a recent Mariner editorial, which she said listed a number of facts which she believes were not factual. In the editorial, the Mariner stated during the 45-day "cooling off" period between the town and two officers who have been on paid administrative leave, there were no mediation sessions.

"This board took the time to try to mediate," McMorris said. "We participated in two different sessions." She described the meetings as productive with both parties coming together to try to come to a resolution. While she said it didn't result in a final outcome, "We were working in good faith to come to resolution."

She said when the Mariner printed there were no mediations conducted within the 45-day period, it was "not a fact, and is not true." [There was no mediation during the 45-days as stated in the editorial. The two mediation sessions occurred prior to the enactment of the cooling-off period.]

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer defended the press saying he believes the press has an important constitutional role to play, which "provides a check and balance against us." Dormitzer said the board has an obligation to provide information to the press, and suggested the board provide more than it has been, both so the board can get out in front of the story, and the press "doesn't have to dig." He said the board should consider writing a weekly press release, as well as perhaps having a weekly column, written on a rotating basis by different members of the board, which would enable it to "get out more of our own story."

"I do not find the press to be a problem. Partly, it's our own fault for not being as open as we should," Dormitzer said.

In a telephone interview the following day, Sullivan said his comments from the previous night were directed at only the Patriot Ledger. "The town is dealing with a number of important issues that were not created by the board, but have to be dealt with by the board. For the Patriot Ledger to continue to depict a very negative picture about Cohasset and the way it's run is just wrong."

Mark Skala, editor in chief for the Mariner, said his staff stands by its coverage. "Our job is to report the news and dig for information, even if that isn't in favor with those in authority. Our job is not to be liked by officials, but to be fair and balanced in our overall coverage. Cohasset has taken some hits lately, but this seems to be one of those old clichés of 'shooting the messenger'."

Auction raises funds to save teachers

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Getaways, spa treatments, and sports tickets are just some of the items to be auctioned off at the Committee to Save Three Teachers fund-raising event. But unlike many other auctions, those who attend need not leave the comforts of home, provided they has Internet access.

"What we are doing is very, very exciting," said Barbara Buckley, who has spearheaded the efforts, adding the auction her group is hosting is on a Web site almost identical to E-bay, but is used only for non-profit organizations. The auction opened Monday, June, 14 and runs until June 24, the last day of school.

The committee has been working with the Cohasset Educational Foundation since April to raise the funds necessary to retain three elementary teaching positions not funded as part of this year's budget. So far, the group has reached the halfway point, as $52,000 has been raised to date. With $53,000 to go in order to ensure all three teachers can be retained for next fall, the group is initiating its last final fund raising push.

With 21 categories of items to bid on — including food, lawn and garden, jewelry, sports, DVDs, and toys — there is something for everyone in the family to enjoy.

Buckley said the fund raising has "snowballed," in a very short amount of time. "We went from a flake to an avalanche," she said, adding she fully expects to raise the remaining $53,000 from the auction.

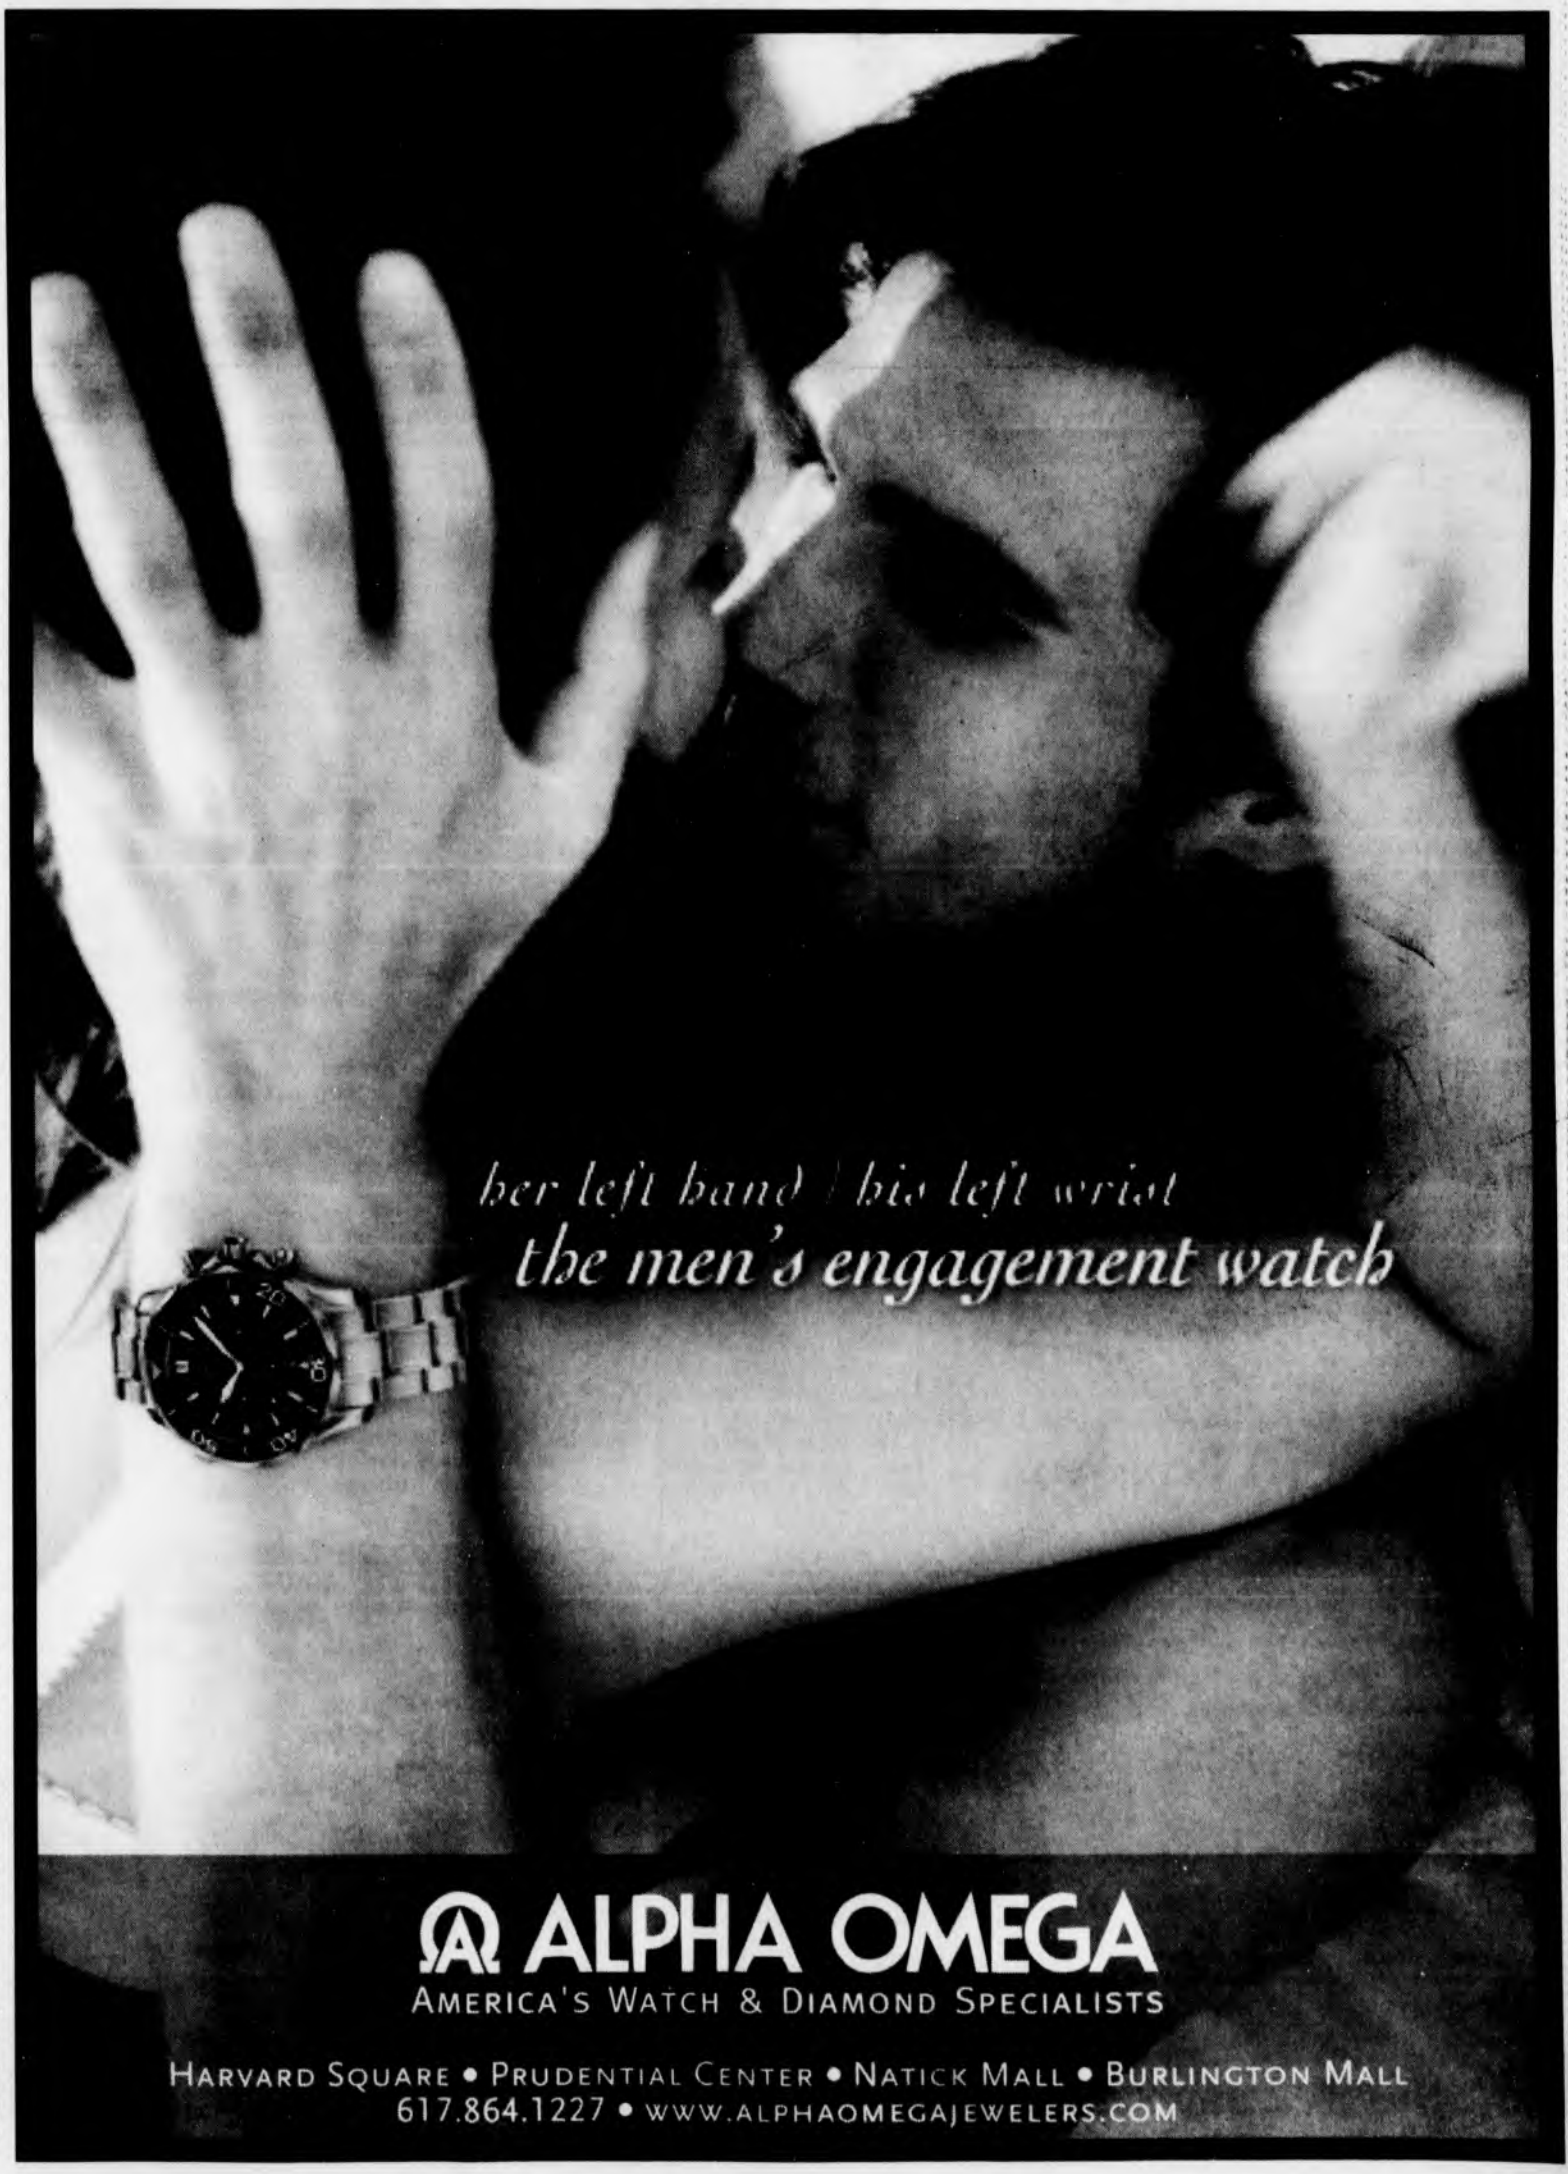
Items to be auctioned include a 25-foot Hunter sailboat as well as a week at a condo at Okemo Mountain, both of which were donated Sunday. Other bid items include a weekend getaway to an apartment in New York City, located at the corner of 14th and 1st, a chartered fishing trip, a private wine tasting and private sushi making lessons.

Buckley said some local "Cohasset celebrities" will also be donating their services for the cause. Former college baseball player Dan Rice will throw batting practice and work on fielding and throwing skills with Little League aged player or players; beloved children's librarian Sharon Moody will come to the house to read children bedtime stories, and Lilly Sestito will sing for a special occasion.

"We went from a flake to an avalanche."
— Barbara Buckley, coordinator

"All these cool services are local people who have generously donated their services," Buckley said, and she believes their generous contributions will help make a difference in the fund raising campaign. "Will we make it to $105,000, maybe. Will we make it to $70,000, I'm very confident," she said.

Buckley said she acknowledges this campaign is only a one-year fix but through its efforts, the committee has realized a much larger vision for the long term has been established. She said many who have become involved with this project have decided to establish a Cohasset Educational Advocacy Forum which will monitor what's going on at the local, state and national level in terms of education. She said the group will keep tabs on the decisions that are being made and share information with all the people who have shown they are like-minded. "Had we acted with this effort months ago, maybe all of this could have been avoided," she said.



Buckley also reiterated the committee is not faulting any decisions that have been made in the past, and that she and the committee think the School Committee and others who have had to make the tough decisions have done a great job. She said her committee is only trying to supplement what has been done.

To visit the Committee to Save Three Teachers auction, please visit www.cmarket.com. The link can be found on the left hand side of the screen under featured auctions. There is no charge to browse through items and the site also has the option to donate an item to be auctioned off. The auction closes June 24.

OPINION

Emergency response

South Shore Hospital's emergency department is not unlike many regional hospitals in the nation that are overused and overburdened.

Except for the fact that it's even busier than most.

In fact, the ER at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth is ranked third busiest in the state, behind Bay State Medical Center in Springfield and Boston Medical Center. The emergency department treats 200-plus patients on an average day. More than 25 percent of patients come by ambulance, compared to the national average of about 12 percent. Of the 200-plus per day, 25 percent need admission compared to the average of 16 percent.

What all these facts illustrate is that more and more people have come to rely on the hospital's emergency department. Like South Shore, many hospital emergency departments are busier than ever. Nationally, there are more than 112 million patient visits each year — up 16 percent since 1996. Emergency department overcrowding is a major national issue and one facing scrutiny here on the South Shore after two recent problems arose at the Weymouth facility.

Two women have come forward in recent weeks to complain about what they see as a lack of quality care while in the hospital's emergency room. A Braintree woman who was having an asthma attack while in the ER got so tired of waiting she dialed 911 and was taken by ambulance from South Shore Hospital to a facility in Quincy. In another case, a woman was taken by ambulance to South Shore and she said she waited six hours to be treated for stomach pains. While in the ER, her appendix burst.

The two incidents have cast a spotlight on the hospital's emergency department services to the point where the state Department of Public Health conducted an investigation at the facility last week.

Hospital officials say they welcome the review and well they should. Dr. John Benanti, chief of the emergency medicine, says the two incidents provide an opportunity for the hospital to "do better work." And we believe he means it.

Benanti is willing to accept responsibility for the fact that some patients may not be satisfied with their level of care. "Our staff has the same level of expectation about care and service as the community," he said. "We want to be our best and strive to improve every day. Whether it's personnel or technology, we want to do all the things that make us better."

It's understandable the hospital is a bit defensive these days. Solving emergency room issues won't be easy. Almost everyone can relate a story about long waits and lack of communication when using the emergency room, whether it's South Shore or another regional hospital.

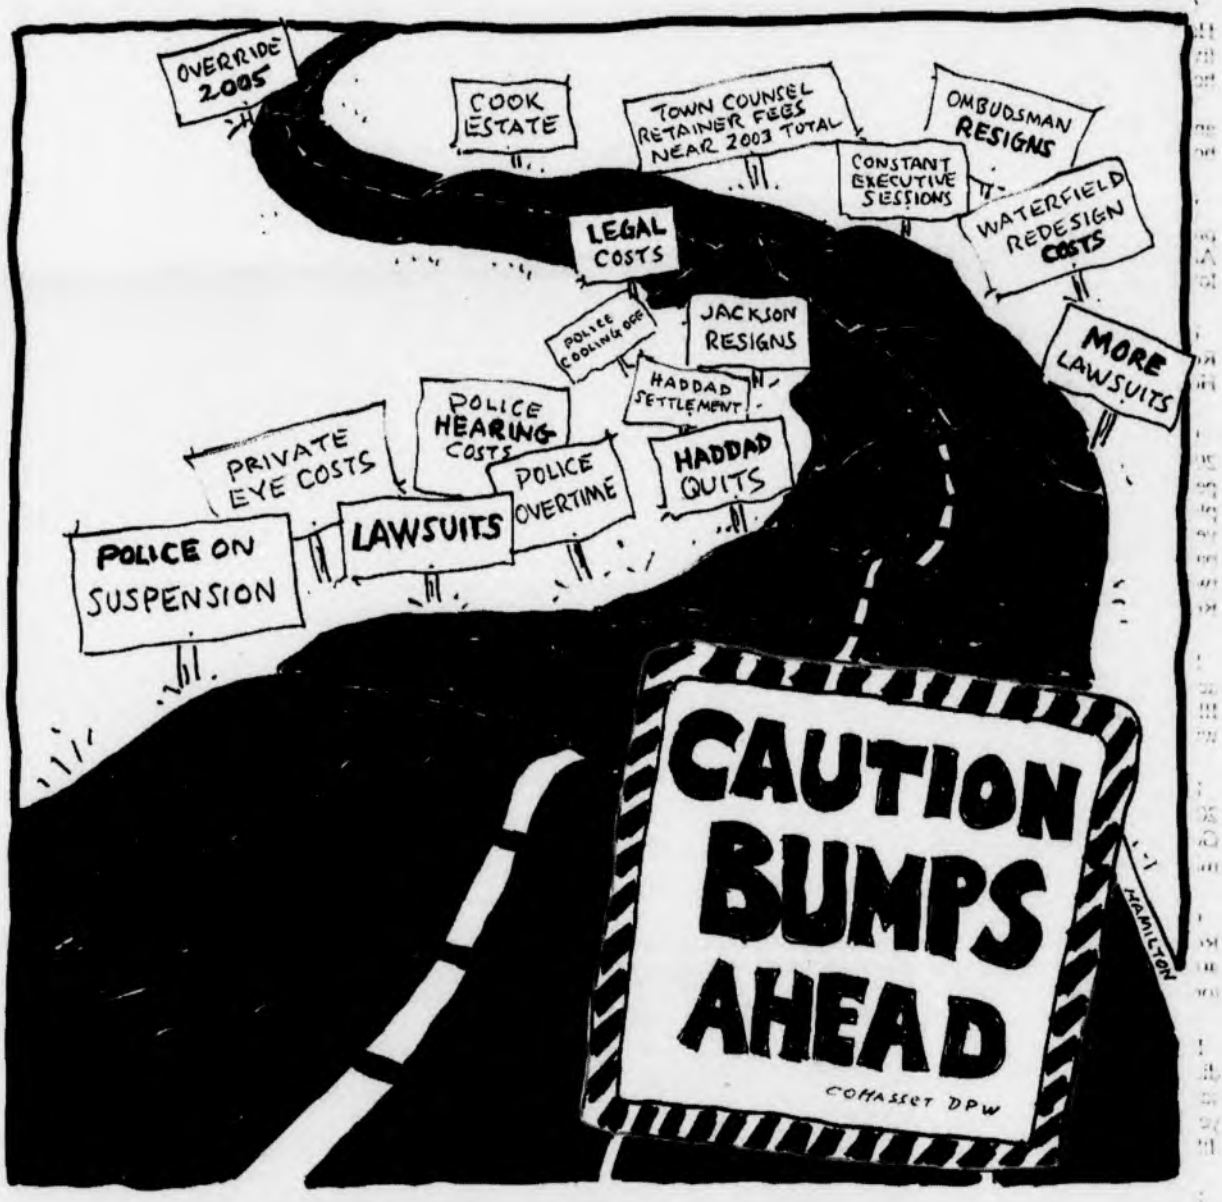
But residents should take comfort in the fact that South Shore Hospital is being proactive and officials aren't just turning a blind eye to the challenges they face. Benanti said the hospital ER is staffed with some 350 people, including doctors, nurses, and other medical professionals, so he doesn't see the current challenges related to staffing levels.

It's obvious the nation's health care delivery system is flawed and in dire need of overhaul. There are more than 40 million people in our country of 290 million who are without health insurance and rely on emergency department doctors for routine care.

At the local level, though, we are encouraged by the many steps being taken at South Shore Hospital to improve and enhance emergency room care. Some of those measures include:

- A new five-tier triage system to improve and expedite patient assessment — a system in place only two days when the hospital received its media attention because of the two incidents mentioned.
- Creation of a hospitalist position — the only facility in the region to have the position 24 hours. Essentially an internist, who has no private practice, is at the hospital who works with a patient's private physician in the community to expedite care and treatment.
- Bedside registration, allowing people to move more quickly from a waiting room to a treatment area.
- Development of the Friends of Emergency Care board. The advisory group is made up of people who have used the ER and offer advice, input and recommendations to Benanti, who meets monthly with the group.

The hospital, Benanti points out, must also come up with ways to better communicate with emergency room patients and their families. "Too often they don't know what is going on and wonder why they are waiting so long. Our job is to give them more information and share with them about what steps are being taken to provide them with care."



The public most also do its part, however, to improve the health care system. It's called personal accountability. A good example to illustrate this point: several children were brought in to the ER last weekend after a car accident because they weren't wearing seat belts. Something as simple as clicking those belts would have prevented even needing to go to the ER.

Having a primary care doctor is another simple step people can take. Too many visits to emergency rooms are a result of someone not having a primary care doctor to consult with and that results in filling up an already overcrowded emergency system.

It all sounds reasonable enough, yet it requires everyone's help — not just the doctors, nurses and medical staff — to help heal our nation's ailing emergency department system.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Contract non-renewal for Callahan is faulted

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing this letter to inform the people of Cohasset that Paul Callahan, the former Deer Hill principal, has been appointed as the principal of the Chaffee Elementary School in Oxford, Mass. His family would like to thank all of the many wonderful and caring people in Cohasset Paul came to love. I especially want to thank those who made phone calls or wrote letter to the superintendent and school committee to show their concern during his last year there.

As many of you know, in June 2002, Dr. Malvey, the Superintendent of Schools, decided not to renew Paul's contract with the Cohasset Public Schools. Paul had been an innovative, dedicated, and tireless worker for Cohasset since 1996. In his seven years he never took a sick day and was always there for everybody — parents, teachers, and most of all for the students of the Deer Hill School.

In March 2003, Dr. Malvey reported to the school committee that he was not renewing Paul's contract. The school committee accepted this decision without question and some publicly supported Dr. Malvey. I ask — Why does a principal like Paul Callahan be so unfairly removed after seven years of uncountable hours, true dedication, and excellent leadership, especially during the renovations and additions to the building? Good question!

Paul was devastated emotionally and financially. He has not been employed since July 1, 2003. For almost two years, Paul and his family endured the stress, defamation of reputation, and public embarrassment that are part of a contract non-renewal. Under the Education Reform Act principals serve at the whim of the superintendent, who determines their salary and employment. Also, under this law, there really is nothing that a principal can do when their contract is not renewed. Due process, which did not occur, should be part of the procedure. There is no severance pay for a principal, as others in Cohasset have received.

Paul has spent one year unemployed and disheartened because of one man. He had interviewed in many communities with the knowledge that he had no support from Dr. Malvey.

As an educator for 26 years I am appalled at this abuse of power. The power given to superintendents in Massachusetts by the Education Reform Bill of 1993 was never intended to ruin the careers of excellent educators such as Paul Callahan.

To the wonderful and caring people of Cohasset, Paul will never forget his days at Deer Hill. Thank you to them.

Mrs. Patricia Callahan

Research lawsuits

TO THE EDITOR:

I'm a very happy former resident of Cohasset.

After being advised of how terrible a town it was before I moved in, advice of which I well should have listened, I learned the hard way.

Last week's article on the Mariner Web site [and in this week's paper], quotes the same people whining about poor press coverage. It follows a town manager and police chief leaving under stressed circumstances. Now there is controversy over a new chief being brought in. This man should run as fast as he can the other way.

Over the years the town has engaged in politically driven lawsuits, spending town money well into six-figures, as town departments suffer.

Please research and print the stories of the legal funds spent over the past years, what they were spent for, and what the results of the suits were.

Another former resident, (very happy as well) who had prominent business office in Cohasset, and was well qualified for his role, said to me, "I drove through the place the other day, and I couldn't figure out anything I missed about the place."

Why no tirade over interim principal?

TO THE EDITOR:

Isn't it amazing that an interim high school principal overseeing more than 300 persons was chosen without a search committee, while the police chief's appointment to interim position without a search committee evoked a tirade?

Frannie Coffey will be missed

TO THE EDITOR:

I was stunned to see in tonight's paper that Frannie Coffey had died suddenly. Frannie was a man who enjoyed working with people to help others. For 27 years he had been involved with me and Sharpless Jones in the running of the Cohasset Road Race By the Sea.

Frannie was always there to help in any way he could. He came up with some wonderful ideas that helped us to improve the race. He joined with us to ensure that the focus of the race was on the participants and to make sure that safety of the runners was a primary factor.

Thank you Frannie for your years of giving. We'll miss you greatly.

Ronald Reagon passed away lost week. He loved to ride horses. We miss him very much. Even his wife, Nancy. He was the oldest President of the United States. We love him very much.

— Emily Curran

Unfortunately, Ronald Reagon passed away on June 5, 2004. He was 93 when he passed away. He was the 40th President. He was a swimmer. Ronald Regan got shot but the good thing is he didn't die. He is a good President.

— Audrey Brown

Ronald Reagon was a President. He died on June 5, 2004. His funeral took a long time. He loved horses. He got shot but he did not die that day. His family misses him a lot. I'm sure they do. We miss him too.

LIBRARY CORNER

Summer reading for schoolchildren

Explore other worlds at your library, is the theme of this year's statewide Summer Reading Program. Registration will be held at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, in the Children's Room, beginning Monday, June 28, and will continue throughout the early summer. Registration hours will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays, Thursdays, and Fridays and from 1 to 7 p.m. on Tuesdays.

At the time of registration, students will set a goal and be given a summer reading log on which to record their summer reading. At the completion of the summer program, Aug. 13, participants will bring their reading logs to share with Mrs. Moody. A tee shirt with the summer logo will be awarded to those participants who meet or exceed their goal.

We will be presenting a series of free Tuesday evening programs for families, suitable for children of all ages. These events will begin on Tuesday, July 6, and will end on Tuesday, Aug. 10.

Families that read together provide the strongest model for future readers. Research shows that young children from families that visit the library at least once a month show significantly more signs of emerging literacy than children whose families are not library users.

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

At this time next week, you'll probably be standing in line at Barnes and Noble, waiting with mounting impatience to plunk down $35 for the purchase of the most important book of this century.

Yessiree, three years after accepting a $10 million advance from Knopf and after a year of explaining why it was not finished yet, Bill Clinton's autobiography, creatively titled "My Life," will finally hit the stands next Tuesday.

On second thought, this may not be the most important book of this century, but only since publication of "Living History," (dig those creative titles) by another Clinton in June, 2003.

When is Chelsea's book coming out? And what will it be called?

Has anyone checked in on Carter and Ford lately?

Do you have the feeling, as I do, that we have been assaulted by ex-presidents of late, what with Reagan buying the farm, Bush XLI jumping from an airplane to celebrate his 80th birthday (with parachute, of course) and, now, Clinton.

Has anyone checked in on Carter and Ford lately?

Once you have purchased Bill's book, all 957 pages of it, I'll bet the next thing you do is turn to the index and thumb down to the letter "L" to see if She is mentioned.

After all, didn't Bill tell publishers and editors at the trade show BookExpo America, "I don't spare myself" in the book?

And didn't Wilt Chamberlain extend the literary perimeters by claiming to have known 20,000 women in the Biblical sense in his autobiography a few years ago?

I wish I could tell you whether or not She is mentioned in Bill's book but my review copy appears to have gone astray between the Knopf mail room and my mail box.

Personally and economically, I think it would be a big mistake for Bill to ignore Her in his book. If it were me, I'd devote a whole chapter to a critique of Her performance as an intern in the White House.

Knopf has order a whopping first printing of 1.5 million copies and has orders from bookstores for 2.3 million.

If it was confirmed that She has a lead role in the book, prepublication orders might jump to 4.6 million before you could say Ken Starr.

Cigar stores would be stocking up on extra supplies, too.

If you think the assault of ex-presidents will be over once Bill's book is published, be advised that it has just begun. We'll have at least another month of it.

Bill's book tour starts next Sunday on "60 Minutes," continues Tuesday with "Oprah," then Wednesday with "Today" and "Good Morning, America," Thursday with Larry King and Friday with Charlie Rose.

And then there is the Democratic National Convention at the Fleet Center starting July 26, when, at the urging of Knopf, of course, card tables will be set up at every available McDonald's, Dunkin' Donuts and Laundromats all over Boston.

Will "My Life" be worth it? Will the book truly reflect life as Bill Clinton lived it? I'm not saying it will or it won't but I subscribe to George Orwell's definition of autobiography, any autobiography.

It is, he said "the most egregious form of fiction."

Letter criticized

TO THE EDITOR:

I am responding to a letter from Louis Harvey in the June 10 edition of the Cohasset Mariner. This letter is in regard to his personal attack toward two selectmen. Let me edit his letter. He could have left out the following adjectives: appalling, raw, vitriolic, abhorrent, outlandish, and crude, and his letter would still have had the same effect.

Although Mr. Harvey certainly can express his thoughts and views, his hostility, negativeness, and just plain nastiness is not appreciated, at least by this writer. As I've said before, reasonable people can agree to disagree reasonably.

HEALTH NOTES

Summer is seafood time in Massachusetts

A wise consumer is advised to adhere to the certain guidelines when purchasing, storing, handling, and preparing seafood.

In Massachusetts, the start of summer is the signal for many people to think about preparing and eating more fresh seafood, especially boiling up lobster, and preparing clam bakes and clam boils. Throughout the year, the staff of Seafood Inspection Unit of the Division of Food and Drug within the Massachusetts Department of Public Health is on duty to assure the citizens of the Commonwealth that the product that is purchased from the local market or restaurant is a safe product. However, a wise consumer is advised to adhere to the following guidelines when purchasing, storing, handling, and preparing seafood.

〈 For those who enjoy recreational fishing and shellfishing, it is important to follow state and local regulations and be aware of health and safety advisories about fishing and harvesting areas.

〈 Temperatures are particularly important, especially for fishing and digging clams. A fish held at 50 degrees F will spoil five times faster than one held at 32 F. A good rule of thumb is that product shelf life is cut in half by every 10 F increase in temperature. So remember, when fishing or clamming, bring a cooler of ice for the catch.

〈 Always wash hands thoroughly with hot, soapy water before and after handling raw seafood.

How to purchase

〈 Know your seafood dealer — buy products from approved, reputable licensed markets with evidence of good refrigeration, icing, and sanitation. Never buy swollen, dented cans or containers of fish and seafood.

Fresh Fish

〈 Fresh fish should have a mild sea breeze odor. A strong, fishy odor generally is not acceptable.

〈 Whole fish should have bright, clear and shiny eyes. Scales should be shiny and cling tightly to the skin. Look for bright pink or red gills; steaks and fillets should be moist and free from drying or browning around the edges.

〈 At the market, be sure that cooked seafood products are not in contact with raw seafood products in the display case.

Frozen Fish

〈 Make sure pre-packaged products are undamaged and fillets or steak are solidly frozen in their wraps.

〈 Fish should be free of ice crystals and freezer burn (i.e., discoloration or drying.)

〈 Avoid packages that are above the frost line in a store's display freezer.

Fresh Shellfish

"Shell on" products such as mussels, clams, and oysters should be purchased alive. Shells of live clams, mussels and oysters may gap naturally, but will close tightly when tapped, indicating that they are alive.

〈 Live crabs and lobsters will show some leg movement and live lobsters will curl their tails tightly beneath them when handled.

〈 Freshly shucked oysters and scallops have a fresh odor and be surrounded by a clear, slightly milky or light gray liquid. If in doubt about the source or raw oysters, clams, and mussels, ask seafood market personnel to show you the shipper's tag that accompanies "shell on" products or check the shipper number on the container of shucked oysters.

Frozen Shellfish

〈 Be sure that shellfish is packed in close-fitting, moisture-proof containers.

〈 Frozen, prepared items such as crab cakes or breaded shrimp should be frozen solid with no sign of freezer burn (i.e., discoloration or drying) and no unpleasant odor.

How to store and handle

〈 Get seafood into the refrigerator as quickly as possible. Do not leave perishable items in hot cars or out in the sun for extended periods, unless packed in ice or in a cooler.

〈 Keep seafood products cold to keep them safe. Maintain your refrigerator between 34 F and 40 F and your freezer at 0 F or colder.

〈 Store fresh fish in the coldest part of the refrigerator — under the freezer or in the "meat keeper" drawer. If you are not going to use the seafood within one or two days, freeze it. However, do not refreeze previously frozen products.

〈 Clams, oysters, and mussels should be refrigerated in containers covered by clean, damp cloths — no air-tight lids. Use within one or two days.

〈 Keep frozen fish and shellfish frozen at 0 F and for best quality use them within three to six months. The longer these foods are frozen, the more likely they are to lose flavor, texture, and moisture.

〈 Pasteurized products like crabmeat can be stored up to six months in the refrigerator. Once opened, use within three to five days. (Pasteurized products should not be frozen.)

〈 Store canned seafood in a cool, dry place for up to one year.

〈 Refrigerate and freeze leftovers immediately in moisture-proof packages or containers.

How to prepare

〈 Thaw frozen seafood slowly to minimize drip loss and protect flavor, aroma, and texture. During thawing, always place the product in drain pans or other containers that prevent build-up of melt water and drippings. Quality of seafood held in water deteriorates rapidly.

〈 Defrost frozen seafood in the refrigerator, allowing about one day to defrost. For quicker defrosting, place the seafood package in a re-sealable plastic storage bag and immerse in a pan of cold water in the refrigerator for one to two hours per pound of seafood. Another defrosting method is to put the original package in a plastic bag, place it in a pan, and run cold water around it in the sink until thawed. If defrosting the seafood in the microwave, cook the product immediately.

〈 Don't leave seafood, raw or cooked, out of the refrigerator for more than two hours, including preparation and serving.

〈 Before cooking, rinse

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local senators' votes on five roll calls from the week of June 7-11. There were no important roll calls in the House last week.

EMPLOYEES' INJURIES (S 956)

Senate 37-0, gave initial approval to a bill voiding any section of an employment agreement that requires an employee, as a condition of employment, to waive liability for injuries or death caused by a third party. The bill was proposed in response to a case in which an employee of a security company was injured while working at a Boston Edison facility. The employee was a so-called "leased employee" who was hired by the security company and then sent to work at the third party Edison facility. The employee had signed a waiver releasing any third party from liability and the courts upheld the waiver. Supporters said some companies unfairly require their employees to sign these waivers as a condition of employment. They noted that this anti-worker practice helps these companies to secure contracts with third parties that prefer to contract with companies that require the waiver. They argued that the bill is a pro-worker one that would simply protect workers and ensure that they are allowed to sue a negligent third party. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

Y

VEHICULAR HOMICIDE PRISON SENTENCES (S 2322)

Senate 38-0, gave initial approval to a bill increasing the maximum prison sentence that can be imposed for reckless motor vehicle homicide. Current law provides a sentence of between 30 days and 2.5 years and/or a fine of $300 to $3000. The bill would impose up to a ten-year prison and/or up to a $3000 fine. The measure also revokes for ten years the driver's license of a person convicted of vehicular manslaughter. Supporters said 2.5 years is an insufficient maximum sentence for a judge to impose on a person that kills someone while driving recklessly. They argued that increasing the maximum sentence would give judges more flexibility and show irresponsible drivers that the state is cracking down and is serious about keep the roads safe. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

WARRANTLESS ARREST FOR VEHICULAR HOMICIDE (S 2286)

Senate 38-0, approved new language in a bill allowing police officers to arrest, without a warrant, a reckless or negligent driver who causes a death. Current law only allows the arrest if the driver is negligent or reckless and also under the influence of drugs or alcohol. Supporters said the bill was filed following the 2002 death of Worcester State college student Robert Martinelli who was killed by a pick-up truck driver later convicted of vehicular homicide. Current law prohibited police officers from arresting the driver because alcohol and drugs were not involved. Supporters said the bill would ensure that these reckless drivers are immediately removed from the streets, held for at least 24 hours and swiftly processed through the judicial system. They argued that it is unfair to let them leave the scene after causing a horrible death and noted there are at least ten other motor vehicles violations for which police officers can make these warrantless arrests. The Senate later gave near final approval to the measure and sent it to the House. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

LABOR UNIONS AND POLITICAL EDUCATION (H 4330)

Senate 37-1, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a section allowing employees of public employee labor unions to authorize a fee-free payroll deductions to contribute to any committee on political education. Override supporters said this would stop the Romney administration's unfair plan to impose a ten-cent per transaction fee on these contributions. They said it is unfair to charge a fee for contributions to these important committees that mobilize people to participate in political activity that supports the agenda of working families. In his veto message, the governor said that it is inappropriate to use state resources and facilities to raise political contributions on behalf of private interests." (A "Yea" vote is for allowing the fee-free payroll deductions. A "Nay" vote is against allowing them).

SAGAMORE ROTARY PROJECT (S 2377)

Senate 34-2, gave near final approval to and sent to the House a bill allowing the state to take 1.3 acres of open space land from the town of Bourne and in exchange give Bourne more than four acres of land, a new firehouse and a visitor's center. Supporters said this land-swap is necessary in order to begin construction on the $58 million so-called "flyover project" that would eliminate the existing Sagamore Rotary, replace it with a direct connection from Route 3 to the Sagamore Bridge and provide a new underpass for local traffic. They argued that the current rotary is an outdated and dangerous source of many accidents and often causes up to ten-mile traffic backups during the tourist season. They said the new project is a fiscally sound and environmentally friendly one that would reduce traffic congestion and help businesses. Opponents said the Romney administration is unfairly putting this project ahead of other important construction projects across the state that have already been approved including a commuter rail extension for the New Bedford and Fall River areas. They argued that the Sagamore project is a costly and environmentally unfriendly one that is being pushed by the governor to benefit wealthy families with vacation homes on the Cape. The measure now goes to the House where a group of lawmakers that oppose the project have pledged to fiercely fight the land-swap. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it).

Summer is seafood time in Massachusetts

seafood in cold water for several seconds to remove surface bacteria.

〈 When marinating fish and shellfish, place marinade and seafood in the refrigerator. Do not marinade at room temperature. After use, discard marinade.

〈 Bacteria lingers in towels, cloths, and sponges used during preparation, so keep them clean. If a dishcloth or sponge is used to clean raw juices from fish or shellfish, do not reuse the dishcloth or sponge — wash it first.

〈 Wash counters, utensils, plates, cutting boards and other surfaces touched by raw seafood with hot, soapy water. Rinse thoroughly with clean water. Sanitizers containing phenols, such as Lysol and Pinesol, should never be used on seafood contact surfaces.

Cooking

Fish

〈 The 10-minute rule is a good guide to cook fish and applies to baking at 450 F, broiling, grilling, steaming, and poaching only. Measure the fish — whole, steaks, or fillets — at its thickest part. Calculate 10 minutes of cooking time per inch of thickness.

〈 Cook a one-inch thick fish steak 5 minutes per side.

〈 Pieces of fish that measure one-half inch or less do not need to be turned.

〈 Add five minutes to the cooking time if the fish is cooked in foil or sauce. Double the cooking time for frozen fish that has not been defrosted.

〈 Fish is done when the flesh is opaque and begins to flake easily. If checking with a thermometer, fish is usually ready when the internal temperature reaches 145 F.

Shellfish

〈 Clams, mussels, and oysters in the shell should open when cooking. Remove them as they open and continue cooking until all are done.

〈 Shucked shellfish, such as clams, mussels, and oysters become plump and opaque when cooked and ready for eating. The edges of the oysters start to curl.

〈 Raw shrimp turn pink and firm when cooked. Depending on size, it takes from three to five minutes to boil or steam one pound of medium-sized shrimp in the shell.

〈 Scallops turn milky white or opaque and firm. They take three to four minutes to cook thoroughly depending on size.

〈 Submerge fresh lobster in a pot of rapidly boiling water. Allow five to six minutes per pound, starting the timer when the water returns to a boil. A cooked, boiled lobster will turn bright red.

Raw Seafood

Many Massachusetts people love raw seafood - little necks on the half shell, oysters, and sushi. Healthy individuals who choose to eat seafood can minimize risks by ensuring that raw clams and oysters come from certified waters. For home consumption, keep raw seafood well refrigerated until time of consumption.

Who Should Avoid Consuming Raw Seafood

Certain people should avoid raw or under-cooked animal proteins, including seafood. These at-risk people include anyone who has a weakened immune system, because the immune system cannot fight bacteria as effectively. These people should not stop eating seafood, but it is strongly recommended that they eat seafood only in the cooked form. Those who may be considered at-risk include anyone with liver disease, either from viral hepatitis, alcohol over-use, or other causes; diabetes; cancer; kidney disease; long-term steroid use, as for asthma and arthritis; immune disorders, including HIV infection and AIDS; stomach or blood disorders; and hemochromatosis, an iron disorder. For those who are uncertain of their risk of consuming raw seafood, it is recommend that they consult with their physicians.

A final note

The formula for safe seafood consumption is preventing spoilage. The formula is very simple: Keep seafood clean, cool, moist, and moving. Handle seafood with care and pay close attention to temperatures and sanitation.

Cohasset joins the $7 million club

ting the stage for his presidential run eight years later.

Despite its history and spectacular views from Whitehead, whose rocks are a landmark for yachts, Hamilton said the property was recently appraised at $5 million to $7 million and sold on the "high end."

"It's a great house that needs a lot of work," he said, adding because there is already a house and septic system on the site rebuilding and repairing shouldn't be a problem.

"You are allowed to rebuild what's there," Hamilton said, explaining new construction on a vacant lot near the water can be difficult under today's environmental codes.

The 6,210 square-foot house that is reachable by car over a small bridge is assessed at $3.3 million, according to the assessor's office at Town Hall. Whitehead Road is a private way off Atlantic Avenue.

Local historian and town archivist David Wadsworth said the house was built by Harry V. Long on Whitehead which is an ancient name. During the War of 1812, local militias that constructed earthworks on Whitehead kept British ships from entering the harbor. Whitehead was also the site of the first volunteer lifeboat station in America.

Rumors are the new owner is British, very rich, and plans to tear down the house, which has fallen into disrepair.

Wadsworth said Dr. Freeman was kind enough to allow members of the historical society to walk the island a few years ago. "It's a beautiful place," Wadsworth said. "I'm sorry to see a house of that caliber and history demolished."

Edward Long, the grandson of Harry V. Long who built the house, lives on Nichols Road. He said his grandfather was in the investment business and was "very capable." His grandparents lived in Boston and built the home in Cohasset as a summer house. As a boy, Edward Long spent every Sunday afternoon in the summer on Whitehead where his family had afternoon tea and he climbed the rocks with his brother, William.

He described the house as "very well done" and recalled an interior fountain with glass windows all around and glass balls floating in it. "We used to push the balls around and tried not to break anything," he recalled.

David Drinkwater, president of Grand Gables Realty Group in North Scituate, said the sale was private and not done through the MLS (Multiple Listing Service) system. He's not surprised by the sales price and notes there are other homes in town, such as the Roy mansion on Margin Street, that would sell for even more. A property in Duxbury sold this year for $10 million, Drinkwater said.

"Cohasset, which is full of hidden alleyways and private roads, is one of the most desirable communities in eastern Massachusetts with its proximity to Boston, location, way of life, culture and schools," he said.

Drinkwater also said land, which is scarce in Cohasset, can be a greater component in the sales price of a property than the house; hence, all the tear-downs.

Currently there are 66 single-family homes on the market in town with a median list price of $929,000 and an average list price of $1,276,000, according to the MLS Property Information Network, Drinkwater said.

According to the Warren Group, publishers of Banker and Tradesman, Cohasset has joined an exclusive club this year with the $7.3 million sale.

Four other homes have sold in that range in the state in the past five months, including a home in Weston ($7 million); Needham ($7.5 million); Edgartown ($7.75 million) and Boston's Beacon Street ($8.5 million).

50th reunion planned

Early planning is under way for a reunion bringing together the members of the 1954 graduating class of Cohasset High School. As well, a search is under way for those who were members of that class but were separated prior to graduation and would like to join in on the festivities. Knowing that most of those who were associated with this class have left Cohasset, it is hoped that friends who still live in town will inform them, as soon as is possible of the plans for the event.

Individuals who have not already been informed of the event and want to be included in on all plans should contact Norman Jason, P.O. Box 46, Durham, CT 06422 or call 860-349-3438. Much work is still to be done but it is necessary to know who is going to be in attendance before plans can be completed.

Cohasset High senior DeWayne Morris (#22) played arguably the best game of his lacrosse career in his final game, as he was a force at both ends of the field in the Skippers semifinals loss to Dover-Sherborn Friday.

CHS laxmen fall in semifinals to Dover-Sherborn

Cohasset had just scored with a man advantage to even the game at 5-5 with under two minutes remaining in the third quarter.

The momentum appeared to be with the Skippers in this Division 3 East boys lacrosse semifinal matchup, Friday. But then, in the final 35 seconds of the quarter, second-seeded Dover-Sherborn scored twice and Cohasset went to back to its bench looking like a club fighter who had just been dazed by a vicious 1-2 combination.

Then Raiders' senior tri-captain Chris Carter delivered the knockout punch.

Carter won the faceoff to start the final quarter and quickly fed Nate Higley, who scored his third goal of the contest just 14 seconds in the period, giving D-S an 8-5 lead.

Over the next 30 seconds, Carter won two more faceoffs and scored two more goals, sparking his squad to a 12-6 home win over the sixth-seeded Skippers to advance to the Div. 3 state championship game versus Medfield this past Monday. D-S (17-5) wound up falling there, 10-6.

Carter's second tally capped a five-goal Raiders' outburst over just 1:19 to put away the Skippers (11-8).

"We just suffered a meltdown," noted Cohasset first year coach Stu Curran. "We didn't seem to pick up quickly enough on defense where the slides were coming from, and (D-S) burned us.

"It certainly didn't help that we didn't have our regular faceoff guy in Mark Davis. We threw a couple of different guys in there on faceoffs, but Carter is just one of the best at that in Eastern Mass. It was asking a lot to have someone without much experience go in there against him."

Davis, a hard working and gritty senior, played in the game despite suffering a broken thumb in last week's quarterfinals win over Martha's Vineyard. Understandably, though, he was unavailable for face-offs.

"Mark is a true gamer, but there was only so much he could do," noted Curran. "Thumbs are pretty important in this game."

It was the pair of D-S scores late in the third that got things going. Higley got the first one, when he fired a shot from the left side past Cohasset goalie Nick

Girls tennis team ousted in state semis thriller by Manchester-Essex, 3-2

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

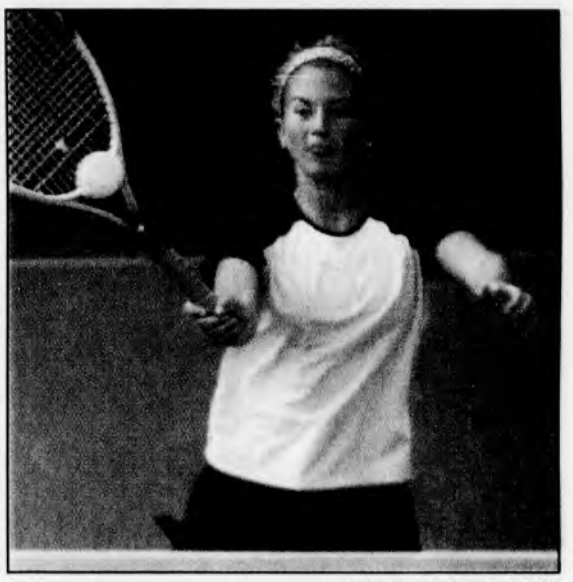
High school tennis fans might as well pencil in Cohasset and Manchester-Essex for the state semifinal next year.

And while we're at it, let's figure that the match will be tied at two and come down to number two doubles to decide the outcome.

For the second year in a row, the Cohasset team of Emilie Sullivan and Corey Evans were the last ones playing, as they took their deciding match to a third set.

In 2003, they were able to pull it out and propel Cohasset to the state championship match. This time around, despite a great effort from the CHS duo, the Manchester-Essex duo of Alex de Sherbinin and Paige Journey were a little bit better on Tuesday. They took the match and the win for their team, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3.

For a while, it looked as though Cohasset would be able to pull it out once again. A combination of great shots at net and some strong serving from Sullivan give the Skippers a 3-2 lead in the third set.



At that point, however, de Sherbinin and Journey went into another gear, hitting a number of winners between and over their opponents. They took the final four games, and the match.

Afterwards, head coach Gigi Meehan said her doubles team had nothing to hang their heads about.

"They have won more clutch points than anyone in the history of this team," she said.

Being the defending state champions, everyone was gunning for Cohasset this season. Nonetheless, they lost only once during the regular season, and took their second straight sectional championship. Finishing 19-2 under the kind of pressure the team

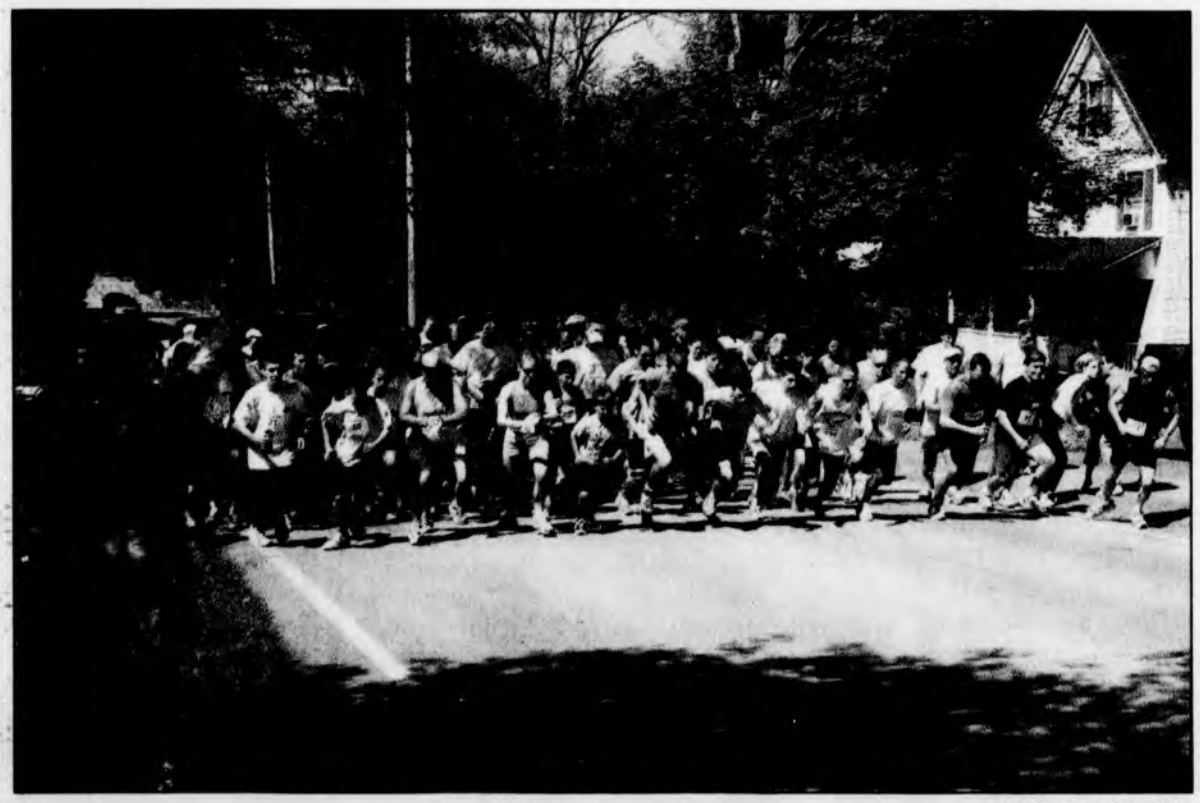
Third annual Clark Chatteron Fund Run raises over $4,000 for youth sports

By Mike Spellman
MPSELLMAN@CNC.COM

By George, I think they've got it. Or should that read "By Clark?"

The third annual Clark's Fund Run in Cohasset went off with nary a hitch, on Saturday, and an estimated $4,000 to $5,000 was raised for the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund, which supports a variety of worthwhile causes in Cohasset.

The event featured a one-mile kids run, a 3.5 mile walk and the featured 3.5 mile run along a scenic course that starts at the South Shore Music Circus and takes runners through Cohasset Common, past Sandy Beach and then past the Chatterton house on the loop back toward the Music Circus finish line.



"This was no doubt about it the best organized race we've run so far," said race coordinator Deb Beal. "We had some volunteers who really stepped up, and the (Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund) Committee members were great, and so was (CHS track coach) Al Lafountain. It was a good day."

Helping to carry things off smoothly, the weather cooperated for the first time in the brief history of the Clark Fund Run, named in memory of former Cohasset High Athletic Director Clark Chatterton, who lost his battle with cancer four years ago. In 2002, rain fell throughout the race and last year there was rain in the morning, which may have convinced a few runners to stay away.

"It was an absolutely perfect day for a race," said Beal.

"I think Clark might be pulling a few strings for us up there," she continued with a smile. "Someone said to me he's probably figured out now this is going to be an annual event, so he's put in a request

CHS track teams desperate to increase ranks

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

The Spring of '04 will go down in Cohasset women's track history as one chock full of personal achievements.

In his seventh year of coaching, Al LaFountain felt reasonably satisfied with his team's performance. Said the head coach: "This was a very successful year, especially for the girls."

Five female athletes qualified to enter the states.

Jen Buckley placed seventh at the All-State track championships in the 800, closely followed by Mary Silvia with an eighth place finish.

Nicole Whitney sprinted well in the 200 while Lindsey Kennedy placed ninth in the 100.

The 4x400 relay team of Lisa Musto, Whitney, Buckley and Silvia captured the South Shore Principles with a quick time of 10:19.

In moving from the track to the field area, Jen Buckley tossed the javelin almost 109 feet. Nicole Whitney triple jumped 31.11 feet. High jumpers Jenny Daley, Lauren Strazulla, and Ellen Wise respectively cleared the bar at 4'2, 4'2, and 4'0.

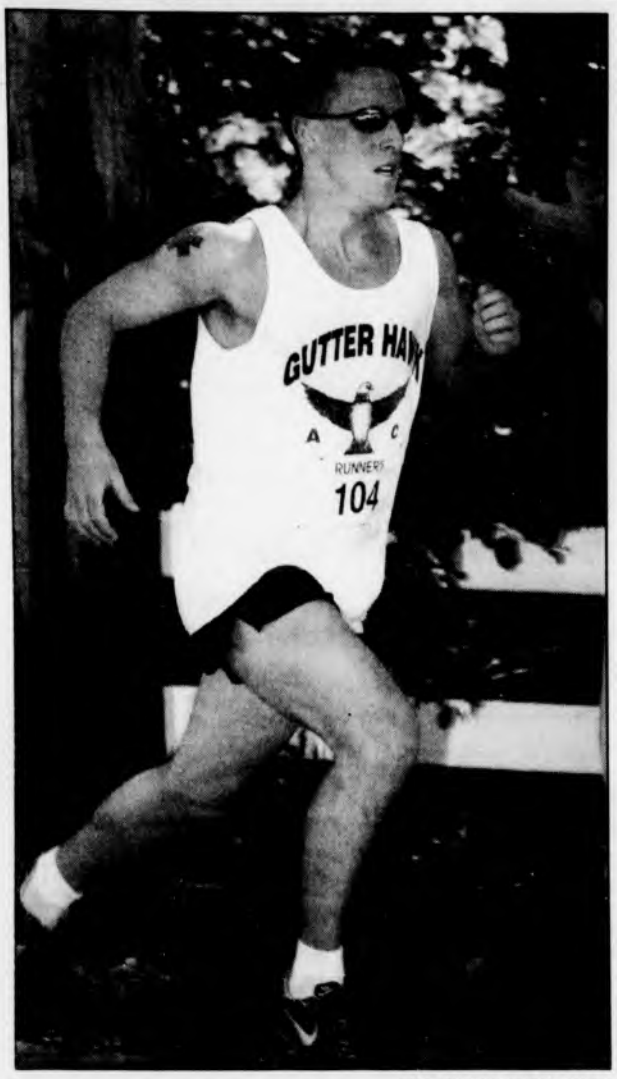
Post 118 baseball squad still seeking first win

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Well, it's not a win, but at least they're getting closer...not to mention more exciting.

Down to their final out, Monday night in Stoughton, the Cohasset G.H. Mealy Post 118 Legion baseball team rallied for five runs to take a 7-5 lead and ultimately, an effort that ultimately brought them a 7-7 tie—the first non-loss of the season.



The Post 118 squad, made up exclusively of players from Scituate and Cohasset, opened the season three straight losses, the last two in dramatic fashion, but bounced back to play its best game of the season Monday on the road.

"We're getting better every time out," asserted coach Mike Duggan. "The wins will start coming soon, and then it wouldn't surprise me if they came fast. Our goal is still to make the playoffs."

Monday's effort was certainly one the locals can build around.

Trailing 5-2, Cohasset saw its first two hitters in the seventh and final inning ground out.

for good weather on that day."

Unfortunately, Clark couldn't take care of everything. The total of 170 registered runners was actually down a bit from last year, which Beal felt had more than a little to do with the popular seventh annual Squirrel Run taking place at the same time in Quincy.

"Considering we were competing with the Squirrel Run, I think 170 was a pretty good number," said Beal. "We had about 70 percent Cohasset people, which is what we want. We're not looking to run a huge race."

There were other indications, though, that the 3.5-mile race is gaining steam. Local road race star Jamie Gallagher, of Hull, turned out for the first time ever and, to no surprise, won it with a best ever Clark's Fund Run time of 19:14.

"When I saw Jamie there I said right away that this makes it really feel like a race," said Beal, who herself competes regularly in local road races. "It's a nice honor that he chose our race. Maybe that will help get a few other top runners from the area in here next year. That would be good."

Scituate High track star Brian Stewart finished second for the second year in a row, but greatly improved his time from 2003, as he raced across the finish line just 22 seconds behind Gallagher (19:36).

Cohasset's own Patrick Kennedy placed third (20:14), and another well known local race standout, Scituate's Ted Coyle, was fourth (20:49).

Stewart's SHS track teammate, Thomas Pollard, was fifth (21:01) and last year's winner, Cohasset's Mike Kearney (21:18) was sixth, running 21 seconds off last year's pace.

The top female finisher was also the only non Massachusetts resident in the race. Vanessa Rae—in town visiting from Kapolei, Hawaii—placed 13th overall with a solid time of 23:15. This placed her just one spot and nine seconds ahead of the second female finisher, Cohasset's own Jennifer Lankow (23:24), who was recently hired as a history teacher at CHS.

Recent high school graduate Jenn Buckley, a three sport Mariner All-Scholastic honoree during her time at CHS, was the third female finisher (16th overall, 23:41) with Barbara Buckley (no relation) fourth (17th overall, 23:49).

Race Notes

Garret Canney, a fifth Grader at Deer Hill School, won the 1-mile kids run with a time of 7:10.

The Clark Chatterton Fund has already donated over $16,000 to several local causes and projects, among them the Milliken Field baseball renovation, the track and field discus cage at Alumni Field, the Cohasset Food Pantry, the CHS Athletic Trainor salary and the Presidential Class room at CHS.

CHS girls tennis coach GiGi Meehan, Coca Cola and The South Shore Music Circus all made a sizeable cash donations on race day to the Clark Chatterton Fund.

A total of 18 $10 gift certificates to Starbucks were given out to winners in various categories—a tribute to Meehan, who, legend has it, has singlehandedly kept a few of the popular South Shore java houses in business.

Music Circus owner Vince Long once again generously opened up his facility—payback, so to speak, for all the years Clark Chatterton worked on his concessions stands.

Many other families and businesses also donated money or supplies for the race. They will all be recognized in the post race results book.

The present Chatterton Committee Members are Jack DeLorenzo, Deb Beal, Ron Ford, Lind and Larry Schultz, Linda Bolster, Deanna Mulligan, Phil Mahoney and Bob Durkin.

Cohasset School Teachers who ran the race were Scott Newkirk, Al LaFountain, Nina Berkowitz, Pattie McGrail and Carole Bierman.

The U.S. National Guard was on hand with a HumVee and 25-foot climbing wall.

Monday, October 18, 2004, the Chatter Committee will host the first annual "Clarks Fall Scramble" a golf tournament at Hatherly Country Club in Scituate. Anyone interested in playing should contact Phil Mahoney at: PO Box 652, Cohasset Ma 02025

Clark's grand daughter, Tori Litchfield, covered the course in a respectable 31:28, good for 89th place overall.

An extra special thanks to Deb Bostwick, CHS field hockey and softball coach, for rounding up volunteers from these two teams to man water stations and cover the course mile markings and intersections, and to the Lynner Family, who set up a water station on Beach Street.

Anyone interested in making donations to the fund should directly contact a Clark Chatterton Fund Committee member. The members are Ford, Deb Beal, Jack DeLorenzo, Deanna Mulligan, Phil Mahoney, Bob Durkin, Gary Vanderweil and Linda Bolster, the Fund's President. Donations can also be mailed to PO Box 652, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Raiders sink Skippers

Murphy to regain the lead for D-S.

Then tri-captain Jake Sharpless (3 goals) had the most spectacular goal of the contest, scoring off a loose ball while falling to the ground with just three seconds left in the period.

"That was a killer," said Curran. "Jeff Brown threw a great check to knock the ball free and we just plain missed the scoop up and then (Sharpless) just scooped it up and fired in one motion from a real awkward position. And it just happened to find the top corner of the net."

The Raiders had the crowd involved early, scoring the game's first three goals within 5:29. Of course, Cohasset had a handful of regular starters on the bench for disciplinary reasons.

Cohasset battled back and cut the lead to 5-3 at halftime. When junior attack Jake Previte scored with the man advantage with 1:47 left in the third, the Skippers had come all the way back to tie the score.

But then Carter (4 goals, 1 assist) took over and the D-S defense-- led by Toby Schreiner, Ben Fuller-Googins and Dan Linehan-- tightened. Goalie Jimmy Hitchings was big in net, stopping 11 shots for the win.

"(Previte) did a lot of dancing behind the net, but our defense did a nice job sliding," D-S coach Brian McLaughlin said.

Sophomore attackman Aidan Buick (three goals) was the one most responsible for keeping Skippers in the game, in Curran's mind.

"Aidan has been coming on strong down the stretch and he probably played the best game of his career (against D-S)," said the coach. "D-S did a nice job defensively of sliding with our guys, but Aidan kept things moving and still managed to create some very nice opportunities."

The other Cohasset goals were scored by seniors Mike Rasmussen and Ryan Tufts.

Another player singled out by the coach for his play was senior middie DeWayne Morris.

"The last game of DeWayne's high school career might well have been his best too," noted Curran. "He was huge for us coming back to help on D and in transitioning the ball to the offensive end. He's a player who really came to play."

The Skippers will lose nine players to graduation, chief among them Pilgrim Conference second team all-scholastics Conor Buick and Mike Devine, both captains and defensive stalwarts. P.C. Honorable Mentions Nick Murphy, the team's goalie, and Mark Davis also go the way of the caps and gowns, as do Morris, Steven Davis, Tufts, Rob Carpenter and Mike Rasmussen.

Despite these losses, coach Curran sounds confident his team will be right back in the postseason next spring.

Team leading scorer Jake Previte (80 points), another second team Pilgrim Conference selection, will be back for his senior year and Aidan Buick for his junior campaign, so the offense should be in good hands.

Brown earned a Pilgrim Conference Honorable Mention nod as a freshman this spring, and is expected to anchor the longstick line next season, along with senior-to-be Casey Coleman (who missed the entire playoffs due to mononucleosis).

The midfield is particularly hard hit by graduation, but juniors Sam Steele and Joe Durkin will be looked upon to take it to the next level. Also, fortunately, this was an area of strength in the underclass ranks.

South Shore League officials tipped their hats to Jen Buckley and Lindsey Kennedy, naming them both league all-stars.

Buckley has captained this squad since her sophomore year, a notable achievement. LaFountain used words like "motivated, competitive, and a clear team leader" to describe Buckley.

Now on to the male side of the track team.

Compared to the women's 2-3 overall record, the men fell to 0-5. With only six males participating on the team this year, though, it is not shocking to end up with such a record.

Assistant Coach Lisa Mullen summed up the situation in four words: "We need more people!"

Harvard-bound Erik Belz snagged a League All Star award for his 54.2 time in the 400.

Junior Adam Haracz attained an extremely low time of 2:12 minutes for the 800 event.

Freshmen Brent Daley also showed some pep in his step with time of 25.3 seconds in the 200, 11.6 seconds in the 100, and a length of 33-feet-6-inches in the triple jump.

CHS freshman Brent Daley (right) showed some pep in his step this season, running a best of 25.3 seconds in the 200, 11.6 seconds in the 100, and hitting 33-feet-6-inches in the triple jump.

In other field events, the Skippers displayed some great arm strength in senior Drew Musto and sophomore Mark Bouchard. Drew unleashed the discus 100'8". He also heaved the shot put just under 37 feet. Bouchard launched the javelin for an eye- popping 116 feet.

"A lot of the boys pulled through this year," stated assistant coach Lisa Mullen. "Though they didn't make it to the State's, they have shown tremendous improvement over the season."

Coach LaFountain agreed with Coach Mullen that the size of the track team for both men and women will present a challenge going forward. He cited the departure of four high performers - Frannie Noble, Jen Buckley, Erik Belz, and Drew Musto. Their graduation leaves the Skippers with only 14 potential returnees to the team track, a small pool of competitors in a challenging league.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse Camp

This one-week camp for boys and girls is designed to work on fundamental lacrosse skills, so that young players are prepared to deal with game situations next year. Each day will include drills designed to improve a player's stick-handling abilities, foot work and positioning, conditioning and stamina and knowledge of the game.

The camp is designed particularly to work with new and less-skilled players, helping them to decide in a relaxed setting whether lacrosse is a sport they want to play during the school year.

This camp is for players entering grade 3 through 6 in the fall. While the program is run by the Cohasset Recreation Department, it is open to players from other communities.

Chuck Jaffe, who runs the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program, heads the camp. Jaffe started Cohasset's youth program in 1996 and coached boys' teams for six years until starting the girls' program in 2002. He has been a player and coach in a variety of programs around the country, ranging from his days as a player at the University of Michigan, through being an all-star player and coach with his Tampa Bay Lacrosse Club, the Lehigh Valley Killian's Red Lacrosse Club and more. He still plays regularly with the Brine/Atlantic Sportswear Club in some of the elite master's tournaments around the world.

Jaffe will be assisted by Jennifer Palmer of the Cohasset girls' program and several former Cohasset High School players. The camp's player-coach ratio will be no more than 10-1. The camp is held the week of July 19-23, and starts at 7:30 a.m. on all days. The camp ends at 10 a.m. on all days but Friday, when it runs until 10:30. The camp is held rain or shine — in all conditions except lightning — and parents should be prepared to retrieve children who have been playing in rain or rolling in mud.

Players need full equipment. For girls, this means a stick, goggles and a mouth-guard. For boys, it means a helmet (including mouth-piece), gloves, arm and shoulder pads and a stick.

Parents: The camp's director believes strongly in having properly sized equipment. For boys, that means sticks may be cut to 36 inches in length. Girls' sticks are sized based on their body size. Counselors will cut sticks for those players who need it, so parents providing their children with a stick borrowed from a friend, neighbor or relative should use tape to label the stick with the words "Do not cut," and should inform counselors. Players should bring their own water, juice or sports drinks to each day's sessions. Registration is $85. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109 for more information or to register.

Catcher Terence O'Brien started the improbable six run rally by reaching on an error. That was followed by back-to-back singles by Jack O'Leary and Scott Carroll, the latter base knock plating O'Brien. This prompted Stoughton's coach to go to his ace, John Cremmins, who is reportedly being scouted by several Major League teams.

Looking to knock the fireballer a bit off balance out of the gate, Post 118 manager Scott Arnold called for a double steal on his first pitch, and it worked, as O'Leary slid in safely at third and Carroll trotted into second. It also seemed to have the desired effect on Cremmins, as Duggan laced the next pitch into left to plate the two runners and tie the game at 5-5.

It appeared that would be it when Ted Straughn followed with a fly to right, but that ball was misplayed and the inning continued. Cohasset High senior-to-be Tim Pilczak made Stoughton pay for the miscue, as he drilled a pitch down the right field line for a two-run triple, giving Post 118 its first lead of the game at 7-5.

Unfortunately, tough luck starter Joe Duggan was touched up for a couple of runs in the home half of the seventh. He bounced back strong in the eighth, though, to shut Stoughton down and preserve the 7-7 tie.

"Tim Pilczak was our player of the week," said Coach Duggan. "He came up with a couple of big hits in big situations. You can tell already he's a guy who's really going to help us this season. You can put him anywhere on the field and he'll do the job for you, and he's a tough-minded kind too."

Pilczak also led the charge back 24 hours earlier at home versus Quincy, as his three run homer over the fence in left center at Scituate High capped a five-run seventh inning. Unfortunately, that blast still left the Cohasset squad a run shy in the 8-7 setback.

"It looks like we've got a little bit of that cardiac kids element about us," noted Duggan. "Hopefully, we can start finding a way to get a little bit of this offense in the early part of the game too."

Last Friday's 5-3 loss to Morrisette under he lights at Quincy's beautiful Adams Field complex squandered a strong complete game effort from Straughn. The Cohasset High senior-to-be scattered six hits while striking out nine in his six innings of work, and was victimized by a couple of unearned runs.

Last Thursday's season opening loss at home to West Roxbury, 10-1, was just ugly, with only one of that game's runs charged to Duggan, who again went the distance. West Roxbury exploded for nine runs in one inning with the help of four Post 118 errors.

"We put that one behind us quickly," said Duggan. "And the good news is our defense has been much better since then. Really, everything else has been better too. Those wins will start coming soon."

Post 118 is scheduled to get back into action tomorrow night versus Braintree at Cohasset's Milliken Field, and will also host Dorchester at Milliken on Sunday. The first pitch in both games is 5:45 p.m..

The coaching staff has been juggling the lineup and batting order a bit in the early going, but Coach Duggan says they'll likely settle into a more settled lineup in the next week or two.

For now, the core lineup features Straughn at first, Mike Barba at second, Kevin Signorelli at third and Carroll at short, with O'Brien doing most of the catching.

Jeff Ciulla and Duggan (when he's not pitching), 2003 SHS grads who are back for one final season of Legion ball, are regulars in the outfield, as is O'Leary, a senior to be at Scituate High.

Pilczak has jumped all over the place and Jeff Radding (3-for-7 in the first two games) has played a couple of games at first base.

Duggan, Straughn and O'Leary are lead candidates to do much of the pitching, but there are a few other candidates to see mound time on the 18-player roster. The team was counting on SHS sophomore Mark Rennie, the ace of this spring's Patriot League champion Sailors team, to be a regular starter as well, but he tore ligaments in a finger on his pitching hand in the Sailors state tourney win over Plymouth South and will likely have to miss the entire summer season.

CYBSA All-Star Saturday

Just as the annual parade commences the CYBSA season, the annual All-Star Saturday Cookout signals that the season is soon to end.

On Saturday, the CYBSA hosted its annual cook out and All Star festivities. The boys and girls major league All Stars were selected by their coaches based on consistent strong performance all season long. Both boys and girls participated in Skills activities and an All Star Game.

For the girls, representing the East were Maddy Altholtz, Paige Collins, Christine Coner, Samantha Crough, Grace Curry, Rebecca Dickinson, Margeux Donze, Vanessa Durham, Isabelle Franklin, Eliza Kinneally, Jennifer Magruder and Johanna Regan. Representing the West were Melissa Campadelli, Courtney Culhane, Taryn Donahue, Erin Fontaine, Kelsea Hindley, Meredith Kelly, Tori Lehr, Sarah Libby, Lucy Noble and Dakota Routhier. All of the girls participated in a hitting contest. Each player was pitched to ten times and points were awarded for the length and type of hit. Samantha Crough secured third place, Tory Blair came in second place, and the hitting contest winner was Erin Fontaine. Erin's strength and placement of the hit balls allowed her to get the top score.

Representing the Boys Red All Star Team were Robby McCunney and Robert Jones From the Mets, Johnny Maher and Mike Monaco from the Athletics, Jordan Berry and Jodi Rosano from the Red Sox, John Kearney and Todd Emanuello from the Cardinals, Derek Youngman and Chris Walsh from the Pirates, Tyler Judge and Jake Wheelwright from the Dodgers and John Giuggio and Dean Driscoll from the Rangers. On the Blue All Star Team were Tom Condon and Gabe Seksay from the Mets, Brendan Doonan and Andy McKenna from the Athletics, Jack Carrier and Jeff Cavanaro from the Red Sox, Kevin O'Connell and Ben Campbell from the Cardinals, Tom Buckley and Austin Meyer from the Pirates, Chris Brown and Justin Yeager from the Dodgers and Eamon Davis and Graham Stevenson from the Rangers. The boys participated in three skills competitions; the Hitting & Home Run contest, Race around the bases, and the Golden Arm Throw.

In the Home Run contest, Brendan Doonan and Robby McCunney tied for first place with three home runs each. Jordan Berry registered two home runs, and John Kearney and Jake Wheelwright each had one. Ranger John Giuggio won the hitting contest, accumulating the most points based on ball placement and distance.

In the Race Around the Bases, the finalists based on the quickest time running from home plate around all of the bases and back to home were Jodi Rosano, Robby McCunney, Jeff Cavanaro, John Kearney and Dean Driscoll. Veteran John Kearney of the Cardinals had the quickest time and was the winner. Finally, the Golden Arm challenges the boys' throwing strength and accuracy. From center field each All-Star had three balls to throw to a plywood stand with a circle cut out of it that resided over home plate. Points were awarded based on hitting the board or throwing through the hole. Todd Emanuello of the Cards, with strength and accuracy secured the top place in this competition. Winners of both the boys and girls events were awarded gift certificates.

The boys All Star game began immediately after the skills competition. With Only red or blue baseball caps to distinguish the teams, the boys took the field. As in MLB, the boys wear the uniform of their own team. The Red team was the "home" team and took defensive positions first. Each team used different pitchers in each inning and players rotated throughout the field of play. Big plays for the Red Team came from John Giuggio (double and a base hit), doubles from Jodi Rosano and Derek Youngman (who drove in 2 RBI's) and home runs from John Kearney and Robby McCunney. In the field solid play came from Robert Jones at second who caught a line drive and from Chris Walsh playing at third who caught back to back line drives for consecutive outs. Johnny Maher struck out three Blue Team batters. For the Blue team, big hits came from Brendan Doonan (long double deep into right field), Justin Yeager, Gabe Seksay (2 RBI's) with two base hits, and Eamon Davis (double RBI). In the field, the Blue team executed a 1-2-5 double play with Davis on the mound who flipped the ball to Chris Brown catching to prevent the run from scoring, to Ben Campbell on third to get the advancing runner out. Austin Meyer also made back to back outs for the Blue team first catching a line drive at second and the fielding a one hopper and making the easy out at first. The Blue team came out on top in this All Star game.

Under the capable direction of National League (7-8 year olds) Commissioner, Peter Buckley, the coaching staff of the National League cooked burgers & dogs for players, parents and fans. Organizing grill duties, supply pickups and trash detail, the National League group did an excellent job upholding the tradition of the CYBSA cookout.

Youth laxers earn split in final regular season weekend

The Cohasset youth girls lacrosse teams split two games in preparation for the final weekend of the season, the lacrosse jamboree and Family Day.

The Blue and White 13-and-Under teams combined to play Duxbury's Green squad and jumped out to a 4-2 halftime lead on the strength of goals from Isabelle Franklin, Hannah Burgess, an interception-turned-putback from Paige Smith and a Lauren Blaze-to-Kaleigh Teague fast-break finish.

From there, however, Cohasset's offense took the rest of the day off, failing to score a second-half goal, missing on several quality chances. Meanwhile, Duxbury was able to capitalize on its scoring chances to take home a 6-4 come-from-behind win.

Sisters Thomson and Whitney Jaffe split the Cohasset goaltending duties, combining for five saves on the day.

The game marked the second time this season when Cohasset had combined its teams, both times resulting in losses.

Next, it was Cohasset's youngest girls, from grades three and four, playing in just their second game of the season against a battle-tested Duxbury squad. Cohasset's 11-and-Under girls played in a weekly clinic until the end of the season, and the Duxbury game turned into a second straight win.

Sarah Evans opened the scoring and Danielle Healy followed quickly thereafter with the game's second goal. After a Duxbury tally narrowed the gap, Hope Kissick scored and the contest stayed at 3-1 until the half.

Kissick answered a Duxbury score to open the second half, and Sally Long fed Nicole Hajjar to answer a second Duxbury goal. From there, the two teams traded opportunities, but nothing reached the net until Duxbury snuck one past Cohasset goalie Stephanie Brierly as time expired. Brierly finished the contest with four saves, and Cohasset came away with a 5-4 win.

Cohasset's 13-and-Under and 15-and-Under girls will play in the South Shore Lacrosse League's Girls Day Out Jamboree in Abington on Saturday, June 19, and the 13-and-Under and 11-and-Under girls will play in Blue-versus-White games at Milliken Field on Cohasset's Family Day on Sunday, June 20. The younger girls will play at 1 p.m., with the fifth and sixth graders to follow at 2:15 p.m.

surely experienced this year is certainly something to be proud of.

"It was a tough position to be in, but everyone came together and played phenomenal tennis this whole tournament," Meehan said.

Cohasset's two points on Tuesday came in first and third singles. Junior Elizabeth Stone won in typically dominating fashion, 6-0, 6-1. Sophomore Chelsea Grossman took a tough three-set match, 6-2, 1-6 and 6-1.

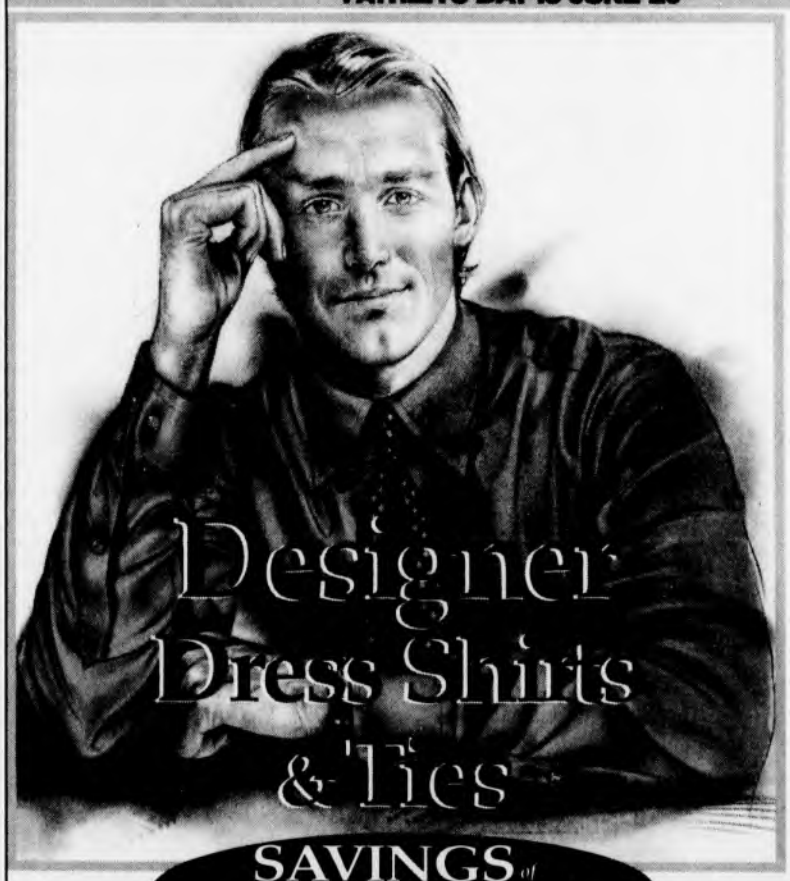
To get to Tuesday, Cohasset went up against Old Rochester on Friday at Hingham for the Div. 2 South sectional title. OR was coming off a semifinal win over Ursuline, the only team to beat Cohasset during the regular season. The blue and white were up to the challenge, however, and came away with a 4-1 victory.

Stone played a fairly difficult match against OR junior Cayla Clancy, whose only loss on the season was to Stone in the state individual tournament. After winning the first set, 6-0, the Cohasset star had to work hard to take the second set, 6-3. The match took about an hour and a half, one of the longest matches Stone played all year.

"Cayla is a great player," Meehan said. "Liz just had that added mental toughness."

Both doubles teams were victorious. Sullivan and Evans won rather easily, 6-2, 6-0. The first doubles team of Courtney Caron and Rachel Garber took their first set, 6-2. They made things interesting in the second set, but took that one as well, 7-5, for the straight-set victory.

Grossman won via forfeit after her opponent, Caslie Brodie, hurt her ankle in the very first game of the match.



As their coach said, Cohasset was playing their best tennis of the year when it mattered the most. It looked for a while as though they would be able to recapture their 2003 magic, but it was not meant to be.

"It's so hard to do that two years in a row," said assistant coach Kathy Prevett. "It was their turn this year."

Cohasset will need some reserves from this year to step up next year, as Caron, Sullivan, Evans and second singles Holly Graham have all graduated. If they build on the promise that they showed when they got their chance this year, Cohasset could very well be playing into mid-June in 2005.

49th Arts Festival kicks off Friday

In 1954, a group of South Shore artists pinned their artwork to clotheslines on Cohasset Common and in so doing planted the seeds for what was to become the South Shore Art Center. Since then the Art Center has grown into the region's largest center for the visual arts. As for the clothesline art show, it has become the most celebrated and well-attended annual arts festival on the South Shore.

The South Shore Art Center's 49th Arts Festival will take place June 18–20. With art and music for all generations, the South Shore Art Center Arts Festival offers something wonderful for everyone — from cutting-edge contemporary art to traditional handmade crafts. More than 90 juried artists will offer a wide variety of handmade items including jewelry, home and garden products, clothing, ceramics, toys, home décor, fine art and photography.

In addition to the individual booths housing these artists, the Art Center presents a Juried Art Exhibition, Members' Show and Young Artists' Exhibition in large exhibition tents. A children's art activity tent offers children and adults an opportunity to explore their creative side while plein air painters scattered throughout the grounds demonstrate their talents and capture the scene. Old-fashioned homemade strawberry shortcake will be served all weekend at the Second Congregational Church annual Strawberry Festival. The Festival Stage presents three days of toe-tapping musical entertainment ranging from singer-songwriters, bluegrass, jazz, to Sunday's annual Father's Day performance by the South Shore Bay Band.

Arts Festival hours are Friday, June 18, 2 -7 p.m.; Saturday, June 19, 10 a.m.-7 p.m. and Sunday, June 20, noon-6 p.m. South Shore Art Center Arts Festival is held outdoors, rain or shine. A free trolley shuttles visitors from near-by parking on Sohier Street. A $5.00 donation is requested at the entrance. The South Shore Art Center Arts Festival is sponsored in part through the generosity of Rockland Trust. For more information visit www.ssac.org or contact the Art Center: 781-383-2787

The Holways of Cohasset add their mark to the community sculpture at the South Shore Art Center's Festival, June 18-20.

Art center gallery artist Michael Moss captures the scene at the Festival on the Common.

Strawberry Festival shouldn't be missed

Be sure to save your appetite for what has become one of Cohasset's tastiest traditions! The 16th Annual Strawberry Festival will again be held in conjunction with the South Shore Art Center's Art's Festival on the Common, Friday June 18 through Sunday June 20.

While strawberry shortcakes are the mainstay of this popular event hosted by the Second Congregational Church, festival fare also includes grilled hamburgers, hot dogs, cold drinks and more.

The church's brick courtyard (next to Cohasset town hall) will be transformed into an outdoor café where Arts Festival visitors can rest and enjoy a snack, lunch or dinner brought to their table by friendly wait staff. (Indoor tables are also available.) And no Arts Festival visitor should leave the common without at least sampling the church's buttermilk biscuits heaped with fresh local strawberries and whipped cream.

"We hope to sell close to 2,500 shortcakes again this year," noted Debbie Anderson, one of the organizers of this fundraiser. "We've raised more than $100,000 at this event over the last 15 years, and proceeds have gone to support local charities including The Mary Martha Learning Center, Father Bill's Place, the Social Service League of Cohasset and Wellspring in Hull."

Shortcakes and other fresh baked goods, fruit cups and cold drinks will also be available "to go" for those who wish to enjoy their treats as they explore the more than 80 exhibits and attractions of the Arts Festival on the Common.

Strawberry Festival hours are Friday June 18 from 2 to 7 p.m., Saturday, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., and Sunday noon to 6 p.m. For information or to volunteer to help, call the Second Congregational Church at 383-0345.

Cohasset cooks up plans for Relay

Lily Smith fills a bag with sand at Alumni Field for the Luminaria Ceremony at last year's Relay For Life. This year's Luminaria Ceremony gets underway at 9 p.m., Friday.

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Volunteers and participants in this weekend's annual Relay for Life in Cohasset won't be lacking in food options to keep energized.

Participants can get might hungry as they walk or run in teams throughout the night to raise money for the American Cancer Society, but there will be plenty of food and drink on hand, thanks to local restaurants who have generously donated their culinary skills to the fifth annual Taste of the Relay.

This year, booths featuring area restaurants such as Atlantica, the Nautical Mile, Schooners, and the Red Parrot will be serving dinner to participants from 6:45 to 8 p.m. in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. All the restaurants have volunteered their time and their food to help benefit the cause.

Jeff Mushin is a volunteer who has coordinated the Taste of the Relay since its inception five years ago. He said the experience he has gained from many years in the food industry has enabled him to make many contacts, and he said he never has any trouble finding willing volunteers to participate.

In fact, through the combined efforts of Mushin and his business partner Steven Leaman, who together own and operate the Nautical Mile Restaurant in Humarock, Nautical Mile Market in Scituate Harbor, and Nautical Mile Catering company, Mushin will be providing many dishes of his own at the Taste of the Relay. Leaman said Tim Hunter, who is the chef at the Nautical Mile Restaurant, will be preparing blue marlin and mini crab cakes to hungry Relay participants.

Leaman said he and Mushin will be working "around the clock" for the next few days in preparation for the Taste. But lending their services on a volunteer basis is nothing new, as Leaman said Nautical Mile Catering provides food for many charity events. He said they have donated many gift certificates in the past to various organizations, and look forward to supporting the American Cancer Society this weekend.

Atlantica, located on Cohasset harbor, has been participating in the Taste of the Relay for the past four years. Katie Howard, director of marketing and sales, said this year she will be serving up New England clam chowder as well as roasted red pepper, eggplant, and goat cheese canapes in phyllo dough cups, prepared by chef Ritchie Blinn.

"We're definitely interested in community events," said Howard, adding Atlantica is always looking for ways to become involved with the community. However, she added that with an event such as the Relay for Life, the involvement comes not only from a business standpoint, but a personal and family standpoint, as many staff members at the Cohasset Harbor Resort have had family members pass away from cancer.

Mushin said last year the Taste alone generated roughly $3,000, 100 percent of which is donated to the American Cancer Society. "Everyone volunteers their time and their own food, and every restaurant works their own booth," he said. Because many people's lives have been affected by cancer, Mushin said by becoming involved with the Relay, it is one way people have been able to give back to the cause. "It makes you feel good," he said.

The eighth annual Relay For Life in Cohasset is set for June 18-19 at Cohasset High School. It is a community event which brings together teams of families, friends, churches, neighborhoods, and businesses all with the same goal of curing cancer in the new millennium. Residents from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Scituate and other surrounding towns are encouraged to attend. Last year, 13 events were held in towns across southeast Massachusetts raising close to $2.7 million for the American Cancer Society. The Taste of the Relay will be held Friday night from 6:45 to 8, and will be located in the Cohasset Middle High School Cafeteria.

New England images at Lifesaving Museum

The Hull Lifesaving Museum and the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities announce "The Camera's Coast" opening reception at the Lifesaving Museum will be June 19, at 7 p.m.

"The Camera's Coast" is a sampler of historic coastal New England images from the collections of SPNEA. The pioneering photographers represented from SPNEA include Nathaniel Stebbins, Henry G. Peabody, Baldwin Coolidge, and Emma Coleman. Subjects depicted include square-riggers, coasting schooners, fishing vessels and fishing ports, small boats and large yachts, summer hotels and fishermen's shacks, fishermen, seaweed gatherers, and salt-marsh haymakers.

Curated by noted author and maritime historian William H. Bunting, "The Camera's Coast" illustrates life along the New England coast in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. These were years of great social and economic change. Many traditional maritime occupations, from longshore fishing and shipbuilding to deep water voyaging were in decline. With mushrooming industrialism and growing numbers of people able to take vacations – and increasingly hot, crowded, and dirty cities from which to flee – coastal recreation boomed.

Cohasset is a No Place For Hate community, again

Cohasset was among 28 communities that the Anti-Defamation League New England Region (ADL) officially re-certified as No Place For Hate at a June 8 ceremony.

"We are proud to partner with Cohasset in committing to provide a safe and hospitable environment for people of all backgrounds," said ADL Regional Director Robert Leikind. "To protect and celebrate people of all faiths, races, ethnicities, and sexual orientations is the best way to ensure that our society truly is no place for hate."

In order to be certified No Place for Hate, a community must demonstrate a commitment to building understanding and respect for diversity by engaging residents in at least three new programs created to facilitate inter-group dialogue and inhibit tensions and hate crimes. Certified communities are awarded a billboard to post at the "entrance" to their municipality stating "This is a No Place for Hate community."

The Anti-Defamation League, founded in 1913, is the world's leading organization fighting anti-Semitism and all forms of hate through programs and services that counteract hatred, prejudice and bigotry.

Social Service League holds annual meeting

The Social Service League of Cohasset held its 92nd Annual Meeting on Tuesday, May 18, at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset. Amy Cutler, President; Gretchen Gold, Cohasset Consignment Shop Manager; and committee chairs, Mary McGoldrick, Holly Hill, and Diane Shipp, gave year-end reports. Successful fundraising efforts, strengthening of ties with the schools, and a lot of hard work made for a strong year with regard to program offerings.

After thanking the shop volunteers for their time and commitment, Ms. Gold was pleased to inform everyone that the shop was voted the Best Consignment Shop for 2004 in the Reader's Choice Award that is sponsored by The Community Newspaper Corporation.

In her President's report, Ms. Cutler spoke of the continuing evolution of the League and its changing mission. Of special note were her remarks concerning the Board's decision to expand the League's collaboration with the Wellspring Multi-Care Center in Hull. Instead of having its own social worker on staff to provide the individual counseling component of the League's offerings, a significant contribution will be made to Wellspring with the stipulation that it be used to provide direct services. The general public will be even better served as a result of the strengthened relationship between these two fine organizations. Mr. Vinny Harte, Wellspring's Executive Director, was on hand for the announcement.

New League staff members, Gretchen Gold, Shop Manager, Amber Nolan, Assistant Shop Manager, and Leslie Lemaire, Administrative Secretary, were formally introduced and warmly welcomed. Holly Hill, Chair of the Nominating Committee, introduced the new Board members. They are as follows: Tanna Carlson, Marita Carpenter, Elaine Smoot, Kathy Wuttke, and Catherine Cantillon. Directors retiring from the Board are: Amy Cutler, President; Kathy Anderson, Treasurer; and Susan Magruder, Secretary.

The following Board members will begin serving two-year terms as officers: Jane Reardon, President; Sandra Halverson, Vice-President; Kathy Prevett, Treasurer; Holly Hill, Assistant Treasurer; and Patty Smith, Secretary.

Hooray for Iceberg!

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

This is a confession. I am sick and tired of limp, designer greens: droopy mache, listless red leaf, and rusty romaine so long out of the ground that I have to throw away 80 percent of the outer leaves to find the crunchy heart. Once in a while I want a salad I can really sink my teeth into and that means iceberg. Let the dressing carry the flavor and the lettuce provide the crunch!

The first question was how to break up the iceberg. I enjoy wedges of romaine and thought that iceberg would fare well as wedges too. So, I removed the outer leaves, cut the head into quarters and removed the core. If you are using heads much larger you may want to cut it into sixths.

Now I had to figure out which big-flavor dressings would be best. Green Goddess was my first stop but my recipe was a bit on the thick side. It turned out the best way to thin it out was with water — buttermilk was too thick; milk or cream gave it a slightly off taste. The dressing is not only great with the iceberg but pairs nicely with tomatoes and cucumber. Of course, there are no strict rules here and one can add other vegetables as desired.

Blue cheese dressing also works well and the salad is even better when topped with crispy bacon. For color and flavor I also added sliced ripe tomatoes—probably Tasty Toms are the best choice this time of year. A classic steakhouse vinaigrette also works well here. Olive oil is tempered with vegetable or canola oil — beautiful fruity green olive oil is so out of place with a head of iceberg. It has too much body and their flavors don't really match. My vinegar of choice is white balsamic although wine vinegar works if the amount is slightly reduced. I omitted the mustard — it seemed too refined. Instead I used a pinch of sugar for a lowbrow touch. The vinaigrette is light and bright unlike the above creamy dressings. It works well with the lettuce, tomato and sliced shallots or Bermuda onion.

Iceberg wedges with green goddess dressing

Rather than serving four individual wedges, you may serve one large tossed salad. Simply break or cut the head of iceberg into bite-sized pieces and place all of the ingredients in a large salad bowl.

For the dressing:

1/2 cup mayonnaise (regular or low fat)
1/2 cup sour cream (regular or low fat)
1/4 cup flat parsley leaves
1 tablespoon tarragon or chervil leaves
1 small shallot, chopped (about 2 teaspoons)
1 large or two small anchovy fillets, chopped (optional)
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/4 cup finely chopped chives
1/8 teaspoon salt (reduced to a generous pinch if using the optional anchovy)
Freshly ground pepper to taste
2 to 3 tablespoons water

To finish the salad

1 head iceberg lettuce, about 1 1/2 pounds, outer leaves removed, quartered and cored.
1 cup cucumber, peeled and seeded as desired, halved lengthwise and cut into 1/2 inch slices
1 ripe tomato sliced, or 6 Tasty Toms quartered, or 12 cherry or grape tomatoes halved

1. For The Dressing: Place first seven ingredients (the mayonnaise through the lemon juice) in the bowl of a food processor fitted with the metal blade. Process until the parsley is very finely chopped and the mixture is pale green. Add the chives, salt and pepper and pulse once or twice to evenly incorporate the chives. Taste for seasoning and adjust with salt if necessary. Stir in enough water so that the dressing is thick but pourable. Refrigerate, covered, for an hour to allow flavors to meld. May be refrigerated overnight.

2. For The Salad: Place each iceberg wedge on a salad plate and top with about three tablespoons of the dressing. Garnish each plate with cucumber and tomato and serve immediately.

Serves 4 with a bit of dressing to spare

Iceberg wedges with blue cheese dressing

A creamy, not a dry, blue cheese is best here such as Stella or Maytag.

For the dressing

1/2 cup crumbled blue cheese
6 tablespoons buttermilk
2 tablespoons sour cream
1 tablespoons mayonnaise
2 teaspoons white wine vinegar
1/4 teaspoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt or to taste
Freshly ground black pepper

To finish the salad

1 head iceberg lettuce, about 1 1/2 pounds, outer leaves removed, quartered and cored
1 ripe tomato sliced, or 6 Tasty Toms quartered, or 12 cherry or grape tomatoes halved
6 slices bacon cut into 1/4 inch slices, fried until crisp and cooled

1. For The Dressing: Mash the blue cheese with a fork until the size of small- curd cottage cheese. Add the buttermilk and stir to mix. Add remaining ingredients and stir until well combined. Adjust seasonings and serve immediately or store covered and refrigerated for up to two weeks. Makes about 1 cup.

2. For The Salad: Place each iceberg wedge on a salad plate and top with about three tablespoons of the dressing. Garnish each plate with tomato and bacon and serve immediately.

Serves 4 with a bit of dressing to spare

Maintaining the June landscape

GREEN THUMBS UP

SUZANNE MAHLER

As glorious perennials thrive during this damp, cool spring, so do our weeds and misplaced wildflowers. Our devastating winter weather seems to have done little to deter these trespassers. Some are sneaky, their foliage similar in appearance to our desirable plants. Rather than pull out a plant we do not recognize, we allow the intruder to flourish only to discover that it soon begins to invade our beds relentlessly. Others are brazen right from the start, growing by leaps and bounds and crowding out the good guys. Whatever their nature, pull early and often as these unwanted guests compete for nutrients and moisture no matter what our growing season has to offer and the weeds always seems to succeed far better than the exotic plants we introduce.

Chemicals are not my preferred means of weed prevention but there are times when even the most dedicated gardener must resort to drastic measures, if only to break the cycle. Some weeds are easily extricated with a simple tug, but others are considerably more persistent with taproots or underground runners. For these intruders, the use of a herbicide may be required. The careful application of Roundup or Finale to the leaf surface of the unwanted guests may be the only solution, but keep in mind that these chemicals are non-selective and cannot recognize a weed from your most desirable, expensive acquisition. In tight spaces or in instances where the weed has infiltrated an established clump, apply the herbicide with a small sponge brush or paint brush. Multiple applications may be necessary for especially noxious, persistent weeds.

Once the gardens have been thoroughly weeded, the application of a weed preventative chemical like Preen, will minimize the emergence of weeds from seeds. These chemicals will not prevent those intruders that are produced on runners nor will they kill existing weeds. After application, it is best not to cultivate the soil, which will disrupt the chemical barrier that has been established enabling those persistent little trespassers to germinate. Often the best approach to a relatively weed-free landscape is to pull existing weeds in early spring, spray the more difficult invaders with a non-selective herbicide, apply fertilizer and a weed preventative and then apply a layer of mulch.

The use of summer mulches offers many benefits to all types of plantings. Perhaps their greatest value, in our times of frequent water bans, is that summer mulches help soils to retain moisture in addition to keeping soil temperatures more evenly regulated which results in less stress to our plants. Even a thin layer of shredded bark significantly reduces the emergence of weeds and creates an attractive, uniform background that sets plants off beautifully. Apply two inches of pine bark mulch over the root systems of trees and shrubs but avoid contact with the trunks and branches. Use only an inch or so around perennials. Care should be taken not to bury the crowns of perennials, as this can lead to rot or suffocation of the plants. As the mulch breaks down over the growing season, it provides valuable, moisture-retentive, organic matter to the soil surface that can be worked into the soil early next spring.

Throughout the growing season, I rarely venture into the yard without my trusty pruning shears. There always seems to be a tree, shrub, or perennial in need of a trim. As the beautiful blossoms of rhododendrons, lilacs, and spring-blooming trees and shrubs fade, major pruning of overgrown specimens can begin in earnest. The removal of up to one-third of the growth will not adversely harm these plants. In the case of suckering shrubs like forsythia or lilacs, old canes can be cut to the ground to stimulate new, vigorous shoots. When reducing the size of trees and shrubs, cut back to an existing side shoot to avoid leaving ugly stubs or thin out entire branches to the main trunk to allow light and air to reach the interior of densely growing plants. Similarly, the removal of spent flowers and flower stalks, a practice known as "deadheading", should be performed whenever possible. Deadheading gives the garden a neat, tidy appearance but perhaps more importantly, it enables plants to put their energy into making new growth, including the formation of stronger root systems and larger plants, and in many plants it encourages the development of new flowers. As I deadhead, I pinch back the stems of asters, chrysanthemums and other late-summer bloomers to promote compact, bushy plants that will produce more blooms.

As dusk approached, I stepped back to admire my efforts. One small bed was weeded, trimmed, edged, and cultivated. A huge mountain of weeds and clippings were ready for the compost heap. Only a few dozen gardens to go!

"MY BIG MOUTH COULD MAKE YOU A MILLIONAIRE!"

"I'm under deadline to create 1,000 new millionaires in record time! Will you be one of them?"

Robert G. Allen
Founder,
Robert Allen Institute

My name is Robert Allen and I love a good challenge! That's why, over the years, I've become well-known for my bold and daring challenges. And now I need to teach you how to become a millionaire!

Why do I need you to become a millionaire? The answer is simple. I've accepted a tremendous challenge to do so. I promised my publisher I'd create 1,000 millionaires in time to promote my new system on various top nationwide television and radio shows across the country. Therefore, I need you to make money, lots of money, and start making it right away.

Over the past 20 years, more than a million people have attended my Real Estate training seminars across the country and around the world. Countless numbers of them are now financially independent, and numerous millionaires attribute their wealth to my teachings.

So it's not a question of whether I will reach my goal — the only question is: Are you going to participate and become one of the millionaires I am going to create?

If you think you are, simply come to my upcoming, FREE workshop in your area to learn more about this exciting opportunity that just may change your life!

I Just Can't Pass Up A Challenge!

Here's a brief history of the challenges I've faced in becoming a best-selling author:

My first challenge, and the one that initially thrust me into the international spotlight, was when I said, "Send me to any city in America. Take away my wallet. Give me $100 for living expenses. In 72 hours, I'll buy an excellent piece of property, using none of my own money."

The LA Times called me on my challenge and sent me to San Francisco. Fifty-seven hours later, I had taken title to seven properties, generating assets worth $722,000!

A few years later, I did the St. Louis Challenge when I said, "Send me to any unemployment line in America. Let me select someone that is broke, out of work, and discouraged. In two days time, I'll teach him my strategies for Creating Wealth. In 90 days, he'll be back on his feet with $5,000 in the bank, never to set foot in an unemployment line again."

The couple I chose earned $5,000 cash in 90 days and over $100,000 in the next 12 months. It changed their lives forever.

Next, I accepted a challenge from Regis and Kathie Lee to come on their show and do the same thing.

From the audience, I selected a young woman named Pat who was a part-time school teacher. Under my guidance, she earned over $20,000 in the next 90 days — and we went back on the show to tell about it!

Now I'm working on my next challenge. Here's what I said, "Send me a group of people who want to become financially independent, and be able to do whatever they want for the rest of their lives. Let me teach them my strategies and advise them for the next 12 months. In record time, I will create 1,000 new millionaires!"

I need you to become a millionaire, and I need you to do it now! Are you ready to accept my challenge?

Read carefully to find out what could be in store for you:

– Danny Morel, Rancho Cucamonga, California

"We have accumulated enough properties using the Creating Wealth system to have a net worth of over $1 million."

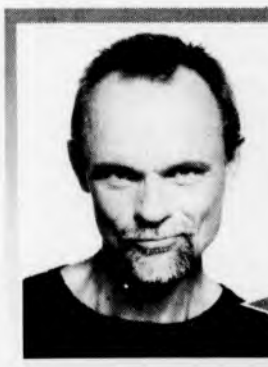
Hard Hats in the opera house

The South Shore will be represented in "The Hard Hat Concert — A Boston Vaudeville" with performances by Hanson native Brian Patton and his cabaret partner Mary Callanan of Weymouth.

BEST BET



On Monday, June 28, a host of local performers will take the stage at the newly renovated Boston Opera House for "The Hard Hat Concert — A Boston Vaudeville." The one-night-only performance —done in the format of the vaudeville shows for which the Opera House was originally built in 1928 — is being directed by Scott Edminston and produced by Broadway in Boston President Tony McLean. Broadway in Boston/Clear Channel Entertainment recently completed a $40 million restoration of the Opera House, which was originally known as the B.F. Keith Memorial Theatre, and will open "The Lion King" there on July 16.

Before that Tony Award-winning mega-musical comes to town, however, Boston area performers and representatives of local arts organizations will perform musical numbers, monologues, comedy sketches and dance pieces in an evening to be hosted by comic Jimmy Tingle. The concert — a benefit for StageSource, the alliance of theater artists and producers serving greater Boston and New England — will serve as a dress rehearsal for Broadway in Boston and the new staff of the Opera House to ensure that all new systems in the building are fully operational.

The South Shore will be represented by Hanson native Brian Patton and his cabaret partner Mary Callanan of Weymouth. Callanan will also be featured with her co-stars from the Boston company of "Menopause The Musical," including onetime Hingham resident Adrienne Cote. The company of last season's Gloucester Stage Company production of "Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris," including Cohasset's Caroline deLima, will be on hand. It is also expected that singers featured in Overture Productions highly acclaimed November 2003 staging of "Follies In Concert," including Callanan, both Caroline and Kate deLima and East Bridgewater resident Paula Markowicz under the musical direction of Michael Joseph of Weymouth, will perform selections from that show. Additional performances will be offered by members of The Boston Ballet, The Handel and Haydn Society, Sugan Stage Company, Theater Offensive, The Boston Gay Men's Chorus, and Wheelock Family Theatre.

("The Hard Hat Concert — A Boston Vaudeville" will be presented on June 28 at 8 p.m. at the Opera House, 539 Washington Street, Boston. Tickets are $10 and may be purchased at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, all Filene's Ticketmaster Outlets and Bostix locations.)

LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

THE FIRST STEP

If you suspect that you have a hearing loss or suffer from a balance problem, the first thing to do is schedule an appointment with an audiologist. This professional diagnoses, evaluates, and treats people with hearing loss and balance problems. He or she has received a master's or doctoral degree from an accredited university graduate program. The audiologist's role is to determine whether a person's problem is medical or non-medical in nature. He or she will refer patients to physicians when the hearing or balance problem requires medical or surgical evaluation or treatment. If not, the audiologist may present a variety of treatment options, including the use of a hearing instrument or other assistive device.

In addition to our extensive education and advanced equipment, FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER offers the most important benefit of all - long-term care with a future of unequalled service. We are here at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. to provide you with all necessary checkups, cleanings, and adjustments, along with fast, complete repairs, batteries, and hearing aid accessories. We'll also monitor your hearing loss, too. Call us at 781-337-1144 to arrange a free, painless hearing evaluation. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass. Health. We also have an office in Abington.

P.S. An audiologist may make a referral to a hearing instrument specialist or fit and dispense the hearing instrument him - or herself.

The Doobie Brothers will perform at the South Shore Music Circus Saturday, June 19.

BEST BET

Original member and guitarist and songwriter Pat Simmons will once again be on stage this Saturday when the group he helped form almost 35 years ago plays the South Shore Music Circus.

"We don't do quite as many dates as we did in the early days," explained Simmons by telephone last week from his home in Hawaii. "Otherwise, it is pretty much the same as it has always been. Our audiences are great, because we have a catalogue of tunes that people recognize and anticipate. It brings the energy level up very quickly at our shows."

Key to that catalogue are its many hits, including the Simmons composition "Black Water," from the group's fourth album What Were Once Vices Are Now Habits, which went to number one in 1975. That same year, illness forced the Doobies' original lead singer, Tom Johnston, to leave the group. In just five years, Johnston's vocals had helped the Doobies reach the Top 20 singles charts with "Listen to the Music" and "Long Train Running." Before the 1970s were over, Johnston's replacement, Steely Dan alumnus Michael McDonald, had led his new bandmates to even greater critical and commercial success with their second number one single, "What a Fool Believes," from the best-selling album Minute by Minute.

A singer and keyboardist, McDonald took the Doobies in a less guitar-driven, more rhythm-and-blues direction with hits like "Takin' it to the Streets." The rocking sound of the early Doobie Brothers, with Johnston on lead vocals, gave way to the jazz-influenced stylings of McDonald. McDonald would later leave for a solo career. Johnston returned to the group and continues to tour today along with Michael Hossack, Keith Knudsen, John McFee and Simmons. The Johnston and McDonald periods represent two distinct versions of the group, first founded in northern California and named for a slang term for marijuana. Having seen the virtue of both styles firsthand, Simmons doesn't take sides.

"I truly have no preference. I liked playing with both Tommy and Mike. In the Johnston era, we were definitely a blues, rock 'n' roll, guitar-based band. With Michael, there were more keyboards, fewer guitars and a much more R&B sound," recalls Simmons.

The past, however, won't be the only thing on display by the group long known for its musicianship. "On this tour, we're incorporating an acoustic set for the very first time. We'll do some songs acoustically that we wouldn't do otherwise, like 'Listen to the Music.' With an acoustic set, you don't have to worry about building momentum. It is all about the solos."

The willingness to try something new even after so many years of success is vintage Doobie Brothers.

"We never felt the pressure to make one hit after another. We just wanted to be respectable musicians."

(The Doobie Brothers will be at the South Shore Music Circus, Sohier Street, Cohasset, on Friday, June 18. For tickets and information, visit the box office or call 617/931-2787. For a complete SSMC schedule, visit www.musiccircus.com .

Route 3A renaissance is taking shape

KoKo Island site changing

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"Businesses are choosing to stay in Cohasset. It is great for tax revenues and adds greatly to the business climate."
— Peter Pratt, planning board

It is arguably the most traveled road in Cohasset and in certain sections, one of the most unattractive. And, now it may be in the process of an overhaul.

Many businesses looking to expand are finding the space they need on Route 3A — dubbed Chief Justice Cushing Way or King Street depending on where you are — and are sprucing up the area one building at a time.

"It's kind of like a 3A renaissance," said planning board member Peter Pratt, adding during the past few meetings, he and his board have seen a resurgence in the amount of businesses coming forward with plans to build or move into and renovate buildings along the main road.

When Hingham Lumber began operating out of Cohasset in March 2003, Pratt said he believes it ushered in a new revitalization for 3A. "Businesses are choosing to stay in Cohasset," said Pratt, adding when businesses stay, "It is great for tax revenues and adds greatly to the business climate."

During the last few meetings of the planning board, Pratt said some current and potential business owners have presented plans to renovate buildings on 3A. Businesses interested in potentially buying space on 3A have even come before the board at the most preliminary stages seeking its insight.

At its June 2 meeting, Pratt said the board had a discussion with potential new owners for KoKo Island and Hair Affair, who were represented by Cohasset attorney Richard Henderson. While Pratt said nothing was formally presented, the potential owners from Brookline said they are eager to work with the board to provide the kinds of businesses the town needs. (The Planning Board scheduled a public hearing on the KoKo Island site last night, June 23, after the Mariner went to press.).

The potential owners said they were interested in turning the current Hair Affair salon into a donut shop [reportedly a Dunkin' Donuts] and KoKo island into a family-style restau-

Latin could be dead language at CMHS

Trouble finding the right teacher

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Latin classes have been put on hold at Cohasset Middle High School for at least fall semester of next year, and may not be offered at all if a suitable candidate for a vacant Latin teaching position cannot be found.

Middle-high school principal Michael Jones said the current combined Latin and Spanish teacher is leaving. The school is looking for someone who will be able to teach either Latin and Spanish or possibly Latin and French, but at this point, he has not seen a candidate who matches the criteria Cohasset is looking for.

Jones said the opening for a combined Latin and Spanish teacher has been advertised in a number of different places, and "we're not getting the person we want." He said the schools have the option to continue interviewing over the summer, because a lot can happen in terms of candidates coming forward. But he said, "the likelihood isn't great," that the perfect person will present themselves, especially as the hiring season continues to press on. "Latin has had a resurgence, but it's still not as popular a major in college," said Jones.

"Some (of the candidates) have extensive experience," in Latin, said Jones, but the person Cohasset hires will need to be able to double up and teach another language, "because we have needs in both Spanish and French." He said one of the social studies teachers is currently teaching French classes, which is taking him away from teaching social studies.

In the interest of time, Jones said the school could hire someone who can teach Spanish and French, which would relieve the Festival draws crowd of about 8,000

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For the 49th year in a row, Cohasset Common was transformed once again into a lively celebration under the white tents, during the South Shore Art Center's annual Arts Festival on the Common last weekend.

The traditional kick-off to summer, the festival ran from Friday afternoon until Sunday evening and featured art exhibits, craft exhibitors, musical entertainment, and fun for the whole family.

With an estimate of more than 8,000 visitors over the three days, Event Coordinator Diane Kennedy was thrilled with the turnout. "It was packed the entire weekend," she said. While the majority of visitors came to the festival Saturday and Sunday, she said there were a good number of Cohasset residents who came Friday afternoon after school and into the evening.

More than 80 craft exhibitors displayed various items on the Common, including brass door knockers, homemade soaps,

Relay For Life raises $136K

Maddie Dillon, 9, likes suncatchers in the window, the colors of the rainbow, horses and doing flips in gymnastics. She also has a big smile and isn't shy about dancing the Macarena and doing the Limbo with a little encouragement from a DJ and a lot of friends.

From all appearances she is just like any other third-grader. Even with a bandana on her head – it wasn't immediately clear she was suffering from cancer at the annual Relay for Life this past weekend in Cohasset. That's because her school friends, teachers and even Betsy Connolly, special education and guidance chairperson at Foster School in Hingham, wore matching rainbow-colored bandanas, too. The members of Maddie's team, "The Flipping Rainbow Horses" — and 36 other teams – were in fact, all

Correction is noted

Last week, the Mariner incorrectly reported the town has signed a purchase and sale agreement with Northland Residential, the company the town is working with to build on the Cook estate property. The town has actually signed a Letter of Intent, which enabled Northland to begin due diligence on the property, and will sign the Land Disposition Agreement, which is the same as a Purchase and Sale agreement, after due diligence on the property is complete. The Mariner regrets the error.

Town requests Patrolman list

The town is in the process of requesting a Civil Service Patrolman List to replace Sgt. David Pomarico who retired from the Cohasset Police Department, effective June 11. Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said the town requested the patrolman's list because a current patrolman from the department will be asked to step up to take on the open sergeant's position.

Hussey attends executive session

Police Chief James Hussey, whose first official day was Monday, participated in an executive session meeting with the Board of Selectmen Tuesday, to discuss "litigation and contract negotiations." Hussey was sworn in on June 17 and signed his contract the same day. According to Town Manager Michael Buckley, Hussey's salary will be $101,800 and he will be given a phone, beeper and has been given the keys to former Chief Jackson's Crown Victoria, which is the standard chief's car in Cohasset.

Selectmen hold MBTA ombudsman names

The Board of Selectmen will need to speak with Town Counsel before it will release the names of the roughly 15 candidates, who applied for the Cohasset-Greenbush ombudsman position. Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said it has been the town's practice to keep names of applicants confidential, and said that practice should continue. Selectman Ronnie McMorris said since the applications were submitted two years ago, confidentiality shouldn't be as much of an issue, and the board agreed to seek a legal opinion on the matter.

At the June 15 meeting of the Board of Selectmen, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer mentioned many Cohasset residents had applied for the position, and he said on the last day applications were being accepted, the Waterfield Design Group made its interest known and was ultimately hired to perform the job.

Open Meeting Law violation addressed

The Board of Selectmen may have violated the Open Meeting Law last Wednesday when three of its five members attended a meeting, which was not posted, to discuss the James Brook Flood Project. Members Ronnie McMorris, Ralph Dormitzer, and Fred Koed attended, as did Town Manager Michael Buckley, Building Inspector Robert Egan, and representatives from the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the Waterfield Design Group.

McMorris addressed the issue Tuesday and the board's scheduled meeting, and said the meeting was open to the public, and in fact some members of the public did walk in and attend. However, she added that meetings like last Wednesday's "Will be posted in the future," and the board was not trying to conduct business behind closed doors.

The Open Meeting Law applies to "every meeting of a quorum of a governmental body if any public business over which the governmental body has jurisdiction is discussed or considered." Buckley said the incident was a "rookie mistake," and that he thought only two selectmen were going to attend the meeting.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said governmental meetings involving a quorum of any board must be posted 48 hours in advance. She said Sundays are considered a legal holiday, but Saturdays are not, which means a meeting scheduled for Monday must be posted by Friday.

Town Manager Act board meets tonight

There will be a meeting of the Town Manager Act review committee Thursday June 24 at 7:30 p.m. in the Selectmen's office. All are invited to attend.

Retiring Malvey gets high marks

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After six years at the helm of the Cohasset School Department, Supt. Edward Malvey will trade his suit jackets for golf shirts for the time being as he enters temporary retirement.

Malvey, who has led the schools through major construction projects and the re-accreditation of Cohasset High School, announced his intention to retire in October, and said he has plans to re-connect with family and spend time with his only grandson who is 10 months old and lives in Georgia. A retirement party was held for Malvey on Friday, June 18 at the Cohasset Harbor Inn.

"It is an absolute thrill for me to have the opportunity to end my Massachusetts service in Cohasset," Malvey said, adding he intends on taking some quiet time to re-group, but plans to look for employment again in the future, perhaps at the college level, or in a position similar to the one he has held in Cohasset.

"I am ready to serve and hope things will work out professionally for me as well," he said.

When he first began his career in education, Malvey said he had looked at coming to Cohasset, but the opportunity never panned out. Malvey has been working in education since 1970, and spent the first 18 years of his career as a classroom teacher and assistant principal. He served as an assistant superintendent for 10 years, including Mansfield from 1989-1992, before becoming superintendent of schools in Griswold, Conn. Malvey came to Cohasset in the fall of 1998, after former superintendent Stephen Hart retired. However, all these years later, Malvey said he now finds himself ending his Massachusetts career in "one of the top districts in the state."

"Cohasset has an outstanding reputation, not only because of its beautiful views, but because of its first-rate schools," he said.

School Committee member Rick Flynn wished Malvey the best, and said how much he has enjoyed working with Malvey over the past four years. During the time Flynn was chairman, he said he really appreciated Malvey's leadership.

"I enjoyed getting to know him on a weekly, and sometimes daily basis," joked Flynn, who spent many hours with Malvey during budget season last fall.

Flynn also mentioned the departure of principal Michael Jones, who is moving on to take over as principal at Lexington High School. He recalled the first meeting he ever had with Jones, during which time Jones gave a 15-minute synopsis of his thoughts on education. "I had goose bumps on the back of my neck by the time he fished," Flynn said. He added both Jones and Malvey have left the district in a better position than when they started.

School Committee member Chartis Tebbetts said she joined the committee at about the same time as Flynn, and has seen Malvey lead the schools in many ways. She said as a board member, she always felt well prepared to make decisions regarding school policy, adding "I thank Ted for that."

Tebbetts said regardless of where Malvey decides to go in the future, she is sure he will bring the same skills and leadership he brought to Cohasset. She encouraged him not to sit idle for too long, and to "bring those talents to areas of the country where they are needed."

Tebbetts also thanked Jones for his years of service, and said she was so glad to have had a principal who focused on education, but not just in the realm of the three "Rs." She said Jones promoted music and the arts, which are important components for giving students a broad-based education. "You made it important for kids to be their best selves."

Member Adrienne MacCarthy said she worked for six years under Malvey's direction on the school building and facilities committee, prior to becoming a member of the school committee, and said with his guidance, the construction on the schools was able to finish on time and on budget. She wished Malvey well and told him to enjoy his grandson. "That's the best time of life — so I hear," she joked.

Member Jamie Williams also wished Malvey well, adding she applauds the fact that he is leaving the position with everyone well prepared to take over after his departure.

School Committee Chairman Rick Shea had a more unique approach to saying his goodbyes. In true David Letterman fashion, he compiled a list of "The top 10 things Ted won't miss in his retirement."

Justifying the school budget at Town Meeting

9. Explaining the budget to selectmen three weeks in a row.

8. Defending the budget before the advisory board.

7.Negotiating the budget with the town manager and town accountant.

6. Telling the school building and facilities committee there is no money left in the budget for the utilities.

5. Having to cut back the budgets submitted by the three principals.

4. Listening to the school committee discuss the budget at 10 p.m.

3. Getting a call at 2 a.m. to be told the boiler room pipes burst.

2. Spending the evening at the Days Inn in Hyannis to attend a superintendent's conference.

1. Setting the alarm for 4 a.m. to wake up in time to make the call on snow days.

Shea then presented Malvey with a proclamation praising his years of service in the Cohasset School system. "Thanks again for a terrific job, and best wishes to both you, and Mike (Jones)," Shea said.

Malvey said he wishes incoming Supt. Denise Walsh the best of luck, adding, "I think the committee has made a wise choice with their new superintendent." He said the amount of time Walsh has spent getting acquainted with her new school district, while still being employed full-time with her current district is "unprecedented," and that she pays a visit to Cohasset almost every week.

While Malvey said he has mixed emotions about leaving and sometimes wishes he could stay longer, the time has come for him to begin the next chapter in his life, and he thanked everyone in the town of Cohasset, from the school employees, to the students, to their families, for making his time in Cohasset so enjoyable. "It's been a great six years," he said.

Taking lifesaving to heart

Fire Dept. seeks new defibrillators

"Our goal is to meet the requirements of a heart-safe community."
— Capt. Robert Silvia

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

If the Cohasset Fire Department has its way, life-saving Automated External Defibrillators, which can be used to shock a patient that has gone into cardiac arrest, will be available at many of the public buildings where people congregate in the near future.

Members of the department, including Capt. Robert Silvia, paramedic John Dockray, and Advanced Life Support coordinator Hugh Devlin, came before the Board of Selectmen for preliminary approval to oversee an initiative that would make AEDs available for public use, beginning with the schools and hopefully branching out to include other public buildings such as the library and Town Hall.

"Our goal is to meet the requirements of a heart-safe community," said Silvia, which means having equipment on hand that even someone with minimal training can use to save the life of someone who has gone into cardiac arrest. Silvia said studies have shown if a person can be defibrillated within one to two minutes of going into sudden cardiac arrest, there is an 80 percent chance of survival. However, that survival rate decreases with every passing minute, and with a delay of 10 minutes, there is a less than 5 percent chance the person will be able to pull through. "The quicker you can get this to them, the better chance of survival," Silvia said.

When any town begins an AEP program, Silvia said there needs to be medical direction from a hospital or physician who is willing to look at the AED reports. He added the fire department would like to work with South Shore Hospital on the initiative, as it already has guidelines in place for bringing AEDs into the schools. However, the hospital has nothing drafted to regulate bringing AEDs into public buildings, which the department wants. Silvia said he hopes to be able to work with the hospital to allow that initiative to begin.

"We would be the perfect agency to oversee this. We know how to use them, we know the hospital, and if they're used, we're going to get called," Silvia said. He added with the train coming to town and possible delays in response time for the department when the gates are down, having residents on hand that have been trained to use an AED will greatly improve the survival rate for someone who has gone into cardiac arrest.

If the department does oversee the installation of AEDs around town, it will be responsible for inspections to make sure the equipment is working properly, and will provide training on how to use the device. "It serves no purpose if it hangs there," Silvia said. He added that AEDs are a new trend in life-saving technology and the American Heart Association has begun giving CPR classes which includes AED training. He said AEDs can be found everywhere from Disney World to American Airlines flights, and they will be installed around town whether the department has been a part of the process or not.

Devlin said from his experience working as a paramedic for the past nine years both in Cohasset and in Quincy, "I think its an incredible piece of equipment." He said AEDs are very user-friendly and they can speak and tell the person using it what to do. He brought an AED to show to the board, and said its battery will run for five years, or 300 shocks, and comes with two adult pads and one pediatric pad. He said the unit is also color coded to help the user.

Russ Bonetti, 20 Parker Ave, said he works for a company that sells AEDs and agreed that they are very easy to use. "If it doesn't tell you to shock and you panic and do it anyway, it won't let you," he said. He added that the machine will also alert the user if there is a pulse, so they can begin CPR. Bonetti said Logan Airport has AEDs in its terminals, and "They're absolute life savers. They're worth every nickel."

Silvia said his intention is to run the program at no cost to the town. He said the board of health has some grant money it is willing to spend on an AED and there are some available funds from a Homeland Security Grant the department could use to get the initiative started. He said the town of Yarmouth on Cape Cod has roughly 17,000 people and it has been able to install 45 units, and all the training costs and purchase of equipment has been done through private donations. He said Yarmouth held a golf tournament fund raiser recently, and raised $9,000 for the purchase of AEDs, and he hopes Cohasset will be able to raise funds in similar ways.

Silvia said saving someone from a sudden cardiac arrest gives real purpose to what the members of the fire department do, and the AEDs will help ensure more people survive after going into cardiac arrest. Being able to save someone's life who otherwise might not have "lived to see his kids grown," is one of the best experiences to have.

The department was given approval to move forward with the initiative and will speak to the hospital and come back before the board with a more detailed proposal soon.

Route 3A renaissance is taking shape in Cohasset rant. While the board does not have the jurisdiction to specify the kind of restaurant it would need to have on the site, Pratt said the board stressed it would like to see a family style restaurant rather than a sports bar that would make a profit through the sale of alcohol.

Another project in the works is the potential construction of three office buildings behind Sunrise Assisted Living. Cohasset resident Rob Schwandt presented the planning board with a preliminary concept plan, outlining what could be considered for the 12.5 acres of land which stretches behind Sunrise on 3A and the medical building off Crocker Lane.

"We get inquiries about general office space every four to six weeks," Schwandt said, adding many businesses say they are looking for a small amount of office space that can be used to compliment their main headquarters. Schwandt said he has already spoken with a couple of local businesses that might be interested in occupying the new office space once completed, and while nothing has been finalized just yet, he is currently looking at the possibility of building three office buildings on roughly four or five of the 12.5 available acres.

Schwandt has already been given approval to raze the small white Cape-style house that housed Sweet Surprises candy shop at the corner of 3A and Crocker Lane and build a new brick office building.

Another local business looking to branch out is King Jewelers. After 43 years of business in Cohasset, owners are looking to move from their current location in Cohasset Plaza, and have been given approval with conditions by the planning board to raze and rebuild further south at 812 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, which currently houses both Peridot and Dwyer and Mullin Real Estate. Valerie King said she and her family wanted to keep the business in town because "We've been here forever. This is where our customers come from and we love it here," she said.

Atlantic Bagel at 166 King St. is planning to move into the former Cards and Shards building in the village the end of August. Roger Hill who owns the Good Sport building that includes Atlantic Bagel said he hasn't even advertised and has had at least half a dozen inquiries. He couldn't comment on a potential tenant saying "plans are under wraps for the time being."

Pratt sees the changes as a boon to the town. "We're potentially looking at several millions of dollars (in tax revenue) in pretty much the near term," he said.

Changes at Cohasset Plaza

With King Jewelers' plans to move into a new building to be constructed farther south on Rte. 3A; the Shoe Market heading to Hingham's Derby Street Shoppes and the Dunkin' Donut potentially moving to the Hair Affair – Cohasset Plaza could have a different mix of retailers in the months ahead.

Plaza owner Donald Staszko said change is not happening overnight. He explained the Shoe Market will remain in the plaza until the end of the year; Dunkin' Donuts has a 1-1/2 years to go and King Jewelers, two years.

He's not concerned about attracting new tenants.

"We get about 10 calls a week from people who want space," Staszko said.

Meanwhile plans to expand Super Stop & Shop by 20,000 feet and construct a new 30,000 square foot retail building at the back of the plaza are moving forward, Staszko said. The new retail building will either be occupied by one major tenant or subdivided into two 15,000 or three 10,000 square-foot spaces, he said.

Staszko said while there has been a lot of interest in the former South Shore Chevy Geo dealership site which he also owns and is located on Rte. 3A near the Scituate line – nothing has come to fruition. The "pet hotel" proposed for part of the building plans to appeal the Zoning Board of Appeals' decision to deny a special permit because it didn't meet the setbacks required for dog kennels.

New Deer Hill report cards to make the grade next year

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Report cards will look different for students at Deer Hill this fall, as revisions intended to better communicate student progress to parents have been implemented as part of the Deer Hill school improvement plan for the 2004-2005 school year.

Where report cards used to have more limited categories under subject areas, with letter grades and sub-topic remarks such as outstanding, satisfactory, and needs improvement — the new report cards will use numbers one through four to grade academics, and personal and social development will be graded as consistently, usually, sometimes, or rarely.

Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley said the changes were made in part because many parents "not only want to know how their children are doing in math or reading, but how they're behaving in art or computer class." With the former report card, grading was split into three categories for many subjects, grading students only on effort, conduct, and homework. The new report card covers all subject areas, and includes more sub-categories where children can be graded on their understanding of subject matter on various levels.

Gauley said while the new report cards are more in-depth, it will not necessarily mean more work for the teachers who fill them out. He said the new format can be completed on the computer, and by using Excel, the report cards can be linked directly to a grade book program the teachers can use. With a networked system, another teacher could call up the same report card for any given student, and add their comments, which makes the process much easier. Gauley said the school is working on implementing the networking technology.

Deer Hill compiles a new improvement plan annually, and as part of the Deer Hill School Improvement Plan for the 2003-2004 school year, a survey was sent out to parents of all Deer Hill students. From that survey, Gauley said responses indicated many parents wanted to see more communication relating to student progress. While 28 percent "strongly agreed" and 44 percent "agreed" with the statement that there is good communication between the home and school regarding progress, 12 percent said "usually" and 14 percent said they "disagreed." In light of those answers, Gauley said this year, the school decided changing the report cards would be one way to address the issue.

A report card committee, made up of parents and school staff, was charged with making potential changes to the report cards, and Gauley brought the new cards before the school committee for feedback.

School committee member Adrienne MacCarthy asked Gauley why the report card committee chose to move away from letter grades. She said when parents see a letter grade, it is easy to tell how their child did and whether certain subjects need improvement. However, Gauley said at the elementary level, and especially since Deer Hill will take on the younger third-grade students next year, letter grades are not tied to a percentage, which makes it a more difficult system to rely on. He said while many students are in fact average for their age group, giving a young child a "C," which is average, doesn't adequately represent the work that has been done.

School committee vice chairman Chartis Tebbetts said the detail the report cards go into, "cries out for a conference," and said parents need to be aware that they have the option to meet with their child's teachers not only during the allotted time set aside for parent and teacher conferences, but that every teacher is required by contract to have time set aside daily to meet with parents. She said she hopes the new report cards will help initiate more verbal communication between school and home.

School committee member Rick Flynn said from comparing the two report cards, he thinks "you're going to know a lot more about what your kid did," while at school, because of the detail the report card goes into, and said it is a much better model than what the school had before.

School committee chairman Rick Shea said the only concern he has with the technology aspect, is the ease with which teachers could fill out the comment section of the report cards, which may cause many students to get cookie-cutter comments such as "pleasure to have in class." Gauley said there are roughly 100 prepared comments teachers can plug into the report cards, but if nothing fits with the individual student, the teacher always has the option of writing a comment in by hand.

While the report cards are roughly 90 percent complete, Gauley said he would be willing to look at making some revisions. MacCarthy said she would like to see a specific category for effort for each subject, because while the categories on the current report card are very specific, a student could be receiving high marks, but is not necessarily doing their best work. If a students is getting a two for academic assessment — which means a student is approaching the expected standards — but is consistent in their effort, she said that would indicate to her the students are trying their best. As a parent, effort is of highest importance to her, and she would like to make sure overall effort is conveyed in the report cards.

Latin could be dead language at CMHS

social studies teacher. Latin, which has been suspended for the first semester, could either be rescheduled for second semester if a teacher is found, or cancelled for the entire year. However, dropping Latin will have an effect on the schedules of the 50 students who take Latin I, II, and III.

Jones said one possibility would be to continue looking for a combined Latin and Spanish teacher, but also begin interviewing candidates for a combined Spanish and French position. The money is already in the budget to cover the salary of the language teacher, who is leaving.

In the event only a Spanish and French teacher can be found, Jones suggested possibly looking for a retiree to teach Latin as a half-time position. However, that would require making a financial commitment, and a part-time language teaching position could cost the schools up to $20,000. Jones said the school would be more likely to find a full-time Spanish and French teacher than a Latin teacher with a second language.

School committee member Rick Flynn said "rather than trying to fit a square peg into a round hole," the school should continue looking for the person who is a correct fit for the position even if that means finding a Spanish and French teacher and going back later to solve the Latin problem.

The school committee gave the go-ahead for Jones to begin interviewing candidates for the French and Spanish position. If a combined Latin and Spanish teacher can be found, that would be the first preference, but in either case, the school needs to hire a language teacher for this fall.

Time change for Cohasset schools

The school committee voted to implement suggested changes to next year's school start times and will be changing start times as follows:

	Current start time	New start time	Current end time	New end time
CMHS	7:20 a.m.	7:50 a.m.	2:06 p.m.	2:36 p.m.
Deer Hill	8:35 a.m.	8:10 a.m.	2:35 p.m.	2:10 p.m.
Osgood	9:05 a.m.	9:05 a.m.	3:05 p.m.	3:05 p.m.

Busing at the middle-high school will have students in grades six-12 riding on buses together.

School lunches serve up a profit

Students like healthy options

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In an effort to help balance the books, Cohasset schools implemented a new in-house food service program last fall. That, combined with an increase in the cost of school lunches has proved to be a wise choice, as the final tally on cafeteria sales shows the schools have made a profit for the first time in years.

Food Services Director Robert Levy said there has been an overwhelmingly positive turn in sales compared to figures compiled at the end of last year, and the additional revenue is making things a little easier on the school budget "It's thousands of dollars," said Levy, adding sales are up roughly 14 percent overall since the end of May last year. He said this will be the first year in a long time there hasn't been an increase in lunch prices at the schools.

For 15 years, Cohasset relied on Chartwells Educational Dining Services, a company that provides food service to more than 500 school districts in the United States, serving more than 1.5 million meals daily. However, when the Chartwells contract expired at the end of school last year, Supt. Edward Malvey had to make the decision to bring food services in-house and try to increase profits. Levy, who had previously worked for Chartwells, stayed on as a private employee for the schools, and has transformed the way students eat in the cafeteria, which may have had an effect on sales.

At the request of the board of health, the schools began converting the lunch menu to offer healthier options.

At the request of the board of health, the schools began converting the lunch menu to offer healthier options. Levy spearheaded the effort including switching to frozen yogurt and ice pops instead of ice cream, offering only water and 100 percent juice and overhauling snacks in vending machines. That was followed by offering more deli-style sandwiches with lean meats and vegetables, and less food high in fat and grease, such as burgers and fries.

While Levy said the schools have eliminated a tremendous amount of snacks from the cafeteria, it hasn't taken away from sales. "We've picked up the salary of the van driver," who delivers the food to Osgood and Deer Hill from the high school. All food is prepared at the middle-high school and shipped down to the other schools, and that driver now handles the mail as well. The money to cover the van driver used to come out of the custodial budget, but "We've assumed that money," Levy said. Where before, the cafeteria program hoped to break even, it is now able to help pick up some of the costs associated with wages and vacation time for food services employees.

Last year, the schools began charging an additional 10 cents for each lunch purchased, bringing elementary school lunches up to $2.25 and high school lunches up to $2.50. Teacher lunches were $3.50. Levy said with the sixth-grade class coming up to the middle-high school next year, he expects sales will continue to increase, and he would not suggest increasing the cost of meals this year.

However, there are still some kinks to work out, as this was the first year food services have been handled in-house. Levy said now that it is the end of the year, the schools are left with roughly $4,000 worth of inventory, which wasn't expected. He said the surplus in food is partially due to the fact that students have been going on field trips and haven't been in the buildings to buy their lunches. "The cafeteria workers should know when people are going to be out," Levy said, adding he will be working on that in the future.

Teachers could give nurses a hand

Medication policy could be changed

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When a child is suffering from a severe allergic reaction, it is essential they receive medication as quickly as possible. During the school day, it is the sole responsibility of the school nurse to administer the medication to the student, but school officials say that policy could soon change.

Cohasset schools have applied with the Department of Public Health to allow trained school personnel to administer medication in the absence of the school nurse, provided they have been given the proper training. Applications which would allow specific members of school personnel to administer prescription medications on field trips and short school trips, as well as Epinephrine during life-threatening situations have both been filed.

Deer Hill nurse Karen Murphy, who is spearheading the effort, said she is frequently asked to accompany classes on field trips, so she will be available to administer medication should anything happen on the trip. However, she said every time she leaves during the school day, a substitute nurse has to be found, which is not an easy task. By having teachers chaperone the field trips who have been taught to administer the medication, Murphy will be able to stay at school, a substitute will not need to be called, and the student will be well taken care of if there is an emergency.

"We have 43 asthmatics and 12 who need EpiPens," said Murphy, adding many children are allergic to peanuts or bee stings. "Those two need delegation," she said, adding to date, an Epi-Pen has never been administered for an allergic reaction to peanuts, which is most likely a result of the strong education children receive at the lower grade levels on peanut allergies.

Murphy brought the matter before the school committee last week and said she would be responsible for training teachers in the proper way to administer medication, and will most likely begin training teachers at the middle-high school first. She said it is especially important to have teachers trained at the middle-high school because of its size. Committee members discussed possibly changing the location of available medicine to make it easier for teachers to locate the prescriptions during an emergency. If the school nurse is not administering the medication, it makes sense to have EpiPens in a central location.

"The teachers are willing to do it," said Murphy, adding the worst thing in an emergency situation is not knowing what to do. Murphy said because she will be leading the training sessions, she feels comfortable delegating the responsibility.

Teachers will only be allowed to delegate medication to students whose parents have given authorization. Murphy said she is currently discussing the changes with parents and expects everything will be ironed out over the summer.

SCHOOL'S OUT

Hooray, school is out for all! I am so happy although will be even happier when the temperatures reflect the season! Congratulations to everyone young and old on graduations, finishing up a grade or turning that magic number that makes you old enough to look forward to school in September. Enjoy the summer as we know how fast it goes, use lots of sunscreen and bug spray(is it me or are the mosquitoes growing in numbers and size?) and stay safe in whatever fun activities you are doing.

NEXT WEEK'S NEWS

All news and information for next weeks column should be sent directly to Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com as I will be one a one week break. After that, you can resume sending the information to me at aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com with photos going to Mary. Have a great week and Happy Fourth of July in advance!

RELAY FOR LIFE REFLECTIONS

I want to congratulate the planners and organizers of this past weekend's, "Relay For Life" held at Cohasset High School. It is amazing to me every year to see and be a part of such an important and emotional event. To see and meet so many survivors is wonderful, the sadness from those of us who lost someone battling cancer or who are battling this disease themselves is definitely helped by all being together and focusing on the theme of this year's event, "Hope!" The number of children involved this year was overwhelming to me. So many children who had stories of their friends who are battling or have won the battle, all working together for the most part to help raise money right alongside all of the adults. Great job to all and let's look ahead to next year's Relay!

NEW ARRIVAL

Arlene Tuohey of Cohasset is a very proud grandmother of Nolan Thomas Tuohey who arrived on May 11. His parents are Christine and Stephen Tuohey of Braintree. ART EXHIBIT AT SCIENCE CENTER

The South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell presents a collection of paintings by Cohasset artist Alix White, titled "Weather Report", July 2 through Aug. 30. "I primarily paint on location," Alix says. "Living near the coast, I am in awe of how quickly a view will change based on atmospheric conditions – the dialogue between the sky and the ocean for instance. Colors can invert. Winds can change and my composition changes."

The works in her exhibit include locations from Marshfield to Quincy and strive to portray the natural world in the 21st century. The public is invited to an opening reception on Saturday, July10 from 2-4 pm. The exhibit can also be viewed during regular business hours, Monday through Saturday, 9:30am to 4:30pm. For directions or more information, call the Center at (781) 659-2559. Visit its Web site at www.ssnsc.org.

BU GRADUATES

DEAN'S LIST

Thomas N. Anderson and Scott D. Faber, both freshman, were named to the dean's list for the spring semester at Connecticut College. Both Tom and Scott had to have grade point averages form 3.3 to 3.69 to achieve this honor! All that hard work paid off, great job.

Enriching Lives Through the Arts

Are they getting all they need from their school?

Facts For Parents About Reading Instruction

- Most South Shore schools—public and private—use an approach based upon whole language—though they frequently call their method something else.
- Many children (20-40%) will not learn to read effectively through this now disproved method. That is why few school systems use the term, though they still use the approach.
- Those who do not learn will often be described as reading disabled, dyslexic, or a host of other labels. If your school places the label reading disabled on your child then the responsibility for the failure has been placed on your son or daughter- on an unfixable, internal problem. A problem that most likely does not exist.
- Early MRI research found that dysfluent readers had different brain wave patterns when reading than did fluent readers. These signs of a real difference between the brainwaves of fluent and dysfluent readers led to the notion that a real, lasting disability was present.
- Current research by Yale Medical Center indicates that these patterns are not necessarily fixed or lifelong, but can be altered with the proper instruction. The proper reading instruction is based upon phonics and fluent performances. The Fluency Factory has just this kind of reading program, and we are expert in delivering it. Don't let your child suffer at school. We can help.

Commuter boat no longer caught in undertow

Customer cost relief expected

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

With Greenbush construction taking center stage in South Shore towns – commuter boat service had seemed to be adrift.

Cutbacks in the schedule, rising fares and parking fees have resulted in 30 percent fewer riders even though train service is still at least 18 months away. Prior to fare and parking hikes, Boston Harbor Cruises – the private contractor hired to provide the service — was carrying upwards of 4,000 commuters a day from 14 towns. Today ridership is down to about 2,700 per day.

The situation isn't lost on state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, a long-time train critic and commuter boat proponent.

He's had three recent meetings with state Transportation Secretary Daniel Grabauskas to try and put the commuter boat on the radar screen of an agency – the MBTA – that is so firmly anchored by rail service. And earlier this week, he met with Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey. Both Grabauskas and Healey are receptive to providing relief for the beleaguered commuter boat rider, Hedlund said.

Hedlund says the MBTA views the ferry as a first-class service warranting higher fares.

"It's viewed as a Cadillac system and users should pay accordingly," he said. "But the problem is to make it competitive to get people out of their cars and onto mass transit and not be penalized for it."

Jon Carlisle, spokesman for Grabauskas, says while the state is committed to ferry service, it has to face fiscal realities.

"The MBTA is operating at a loss and we have to look at the best way to spend scarce resources," he said. Carlisle said Grabauskas is committed to multi-modal public transportation and is working with local legislators to explore how to build boat ridership.

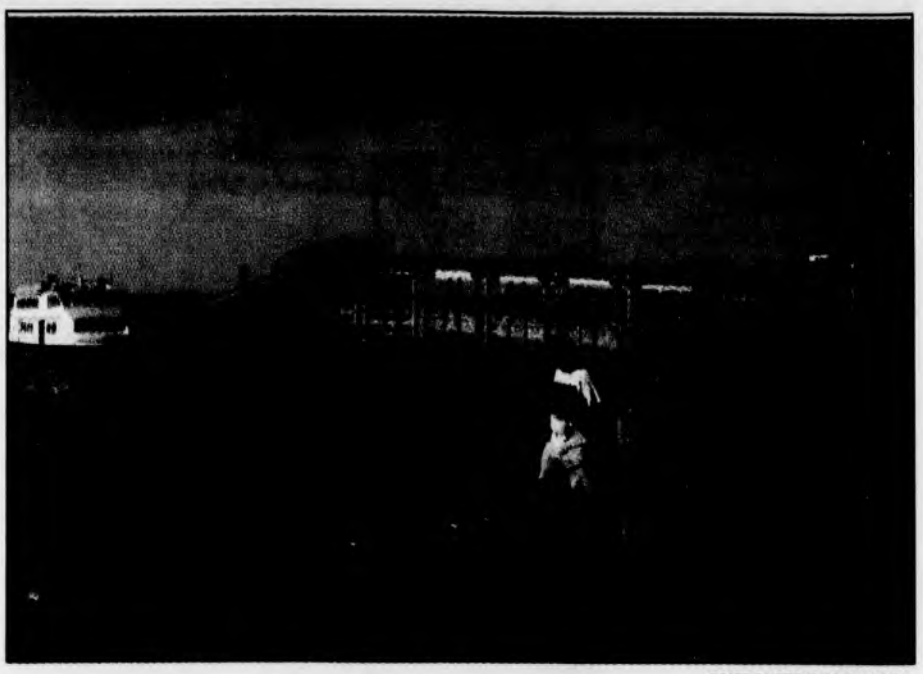
"The commuter boat is an efficient, clean, comfortable way to commute into the city but it is also a very costly one," he said.

Hedlund says a commuter on the boat from Hingham to Rowe's Wharf today pays $12.80 per day including $2 for parking. The same trip cost $6.80 back in 1997 when the MBTA took over the service.

"This cost is completely disproportionate with other options available for commuters," he said, making the system unable to compete with the Red Line or commuter rail.

Although he couldn't elaborate at this time, Hedlund said the administration's goal is to provide some immediate short-term relief for commuter boat riders is expected soon.

"In addition to that language will be put in the senate version of the Transportation Bond Bill establishing a commission that would be legally empowered to look at equity in the fare structure as it relates to Greenbush," he explained.



If nothing were done, the future would look gloomy. The proposed fare from the West Hingham Station to Boston on the Greenbush Line is $3.50 one-way and the railroad station is within a mile of the commuter boat in Hingham.

The MBTA structures its fares in geographic zones and the goal would be to rezone the commuter boat on par with Greenbush so there is not such a huge disparity with the two forms of mass transit. The boat would be in the same zone as the West Hingham Station.

The commission would look at the zone issue, fare structure and scheduling matters, Hedlund said.

Grabauskas has to make the rationale for a fare change to the MBTA board of directors charged with setting the fare structure and this is where the new commission could help. A potential problem is the possible outcry from city residents who rely on mass transit and may object to commuters in Hingham and Cohasset getting a reduction, Hedlund explained.

Both Hedlund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, registered their opposition in writing to the MBTA back in December 2002 when the $2 fee for parking at the commuter boat was enacted. The "park and ride" lot had been free for 25 years. The legislators warned the fee that was announced without discussion with state and town officials would restrict growth of commuter boat ridership and increase traffic on busy Route 3A.

A commuter makes his way down the walk after arriving on the ferry Monday. Higher fares and parking fees have reduced ridership resulting in cutbacks in service.

Hedlund said the parking fee can be eliminated unilaterally by the MBTA general manager and Sec. Grabauskas.

Last fall, commuter boat fares went up by 25 percent, and June 1 service was cut from 24 round trips a day to 18 due to decreasing ridership.

Hedlund said those who take the boat now and decide they must transfer to the Greenbush train for cost reasons, would save about $750 a year.

John Bewick, president of AfTA (Advocates for Transportation Alternatives), says midday cutbacks have been a great inconvenience for him and others who travel to Boston for noon meetings with clients or to meet family members for shopping and lunch.

"To make things worse, these service cuts took place without public warning or input," he said.

"This cost is completely disproportionate with other options available for commuters."
— Sen. Bob Hedlund

Bewick said the fare increases and service cutbacks are in violation of the 1990 Central Artery Memorandum of Understanding that led to a state order for mitigation of the Central Artery impacts.

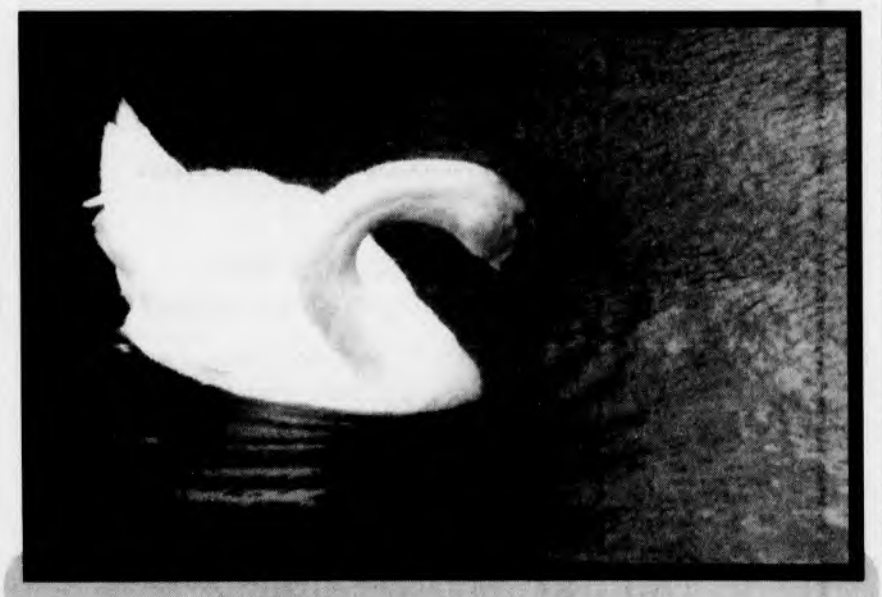
He said the MOU required that fare increases not exceed cost of living or fuel increases, whichever is less. Bewick said the 75 percent cost increase exceeds the cost of living by 38 percent since 1990.

In a letter to Gov. Mitt Romney, Bewick stated when a state agency ignores legal agreements, it sets a terrible example for ordinary citizens. He said Romney decided to proceed with Greenbush using Central Artery mandates as an excuse and is not now complying with those mandates.

"This is a double standard, which every voter in the Greenbush corridor is watching," Bewick stated.

The Greenbush commuter rail subsidy is about $3.50 per rider for operating costs and about $15 per rider for debt. In comparison the commuter boat subsidy is about $1 per rider and there is no debt.

Commuter boat customer Thomas Maloney of Hingham urged Hedlund and Bradley not to give up the fight.



"People around town are continuing to talk about how they have switched to the Red Line or are driving now," he stated in a letter to Hedlund that was also sent to the Hingham Journal. "It is so infuriating to watch this destruction of a very valuable transportation method on the South Shore and one that commuters actually enjoy."

Deer Hill class inspired by girl's book on autism

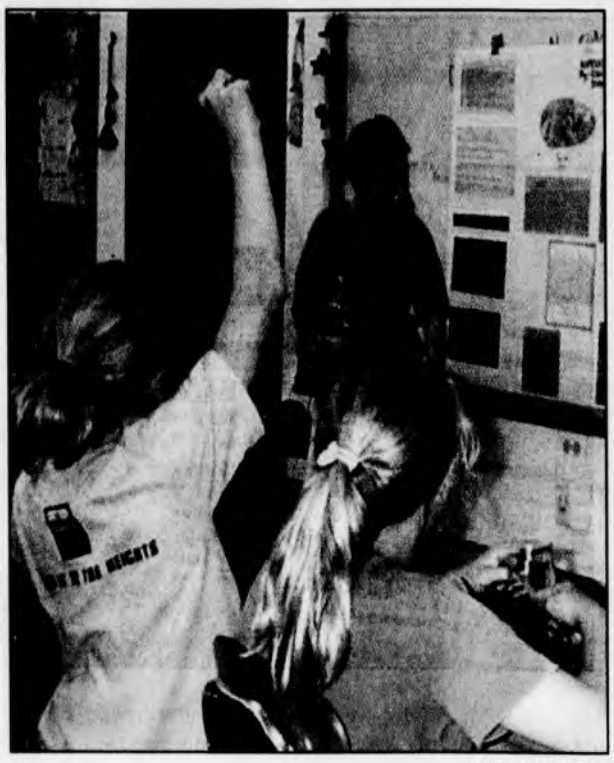
By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Christine Doherty, 9, of Duxbury, and the members of Miss Taylor's class at Deer Hill live in different towns. But they do have something in common: they both love a child with autism.

For Christine it's her younger sister Rosie and for the fifth-graders at Deer Hill, it's classmate Max Reel.

"Disabilities don't matter. You can still be a friend."
— Christine Doherty, young author

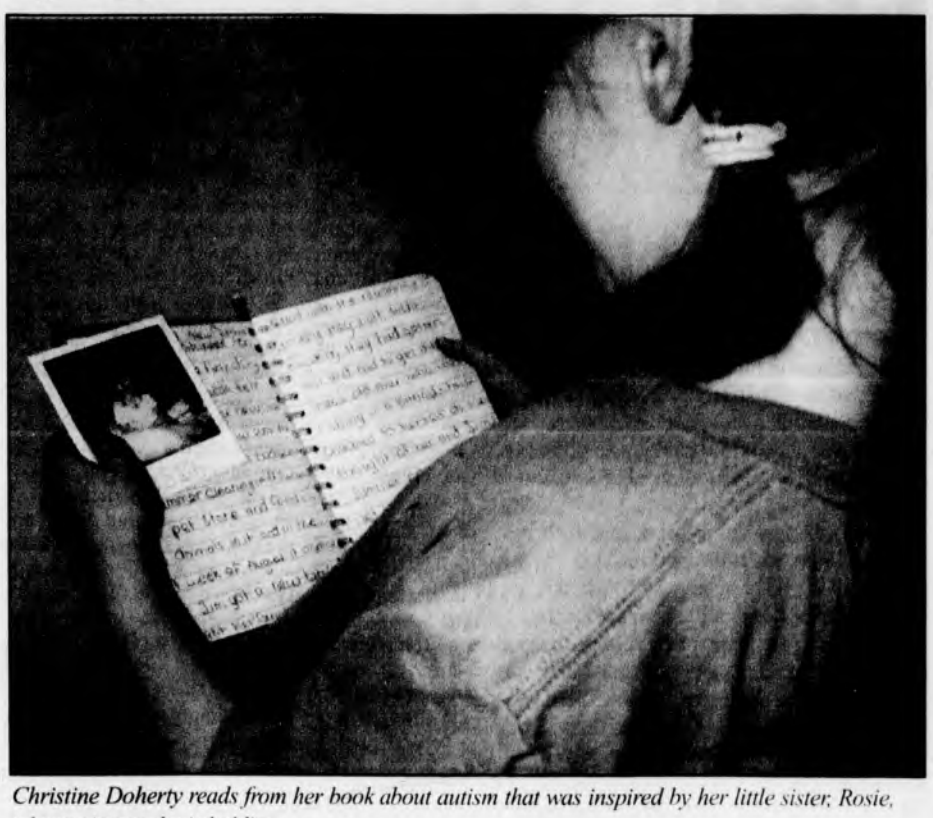
Both Rosie and Max are autistic, which means they interact differently than other children.



For Christine, Rosie provided the inspiration for a yet unpublished book, "A True Friend," she wrote about a 13-year-old girl who is partnered with an autistic boy in gym class.

"At first she isn't happy because classmates teased her," Christine says. "But in the end she and the boy become best friends and ignore the teasing."

Christine, whose mother is friends with Max's mother Anne Reel, said she wrote the book after thinking about Rosie and realizing that true friends can come in all packages.



Max showed the book to his teacher, Miss Taylor, who read it to the class. The children loved the book and wanted to meet its author.

"The kids love Max," says Miss Taylor. "So it was good to learn about the boy Christine wrote about."

PHOTOS/MARY FORD

Christine Doherty answers a question about autism from a student in Miss Taylor's class.

Christine Doherty reads from her book about autism that was inspired by her little sister, Rosie, whose picture she is holding.

Christine was invited to the Deer Hill class with her mother, Terry Doherty, last Thursday. She presented her science fair project on autism to the class, answered a lot of questions and read the first chapter of "Best Friend, Best Teacher," the sequel to her book.

She passed around photographs of Rosie, 7, and explained how the autistic and non-autistic brains are different.

"There's no cure yet and no one knows the cause," Christine explains. She says autism can take different forms, In overly sensitive children, for example, they can't block out loud noises and might be really bothered by a scratchy shirt.

She said autistic kids can be really bright and have incredible memorizing skills; some can memorize entire phone books. Some can't talk and communicating is difficult. "But they love to play," Christine said. "And having autism doesn't mean they can't succeed.

"It's not contagious and it has nothing to do with parents," she says.

Christine hopes her book can help schoolchildren understand autism. "Disabilities don't matter," she said. "You can still be a friend."

Moving forward

The board of selectmen is becoming the best show in town but not for the right reasons. While no amount of positive spin is going to change the fact the town is in transition, abruptly losing a town manager after seven years and one who had a ton of information at his fingertips would be enough to throw elected officials in any town into temporary disarray.

But it is critical that good decisions are made moving forward and that the taxpayers have confidence that selectmen are rising to the challenge. They can't do that if there are petty disagreements and infighting on the board itself.

Selectmen's meetings of late have been frustrating affairs for all involved. We think disagreement can be healthy because it can provide fodder for good debate, thoroughly airing an issue. But meetings bogged down in minutia and finger-pointing are counter-productive and are a throw-back to the pre-Haddad days when taxpayers led a revolt and changed the government.

We believe elected officials must be held accountable for their actions or inaction as the case may be – even when it is unpleasant. While they are volunteers, no one held a gun to their head to run for office.

But, with that being said, Haddad's departure and its aftermath were not expected. To their credit, selectmen acted quickly appointing interim Town Manager Michael Buckley and are trying to do what is best for the town.

There are a lot of pieces that have to be picked up – not the least of which are the wastewater issues with Cook Estate project that need to be resolved. Greenbush construction is going to start in earnest and the town needs to insure that it is protected with an ombudsman position, whose duties like those who hold similar positions in Scituate and Hingham stretch beyond handling complaints from the public. The village revitalization and flood control projects also need to stay on track.

In short, this is no time to play the "blame game" when the town needs solid leadership.

At the annual Town Meeting, Selectman Ronnie McMorris read a "state of the town" message that enumerated recent town accomplishments that included completing the Master Plan; expansion of the police-fire station; and completion of construction at Deer Hill and the middle-high schools, to name a few.

Cohasset had a lot to be proud of back in March – that hasn't changed in the short time since.

Applause for new Deer Hill principal

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to publicly thank Keith Gauley for an impressive job in his first year as principal of the Deer Hill School. He has shown outstanding leadership, vision, and dedication to learning. During his first year he has revitalized the School Council and has actively sought parent input, feedback and partnership in the daily education of our children. He already clearly has a strong grip on the curriculum and what's going on inside the classrooms. With several teachers retiring this year, I have confidence he will make wise hiring decisions and select the best available teachers for our children.

Mr. Gauley came aboard just after the Deer Hill aide positions were cut. Those who think there is still fat to be cut from our school budgets should come by and see him answering phones and "xeroxing," as well as supervising lunch and recess. He does this cheerfully and professionally, and it's clear he loves what he does. Each day he begins his morning announcements with a "This day in history" lesson, and he infuses his love of learning in all he does.

Mr. Callahan is a wonderful man and missed by many. But it is time to move forward and embrace this change. Let's all give Mr. Gauley a well-deserved round of applause for an excellent job. Cohasset is lucky to have someone of his caliber. Let's hope he stays for a long time; another school district would scoop him up in a second.

Interim principal

TO THE EDITOR:

In the June 17, "Cohasset Mariner" there was a letter to the editor titled "Why No Tirade over Interim Principal?". The Interim Principal of The Cohasset Middle High School has been in The Cohasset School System for 17 years. Many of those years as the assistant principal of the Cohasset Middle High School. He is a known quantity. The Interim Principal, Jack DeLorenzo has done an outstanding job as assistant principal for numerous years. I am very thankful that Jack DeLorenzo has stepped up to the plate. There is no doubt he will do an outstanding job.

Several months ago, Jack DeLorenzo had expressed his intention to retire at the end of this school year. We, the citizens of Cohasset, are truly lucky to have Jack DeLorenzo at the helm of The Cohasset Middle High School.

Why dwell on dysfunction?

TO THE EDITOR:

"Spread the word! We're dysfunctional"! "The town manager quit under mysterious circumstances, the police chief resigned, and we're paying for two cops to be idled for months for no good reason"! One hears these cries of despair about dysfunction all over town from all sorts of people, although I suppose research could identify a few who are fueling the flames.

But come now! The town hall is functioning, the town's grass is being cut, the tax bills and water bills are getting delivered, the school buses have continued to run, nobody is on strike, there is no crime wave, every Thursday the indispensable Mariner brings us comprehensive news of the good things and many of the foolish things our fellow citizens are doing, the beach is popular, our many boards, commissions and committees continue to attract few observers to their meetings while being damned for being not transparent enough; in short, the town is functioning pretty much as it always has.

What little has gone wrong doesn't seem to result from evil intentions by really evil people, but rather from misjudgments by honorable people trying to do what they thought was right thing to do. So let's get a bit intolerant of spiteful denunciations, and substitute constructive support to those we've elected and appointed to serve the town. It won't make the sun rise any earlier, but the days will seem more cheerful.

An asset to Cohasset

TO THE EDITOR:

Once again, the South Shore Playhouse Associates have granted the Cohasset High School Arts Boosters a generous grant of $1,000. This grant will help to fund our operating expenses for the upcoming school year. The money raised by Arts Boosters goes directly to the students in the form of enriching the arts and music curriculum with extra supplies, paying entry fees for Drama competitions, and granting requests from the teachers for special events or projects which are not included in the school budget. This grant will enable us to begin the year on a sound financial basis.

The South Shore Playhouse Associates and the South Music Circus are true assets to the town of Cohasset. The faculty, students and parents of Cohasset High School thank them for their generosity and sincerely hope that the 2004 season will be a huge success.

HEALTH NOTES

Partnership helps schools and town

Science program is cooperative effort

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The new changes in the school system have already started to have an effect on relationships with other groups in town, and not the least is the new and very promising relationship with the Cohasset Board of Health.

The board of health has two important duties when it comes to our schools. The first is to ensure that the schools are providing a healthy environment for the students. For this reason we carry out an annual health and safety inspection of the class rooms and other spaces used by the pupils. But further, the board believes that it has responsibilities in ensuring a healthy diet. Accordingly, we established the Food Nutrition Advisory Committee.

The second duty, no less vital, is to ensure that the most important of the town's resources: — its youth population — learns and participates in maintaining a healthy environment throughout the town. This activity by the board of health covers literally hundreds of tasks from providing "mutt mitts" on the common so that dog owners can pick up their pet's residue; to sanitary inspections in our eateries; to nursing duties; sanitary code compliance; and even to beach closings. It might surprise you to know that there is a modicum of student participation in many of these activities.

One change to which we are referring is the relationship we have with elements of the school management. We have already had discussions with the new principals of both the high and middle school. The first outcome of these discussions is a change in the way the School Nutrition Advisory Committee interacts with the school system. Like the nutrition committee, there are a number of organizations dedicated to providing help, support, and assistance to our schoolchildren. These include, police, clergy, Project Safeguard, organizations sponsoring diversity training, groups concerned with the bullying problem, character education, and many others.

According to Osborne Ingram, who was on the school committee for a number of years, there are always groups who want to help the professionals run the system better, and if the schools listened to all of them, nobody would get an education.

Recognizing this problem, Jack DeLorenzo, the new principal of the middle-high school, and Mike Gill, new assistant principal of the middle-high school, are planning sometime at the beginning of the next term a meeting of representatives of all of the groups that want to have an input into our student education system. The purpose of this meeting is to discuss the various points of view of the groups and report what is now being done to address the various concerns. Then, there can be an orderly review and a plan to adjust any school initiatives if the school committee, which has overall management responsibility, agrees that there is a need. This will eliminate the need for many time-consuming individual meetings with the numerous groups now contacting our busy school staff.

The second change is the way the school system views outside activities. The board of health has a long history of involving students in assessment activities for our water bodies and other environmental resources. We have monitored the Gulf, Little Harbor, Cohasset Cove, for a number of important environmental threats, providing a learning experience for students and vital environmental data for the town. Heretofore, for the school system, this has always been a necessary nuisance. Students have had to miss important class time to go out and wade around in bogs, collecting data.

All that changed with the great success of Jack Buckley's Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR). Not only have students collected important scientific data for the board of health, but students have been able to provide colleges with important evidence of real scientific achievement resulting in scholarships, grants, and acceptance in better schools. Moreover, significant numbers of students have been sufficiently enthused by their experiences to pursue degrees in environmental science. Also, spending for vital scientific apparatus for the CSCR has provided more scientific instrumentation than the science program at the high school. Accordingly, there is good evidence that the science done by the CSCR will augment the school science program and not act as a deterrent to school studies. As an example of this change, Dave Magnussen, director of the science program at the high school will provide a presentation to the Gulf Association's annual meeting tonight titled "The Gulf as a Classroom." Hopefully this is the beginning of a closer relationship and more formal ties between the CSCR and the high school science program.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

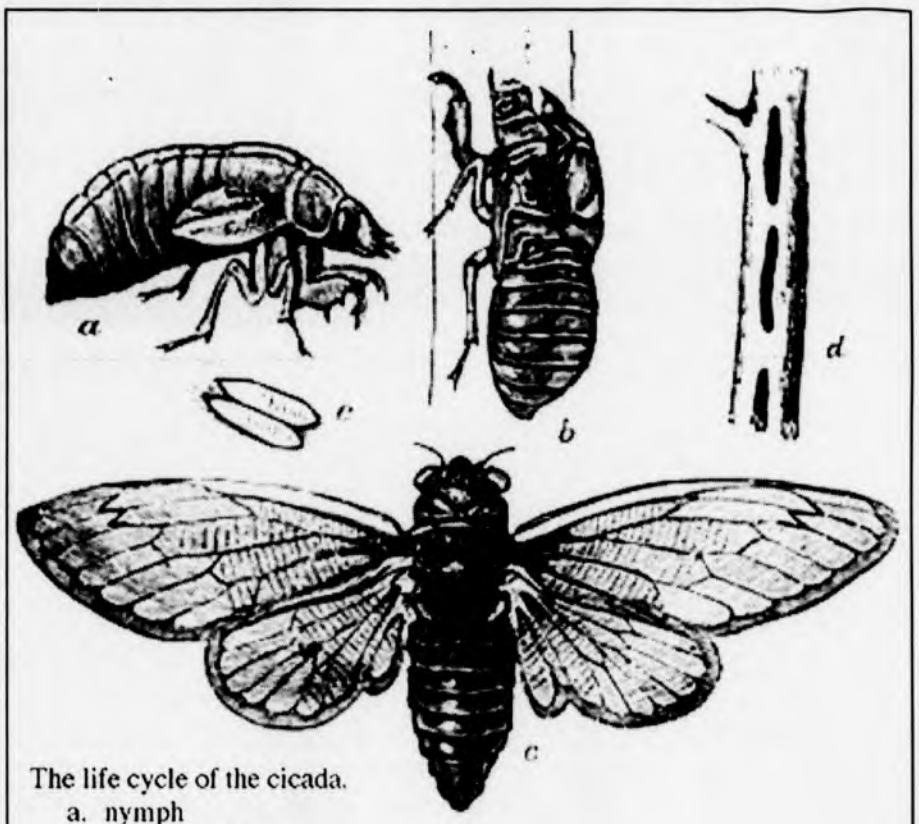
Dog Day circada and other species are becoming stars

COMMON GROUND

AMY WHORF MCGUIGGAN

You wouldn't think that a blunt headed, stout legged insect with bulging bright red eyes, a devilish black body and orangey wing veins would become the toast (literally, but more about that in a minute) of the town, but after 17 long years in the making, the family of periodical cicadas known as Brood X is, indeed, ready for its close up.

Nearly two decades ago, after hatching as nymphs, Brood X went underground. At a depth of two or three feet, the wingless, khaki-colored, grub-like nymphs happily fed on the juicy rootlets of deciduous trees and underwent several growth stages called instars, all in preparation for their debut several weeks ago when the soil temperature reached just the right warmth — about 64 degrees. Right on cue, trillions of nymphs emerged from the soil in 15 states from New York to Washington, D.C., and west to Indiana and Tennessee. Here in Massachusetts, we're outside of Brood X's range, but we'll have our own mini performance of cicadas when the annual cicadas appear later this summer. And come 2008, Brood XIV, last seen in these parts in 1991, will be making a return visit to the Bay State.



For the adventurous eaters among us, the Internet is alive with recipes for toasting and sautéing the insects, for cicada chowder, cicada tacos, cicada and rhubarb pie, and chocolate dipped cicadas.

Since their emergence a few weeks ago, Brood X (designating the Roman numeral 10, a system of documenting the various families, or broods, of periodical cicadas) has been given the kind of hype that Hollywood stars dream about. The newspapers are telling their story nationwide, as are the national news magazines. There are cicada t-shirts, including "retro" T-shirts from 1987 when Brood X last made an appearance, cicada coffee mugs, tote bags, mouse pads and calendars. One enterprising artist has collected dried cicada exoskeletons, inserted tiny electric light bulbs, and created an illuminated display. For the adventurous eaters among us, the Internet is alive with recipes for toasting and sautéing the insects, for cicada chowder, cicada tacos, cicada and rhubarb pie, and chocolate dipped cicadas.

Said to taste like cold, canned asparagus (I'll take their word for it, and so will 87 percent of the people who responded, "No way," to a recent Internet poll asking, Would you eat a cicada?) the cicada is not the only insect that has earned a following with epicureans over the course of human civilization. Caterpillars, moths, dragonflies, crickets and waterbugs have all been coveted by various cultures for their low fat and high protein as well as their "delicate" flavor. Eating such exotic morsels is however, not without its risks. Take, for instance the poor fellow in Indiana who, unable to pass up nature's bounty, recently cooked and ate several dozen Brood X cicadas. He promptly found himself in a hospital emergency room with a serious allergic reaction.

It may be that the cicada's mysterious life cycle and its longstanding place of honor in human culture as a symbol of immortality, rebirth and perpetual youth explains, in part, the human willingness to ingest the critter. As early as the 4th century, B.C., Aristotle described the cicada's life cycle, noting that it emerges from the earth, sheds its skin and deploys its wings, thus resurrecting itself. Ancient cultures from the Greeks and Chinese to Native Americans have depicted the cicada on bronzes, jade and pottery.

The cicada's life cycle is, indeed, one of nature's more fascinating processes, particularly the life cycle of the periodical cicada, so precisely synchronized that the species are virtually absent between emergences. Often mistakenly referred to as locusts (which are members of the grasshopper and cricket order Orthoptera), the cicada is a member of the bug order Hemiptera and is related to aphids, leaf and tree hoppers, and bed bugs. Cicadas undergo an incomplete metamorphosis (butterflies, on the other hand, undergo a complete metamorphosis) where the nymphs look like small versions of the adult. Skipping the pupal stage, the immobile state during which adult organs develop, the cicada adult gradually develops from the hatched nymph.

North America boasts more than 160 species of cicada, ranging in size from 1-3 inches and in habitats from grasslands to woodlands. Two distinct genera of cicada are recognized, the genus Magicicada, the periodical cicada, found only in Eastern North America, with 13 year (three broods) or 17 year (12 broods) life cycles, and the Tibicen, the annual or Dog Day cicada, so named because it makes its appearance during the sultry dog days of midsummer, between July 3 and Aug. 11, when Sirius, the Dog Star, rises with the sun. The ancients, certain that the brightness of Sirius contributed heat to the Earth, attributed the sultriness of midsummer to Sirius rising in conjunction with the sun. With their 2-4 year life cycles, the Dog Day cicada broods overlap and emerge throughout the summer, filling the treetops each summer with buzzing and whining music.

Both the periodical cicada, which has the longest life cycle of any insect, and the Dog Day cicada begin life as tiny, ant-sized nymphs. Reaching maturity underground, the nymphs emerge at sunset, anchor themselves to upright vegetation or vertical surfaces and begin their final molt, splitting their exoskelton (cuticle) down the middle of their back. What emerges from the dark exuvium is a soft, moist, white body. After several hours, during which the wings inflate and the body hardens, the cicada is ready to begin its brief life, a life devoted to singing and mating, what one Greek scholar called a life of "eros and eloquence."

To the treetops the cicadas crawl. The males begin their mating songs (the Dog Day cicada can be distinguished from the periodical cicada by the rise and fall of its song) using two membranes called tymbals located on the abdomen. The males of nearly all species "sing" and each species has its own song that can be heard from a mile away. They'll make short flights to join females.

Within a week, cicadas have mated and the female deposits as many as 600 eggs in 40-50 longitudinal slits made by her ovipositor on the underside of small tree twigs. Within six to 10 weeks the eggs hatch and the nymphs drop to the ground, burrow, and begin their long sleep. By then, the adults have long since died.

For Midwestern residents who are enduring the invasion of Brood X, and for those of us who will experience the onslaught of Brood XIV in 2008, the good news is that cicadas are harmless to humans and the environment. Though their populations can reach densities of more than one million per acre (about the size of a football field), they neither bite nor sting. They do not swarm or carry disease. Except for minimal damage to the tips of twigs during egg laying — a pruning that arborists say can be beneficial — they leave the trees that shelter them intact. For songbirds, snakes and spiders, the mass of cicadas will seem like a banquet table, though by their sheer numbers the reproduction and survival of the cicada is guaranteed.

Largely unseen during its brief lifetime, and leaving behind little more than a drab, dried, brown exoskeleton clinging rather eerily to a window sill or tree trunk, you have to wonder about the cicada's purpose here on Earth. How do we make such a creature appealing to a human sensibility? They have not the majesty of a Humpback whale, the exquisite beauty of a Monarch butterfly, nor the amusing behavior of a Grey Squirrel. But they do have mystery. It may be, as the ancient Greeks understood, that the cicada is here to remind us of the journey from darkness to brightness, that change is essential to fulfillment, that in change — and the pursuit of knowledge — is the promise of a higher state of being. When the cicadas begin their song of yearning later this summer, we might stop and listen, and hear our own song deep within.

Rewriting history again

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I see that colonial history is being rewritten in Deerfield where, 300 years later, political correctness is turning an Indian raid that killed 50 settlers and sent 112 more into winter captivity into something like a friendly game and camping trip.

Monuments and plaques commemorating the raid and its aftermath all over town are being checked for uncomplimentary 18th century references that may have been used for the Indians and change them to the more sensitive terms used in the 21st century.

Not that the keepers of Deerfield's history are physically changing their monuments and plaques. No, they're just placing over them a removable cover containing the new words, presumably so it can be removed when the old version becomes trendy again.

"You can't just wipe it out, you have to update them," Brian Deer, the Deerfield Historical Society's Indian adviser, told the Globe. "Replacing them would border on political correctness. So you leave it all there and reword them to today's language."

It's one more proof that Napoleon was right when he said, "History is lies agreed upon." Only I would add that it depends on the time and place which lies are used.

There is a move afoot to rehabilitate Thomas Morton of Clifford's Inn, Gent., as he used to sign himself, whose Maypole at Merrymount and intimate relations with the Indians, chiefly their women, irritated the Pilgrims of Plymouth no end.

When he started selling guns to the natives, Captain Myles Standish --- Captain Shrimpe, Morton called him --- and his army of eight men with their blunderbusses were dispatched to slap him in irons and ship him back to England.

Modern scholars, however, insist that Morton was just a good businessman who treated the Indians well to get them to trade with him rather than the Pilgrims and that Maypole, well, he was just a good Anglican having fun in a way serious Pilgrims wouldn't understand.

If PC can do that to Deerfield and Tom Morton, think of what they'll be able do with Hannah Dustin, the colonial goodwife who was captured by Indians up Lawrence way, killed her captors while they slept, scalped them and returned triumphantly to her home.

It has always irked me slightly that my hometown of Braintree has not seen fit to dedicate a plaque to Nicolo Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

When folks from the Midwest and the South visit me and I ask them what they want to see, most of them say, not the Sylvanus Thayer birthplace or the late Bill Brooks' Five Corners, but the place where Sacco and Vanzetti killed the paymaster and the guard.

"Why is there not a marker here?" asked one visitor, a Nebraskan who lives not far from Rock Creek where a marker shows you where Wild Bill Hickock shot up the McCandles gang. "Why no marker?"

"I don't know," I lied.

It didn't make any difference. As we all know, Sacco and Vanzetti didn't do it. Mike Dukakis said so 60 years later.

Gulf Assoc. annual meeting is tonight

The Gulf Association will hold its annual meeting at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, June 24, at the Lightkeeper's Cottage, Cohasset Harbor.

David Magnussen, Chairman of the Science Department at the Cohasset High School, and Jack Buckley, President of the newly formed Center for Student Coastal Research will present "The Gulf As Classroom." While reporting on recent successes in teaching science by involving students in hands-on projects they will describe the Department's current science philosophy and program overview including its experiential, interactive approach to learning, and how the Gulf fits into the curriculum. They will also hear from students who have participated in the Department's Summer Institute Program.

All who are interested in the sciences, and in preserving the environmental health of the Gulf River estuary and its watershed (which encompasses substantial portions of both Cohasset and Scituate) are encouraged to attend. Parents of students in Cohasset and Scituate's middle and high schools will be especially interested to hear how they can help develop a watershed- based curriculum involving community participation. Call 781-383-2982 with any questions.

Cohasset has a move afoot for chemical-free green lawns

Go-Green effort should take root

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Imagine a lawn that needs to be mowed only once a month. It stays green all summer long with little watering, has no weeds, and doesn't need fertilizer to maintain its condition.

Sounds too good to be true?

Through organic lawn-care methods, Community Garden Club member Sandra Durant says an environmentally friendly lawn is possible. And she should know. The Community Garden Club member had such a lawn at her previous home in Marshfield, and is in the process of converting her Cohasset lawn.

She says by using organic fertilizer and implementing all-natural landscaping practices, it is much healthier than the alternative. "The more we can eliminate chemicals from our environment, the better everything else will be," Durant said.

As it turns out Durant is not alone in her efforts. The garden club is working with the board of health, conservation commission, open space committee, and water commission to initiate "Cohasset Go Green," an organic lawn care program that will encourage residents to stop using chemical fertilizers and pesticides on their lawns and practice all natural methods of lawn care.

Chemicals from herbicides and pesticides can flow into waterways along with rain or from watering the lawn. By maintaining a natural lawn, Durant said she is helping protect Cohasset's fragile environment as well as her own health. By making some very simple changes, she says anyone can have a lush, green lawn, that looks good and is chemical free, while protecting family and neighbors from the chemicals' potential adverse affects.

Durant said many people today are looking to achieve the perfect "carpet" lawn and seed their yards with Kentucky bluegrass, which is not native to this area. Kentucky bluegrass goes dormant during parts of the summer because of the heat and needs to be constantly watered to keep its color.

By planting grasses that are native to this area, such as Dutch clover, fescues, and ryes, they will be much more resilient to the weather, both in the summer and winter. The clover crowds out weeds, which eliminates the need for herbicides, and when the lawn is mowed, it provides nitrogen for the soil which acts as a natural fertilizer. In addition, clover stays green 10 months out of the year, needs less water than Kentucky bluegrass, and because it doesn't grow very tall, needs to be mowed less often, Durant explained.

Conservation commission chairman Debbie Cook, who is also on the open space committee, said, "People have to get used to thinking they don't need the green carpet lawn, because it's doing a lot of damage." She said the Water Department did a study on Little Harbor that said for every pound of fertilizer placed on a lawn, it creates a pound of organic material. "If it doesn't stay on the lawn, it ends up in places like Lily Pond and Little Harbor," which causes algae to grow on the water. She said Lily Pond is losing depth every year as organic material continues to die and settles on the bottom of the pond. "It would cost a ton of money to dredge Lily Pond," she said.

Cook said what many people don't realize is that fertilizer actually weakens the shafts of grass. "It makes them grow so fast and they put so much energy into growing," she said, that the blades aren't as strong. This in turn requires homeowners to use more fertilizer to help feed the grass to strengthen it.

She spoke about the harmful effects chemicals can have not only on people, but their pets. When animals run and play in the grass, they come in contact with anything that has been put on the lawn. "I truly believe the incidents of cancer in animals," has been caused by the use of pesticides, she said.

Durant said she has heard of studies which link chemical use to an increased risk of developing diseases such as Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis or Lou Gehrig's Disease. She said some people think living down wind from a baseball field or golf course, which uses chemical fertilizers, can have effects that are just as harmful as using chemicals on their own lawn, as they are very powerful and can be carried by the wind.

This spring, the groups will be embarking on a major project to help show the residents of Cohasset how easy having an organic lawn is, and how good it looks, as they have plans to transform Cohasset Common into a natural, chemical free lawn.

"We'll be trying to seed it with Dutch white clover, and fescues," Durant said. She hopes the work done on the common will encourage others to try organic lawn care.

Cook said people should understand chemicals aren't needed to have a green lawn. While it may not look like a perfect carpet, it will look green and it will be better for the environment. "My yard is a mix of clover and that's just the way it's going to be," she said.

Cohasset Go Green lawn care calendar

June
Be certain soil is watered only when needed. Depending on rainfall, healthy lawns need 1 to 1-1/2 inches of overhead watering once a week.

July
Flea, tick, mosquito control: Rid property of standing water or add drop of oil in rain barrels. Lemon grass oil and peppermint oil are effective repellents. Use garlic spray in high traffic areas.

August
Poison Ivy: Clip to the ground by mowing and place mulch of cardboard covered with wood chips over the area. Burn Out or Scythe are also effective lemon juice and vinegar solutions.

Early Fall
Re-seed heavily. Look for varieties of mix which will provide natural protection against some insects and fungal diseases. For last fall mowing, set blade height at 2 inches. Aerate if it hasn't been done for several seasons and the soil is hard, dry, and compact. Mow two times with mulching mower and leave chopped leaves to serve as organic fertilizer, which will cut future fertilizer need by 50 percent.

Early to mid-April
Soil test: available from UMA Amherst (413-545-2311) orwww.umass/edu/plsoil/soiltest. If pH is below 6.0, add lime; if above 7.0,add gardener◊s sulphur. Top dress lawn to 1/4 inch depth with organic compost. Apply organic fertilizer if needed. However, keep fertilizer away from driveways and walkways. Overseed bare spots. Plant insect and disease resistant cultivars of turf grass such as fescues, ryes, clover and some bluegrass. The clover will provide your lawn with nitrogen. Sharpen mower blades and set height at 2 inches for first spring mowing; reset to 3-3.5 inches for the rest of season. Always leave lawn clippings on lawn.

Late April
Crab grass/weed control. If weeds need to be controlled (note: many weeds are beneficial to the lawn ecosystem), apply corn gluten meal for pre-emergent control. Apply between Forsythia and Lilac bloom, before crabgrass emerges. Reapply in early summer. Two good products for unwanted weeds such as dandelions or plantain are Burn Out and Scythe — spot spray carefully (read directions). Treat weeds as individuals, not whole lawn. Maintain correct pH. Overseed with a fescue blend and clover. Leave leaves in flower and shrub beds as organic fertilizer and mulch (In the Fall mowing leaves w/mulching blades or mowing twice and leaving the chopped leaves on the lawn will cut fertilizer need by 50 percent). Lastly, if you live on or near water or wetlands, consider creating a vegetative buffer zone or meadow. This will slow down Canadian Geese from walking up onto the lawn and it will slow down nitrogen run-off from fertilizers.

Mid May
Grub control: When soil warms to 55 degrees, apply Milky Spore for long term control of Japanese and Oriental beetle grubs; for short term control, apply beneficial nematodes. See http://ma.nofa.org for product names and sources.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' and senators' votes on two roll calls from the week of June 14-18.

$22.5 BILLION FISCAL 2005 STATE BUDGET (H 4850)

House 152-0, Senate 38-1, approved the House-Senate conference committee version of a $22.5 billion fiscal 2005 state budget. The House and Senate had approved different versions of the package and a conference committee hammered out a compromise. The package is partially funded by the use of $673 million in one-time reserves including $340 million from the rainy day fund and $25 million from the sale of surplus land. Provisions include a one-year moratorium on the creation of new Commonwealth Charter Schools; a $14 million increase in funding for the Prescription Advantage program for seniors over age 65 and low-income individuals with disabilities who work less than 40 hours per week; increases of $72 million in Chapter 70 education aid and $80 million in special education reimbursement; and level funding of Lottery Assistance and Additional Local Assistance at last year's funding levels. The package did not include several initiatives that were in the Senate version including repeal of a 1913 law that prohibits out-of-state couples from getting married in Massachusetts if their home state does not recognize the union; a section allowing stem cell research on donated human embryos, three to five days old, remaining after in vitro fertilization for fertility treatment; and a provision requiring certain nurse to patient ratios in hospitals. Supporters said the package is a fiscally responsible and balanced one that does not raise taxes, increases education aid, provides some new, bold initiatives and restores some of the cuts made in last year's budget. Opponents said they could not support the package because too many of the important initiatives included in the Senate version were left out of the conference committee package. The budget now goes to Gov. Romney who has ten days to review it. The governor is expected to sign the budget into law after he vetoes many sections. (A "Yea" vote is for the budget. A "Nay" vote is against it).

PUBLIC CONSTRUCTION CHANGES (S 2358)

House 155-0, gave near final approval to a bill making changes in the state's public construction laws. Provisions include requiring the state Division of Capital Asset Maintenance and Management to certify subcontractors to participate in public projects; mandating pre-qualification of general contractors and subcontractors on projects costing more than $10 million; requiring that agencies and municipalities hire a project manager for any project costing more than $1.5 million; and codifying the state's affirmative marketing program to encourage businesses owned by minorities and women to participate in public construction projects. Supporters said these long overdue reforms would overhaul the state's antiquated public construction laws, streamline the development process, make contractors more accountable and save taxpayers' dollars by minimizing costly project overruns. The Senate has approved a different version of the measure and the House version now goes to the Senate for consideration. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

WRONGFUL FELONY CONVICTIONS (S 2392)

Senate 39-0, gave initial approval to a bill establishing a system allowing someone who has served time in prison to seek compensation of up to $500,000 for damages against the state for a wrongful felony conviction and imprisonment. The measure also allows the court to order the state to provide services to address any emotional or physical damages to a claimant caused by the conviction and prison sentence and to give him or her a 50 percent reduction on tuition fees at any state colleges. Supporters said that current law presents many obstacles to filing and collecting these damages. They noted that there are currently at least 22 men who have been released from jail over the past several years after serving extensive jail time for crimes they did not commit. They argued that these men would never be given back the years that they lost but noted it is time for the state to step forward and ensure that they are given at least some small measure of compensation. The House has approved a different version of the proposal and the Senate version now goes to the House for consideration. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

Lt. Gov. Healey shines spotlight on Sen. Kerry's voting record in Washington

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

MICHAEL P. NORTON

It was a case study in politics trumping policy.

The long-awaited $24.5 billion House and Senate budget accord had just been filed at 8:15 am Tuesday (June 15) and reporters, lawmakers and special interest groups were scrolling like maniacs through its details to learn what was in and what was out.

Stem cell research legalization? Dropped. Transportation bureaucracy overhaul? Held for further vetting. Mandatory nurse staffing ratios? Held. Repeal of the 1913 law cited to block out-of-state gay couples from marrying here. Unresolved. Prescription drug purchasing reforms? Sidelined again.

Just as reporters learned most high-profile policy changes had been excised from the budget, largely because the House had not considered the issues in its spending bill, Gov. Mitt Romney's aides were enticing the media to gather on the third floor for a big announcement.

The print and electronic media flocked to the entrance to the governor's office, where Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey, on behalf of Romney who was at an education event in Framingham, demanded that Democratic presidential candidate Sen. John Kerry resign because of an abysmal attendance record since early 2003.

Healey backed up her portrayal of Kerry as an absentee senator by pointing out that in a chamber almost evenly divided among Republicans and Democrats, Kerry missed 64 percent of Senate roll call votes last year and an additional 87 percent this year. In short, Healey said Kerry is not representing his state well.

Reporters returning from the press conference noted that partisan observers laughed out loud when Healey announced her call for Kerry's resignation. How dare a political novice call on the national Democratic presidential nominee to step down? Where was Healey's indignation when Texas Gov. George W. Bush was leaving others to run the Lone Star State while he did battle with Al Gore in 2000? And wasn't Healey being a little self-serving, since she could ostensibly be appointed to succeed Kerry if he resigned? In a nutshell, her critics thought, such a blatant political foray could not be taken seriously, could it? Of course it could.

Healey did not really expect Kerry to give up his seat and his vote, even though he apparently values campaigning for the highest office in the land more than responding to roll call votes for the office which he was elected to serve. But she did expect to get what she got.

Healey's announcement drew the attention of not just local, but national press. She raised awareness of Kerry's voting record, which likely raised eyebrows among voters. She drew the media away from state Democrats crowing about their ability to deliver a fair and balanced budget in tough fiscal times. And to top it off, Romney had managed to attack Kerry through a surrogate without getting his hands dirty.

The political sizzle balanced off a week only a policy wonk could love.

• Legislature's budget leaves big structural deficit — While projecting a balanced bottom line on June 30, 2005, the Legislature's budget for the fiscal year that begins July 1, 2004 will leave the state with a $670 million gap between spending and revenues come July 1, 2005. That's because in order to avoid spending cuts, facilitate level funding of many programs and make investments in areas like health care, lawmakers opted to draw $670 million from state reserve funds and spend it next fiscal year.

• Rail line extension rider complicates Sagamore rotary plans — The House approved legislation Gov. Mitt Romney has been demanding that would allow highway department land takings and the reconfiguration of the Sagamore Rotary in Bourne. Project supporters want to eliminate the dangers of the rotary by separating local and Cape Cod traffic. The Senate-approved bill does not include a measure adopted by the House that directs the MBTA to fast track permitting and spending on commuter rail line extensions to New Bedford and Fall River. Gov. Mitt Romney wants to begin the rotary project soon, but is against the rail extension at this time.

• Senate advances compensation for wrongful felony convictions — During a heavy day of legislating last week, the Senate approved legislation making those wrongfully convicted of felonies eligible for up to $500,000 in compensation. Supporters of the bill said that over the years the state has only apologized to those found innocent after spending years behind bars. Some limited compensation is the least the state could provide to address the injustice, they said.

• Emergency contraception bill clears the senate — Without a word of debate, the Senate approved and sent to the House legislation intended to make sure all hospitals guarantee rape and sexual assault victims access to emergency contraception, more commonly known as the morning-after pill. The bill was filed to address Catholic hospitals that do not offer emergency contraception for religious reasons.

POLITICAL NOTES

Texas congresswoman campaigns for Jones

Congressional candidate Mike Jones campaigns in Scituate on Monday evening.

This past weekend Congresswoman Kay Granger from Texas traveled to Massachusetts to endorse Mike Jones' candidacy for the 10th Congressional District.

Granger's visit included stops in Hingham, Hyannis, and Plymouth. Elected to Congress in 1996, Granger emphasized the dire need for a change in Congressional representation for this region.

At a luncheon at Tosca in Hingham, Granger talked about her first run for Congress in Fort Worth, the district she represents. When she announced her candidacy, many argued the district was unwinnable by a Republican. But Granger persevered and won.

Granger related her own experiences as a small business owner to those on the South Shore. The Congresswoman described how Bill Delahunt's ardent opposition to any tax cut placed small businesses on the South Shore at risk. Small businesses from the backbone of the South Shore's economy, with nine out of 10 South Shore residents employed by such businesses.

Jones' five point agenda is: strengthen small businesses and individuals through tax cuts, fight to keep Social Security and Medicare solvent, actively support the troops in the war on terror by modernizing and equipping the military sons and daughters, fight to ensure all Americans have affordable access to healthcare, and to honor the veterans by fighting for VA programs.

Fruit salsas dress up dinner on the grill

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

The notion of fruit salsas is nothing new, but we probably have to credit Chris Schlesinger and John Willoughby, authors of "The Thrill of The Grill", for making them a de facto part of American cooking. Typically the ingredients consist of tropical fruit, sweet bell pepper, something from the onion family, chiles, herbs, spices and fruit juices. We loaded up on produce and started testing ingredients.

We started with the fruit. Pineapple is a bit too acidic and hard to balance with other flavors; mango is great; melons don't have enough flavor; papaya is terrific but it is almost impossible to find a truly sweet, ripe specimen; peach is easy to find and perfect for this application; plums are too soft; apricots are too delicately flavored; citrus fruits such as orange and grapefruit don't pair well with other ingredients; and banana is a bit off the mark in terms of flavor. So that left us with peaches and mangoes as a base.

Next, we had to figure out what to pair them with. Starting with very sweet, ripe peaches (don't bother with this recipe if the peaches are less than great), we used two large peaches to yield 2 cups diced. The peaches, as with all of the other ingredients in the salsa, have to be chopped fairly small. We tried using scallions, red onion, Vidalia onion, and shallots in this recipe and the shallots were the clear winner, although red onion will do in pinch. Just one small clove of garlic was enough to add depth. We liked red bell pepper since it adds crunch. For heat, we ended up liking the smoky heat of chipotle chile in adobo sauce. I used half of a chile that was chopped fine.

In our research we had seen a peach salsa recipe with olives. Salty Kalamata olives combined well with the sweet peaches, smoky chiles and fresh crunchy shallots and pepper. In terms of herbs, cilantro was the clear winner. Ground spices were tested and discarded as possibilities. The liquid most commonly used in any of these fruit salsas is fruit juice. We tried pineapple, lemon, lime and orange alone and in combination with each other. The lemon juice was too sour; the pineapple and orange clashed with the peach. Lime juice was our favorite by far. I used a quarter cup for our recipe. Salt was the last addition and then we found it best to let the salsa sit for an hour (or up to two days). The flavors meld and improve.

Summer peach salsa

Use only ripe, sweet, juice peaches for the salsa. If you can't find great peaches, skip this recipe.

2 cups peaches, peeled, and cut into 1/4 inch dice, about 2 large
1/3 cup shallots cut into 1/4 inch dice, about 2 large
1/3 cup red bell pepper cut into 1/4 inch dice, about 1/4 medium
1 small clove garlic, minced or pressed
1/4 cup chopped kalamata olives
1 teaspoon finely chopped chipotle chile en adobo, about 1/2 large chile or to taste
1/4 cup lightly packed chopped cilantro leaves
1/2 teaspoon salt or to taste
1/4 cup freshly squeezed lime juice from 2 large limes

Combine all of the ingredients in a small mixing bowl. Mix well and refrigerate for at least one hour or up to two days. Serve as an accompaniment to grilled chicken or fish or with tortilla chips.

Makes about 2 1/2 cups.

Mango Salsa

As with the peaches, the mangoes should be ripe and juicy. For this recipe I used 1 1/2 cups diced mango from one large or 1 1/2 medium sized fruits. We loved the taste and color of black beans with mango and 1/2-cup worked well. You can use drained canned beans, although if you cook them yourself they have much more flavor. Red onion was great with the beans (a half cup), red bell pepper was in, and we preferred Jalapeno pepper to chipotle, just a teaspoon was fine. Cilantro or parsley finished up the recipe along with a quarter cup of lime juice and salt.

Mango and black bean salsa

Use only ripe mangoes for this recipe. It is impossible to remove the pit so slice off the two sides (lengthwise), cutting as close to the pit as possible. Place each side on a cutting surface, skin side down, and cut a cross-hatch pattern with a paring knife (as you would for an avocado). Turn each side inside out and, using the knife, slice the diced sections off from the skin. Finally, trim along the circumference of the pit, remove the peel, and dice the remaining strips of fruit.

1 1/2 cups mango cut into 1/4-inch dice from 1 large or 1 1/2 small mangoes
1/2 cup cooked black beans, either homemade or canned, drained
1/2 cup Bermuda onion cut into 1/4 inch dice, about 1/2 small
1/2 cup red bell pepper cut into 1/4 inch dice, about 1/2 small
1 teaspoon finely minced jalapeno pepper, about 1/2 small
1/4 cup chopped fresh cilantro or parsley leaves
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup freshly squeezed lime juice from about 2 large limes

Combine all of the ingredients in a small mixing bowl. Mix well and refrigerate for at least one hour or up to two days. Serve as an accompaniment to grilled chicken or fish or with tortilla chips.

Makes about 2 1/2 cups

Band concerts

During the past 11 seasons, concert funding has been provided through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates Inc. Each June the Board of Directors of the South Shore Music Circus take under consideration the request of the Recreation Commission, for concert funding, hence, certainty of concerts are not absolute until mid-June each season. The S.S.M.C. donations are matched by a grant from the American Federation of Musicians, N.Y.C.

Based upon continued S.S.M.C. funding, the schedule for the 2004 season is as follows:

Tuesday, July 13, 7:30 p.m., Town Common

Tuesday, July 27, 7:30 p.m., Town Common

Performances will be by the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh. Concerts are free of charge and open to the public. It is suggested bringing lawn chairs or blankets and insect repellent. Call the Recreation Department office at 781-383-4109 to check on the status of concerts if the weather is doubtful.

Getting in swing

Many changes instore for CHS baseballers in '05

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

In terms of prospective talent he'll be getting next year, Cohasset High baseball coach Al Gallotta is pretty forthright, noting "a lot of that depends on what's coming up from the JV team, so it's really too early to tell."

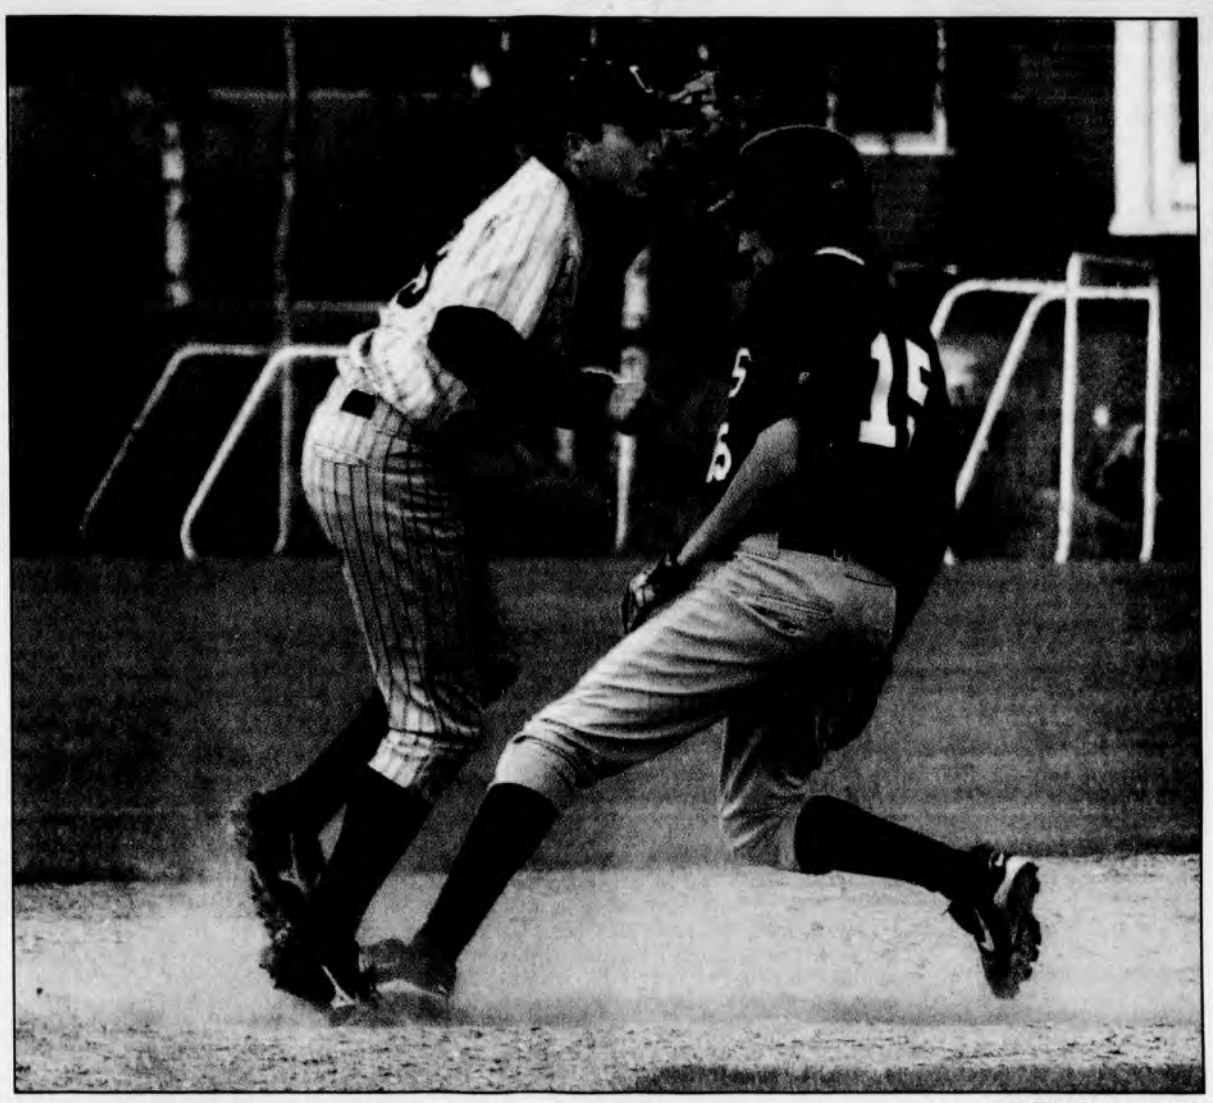
Of course, with only six of 14 varsity players returning next year, the veteran coach would probably look a little silly saying anything else.

In terms of collective attitude, however, the coach could not be more thrilled with what he's got coming back.

"I think the chemistry and mindset on next year's team is going to be fantastic," said the second year CHS head coach and former longtime Archbishop Williams coach. "(JV coach) Bob (Rodgers) keeps telling me I'm going to love working with a lot of the group he had this year."

Continuing that train of thought, it's difficult to not be reminded at least somewhat of the old gag line: The bad news is only five members of this team are coming back next year, but the good news is only five members of this team are coming back next year.

After all, with basically the same core of players, the Skippers have gone 14-21 over the last two seasons, with far fewer than half of those wins coming against South Shore League rivals.



"Nothing against the players who won't be back, but I don't think an infusion of new blood is the worst thing in the world," said Gallotta. "With the leadership I know (captains elect) Ted Straughn and Louis Blanco will provide, and the enthusiasm the new players should bring, I think I'm going to have a very enthusiastic group.

"I'm looking forward to a strong team chemistry, and having kids come out every day willing to work hard and take baseball seriously, wanting to learn and get better. I have a passion for the game, and I want to see the same thing in my players. That's the mindset I'm trying to bring to Cohasset baseball."

Gallotta continues by comparing his program to that of top South Shore teams: "If our players want to be like Hull, Norwell and Abington, they're going to have to be ready to come to play or practice every day.

A hard road for Post 118

Nothing coming easy for Legion baseball team

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The die was probably cast at about the time members of the Cohasset Post 118 Legion team started believing their first win was going to come easy. Silly, silly baseball players.

Nothing had come easy for the local nine to that point. What made them think that was going to change? A quick 8-0 lead on the road over Old Dorchester Post? Silly lads.

"Yeah, we just don't seem to like good fortune," noted coach Mike Duggan.

The host Dorchester squad scored four in the second and four more in the fifth, and the Post 118ers had to sweat out every batter down the stretch to hang on for a 9-8 win, which brings their record today to 1-4-1.

"A win is a win is a win," noted team manager Scott Arnold. "At this point, we'll take 'em any way we get them. I do think this team has it in them to get quite a few more, though. It's early. Hopefully, this will get us going."

The visiting Cohasset squad opened the game played on a chewed up Dorchester Field with a pair of runs in the first inning. Leadoff man Jack O'Leary singled and went to third on a double by Scott Carroll (2-for3, 2 RBI), Joe Duggan (3-for-3, 3 RBI) then brought them both home with a solid single to left.

The big blasts came in the second, as the locals exploded for six runs on six hits, four for extra bases. Catcher Terence O'Brien opened the frame with a triple and then scored on a Jeff Ciulla infield single. An out later, Carroll blasted a 2-run homer.

Duggan started it back up again with a base hit, and he was brought home on a triple by cleanup man Tim Pilczak, who himself came around a few moments later on Ted Straughn's

All-Scholastic girls tennis team

Cohasset's Stone, Graham, team of Caron and Grossman named among area's elite

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Several of the young women you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

While Cohasset High is certainly well represented, with four team members named, there was strong consideration for making it six. The senior second doubles tandem of Emilie Sullivan and Corey Evans went unbeaten in South Shore League play for the second year in a row and earned SSL all-star honors. In fact, many league coaches felt the Sullivan/Evans pairing was the second best in the league, behind only the Skippers first doubles pair of Courtney Caron and Chelsea Grossman, who did receive All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

"Emilie and Corey were all about heart," said Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan. "They weren't the most talented players, but they never gave up and they were extremely intelligent. Corey Evans is probably the smartest player I've ever coached. You talk about a player getting the absolute most out of her abilities, and that was her."

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just nine singles players and four doubles teams, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top female tennis players in Marinerland for this honor:

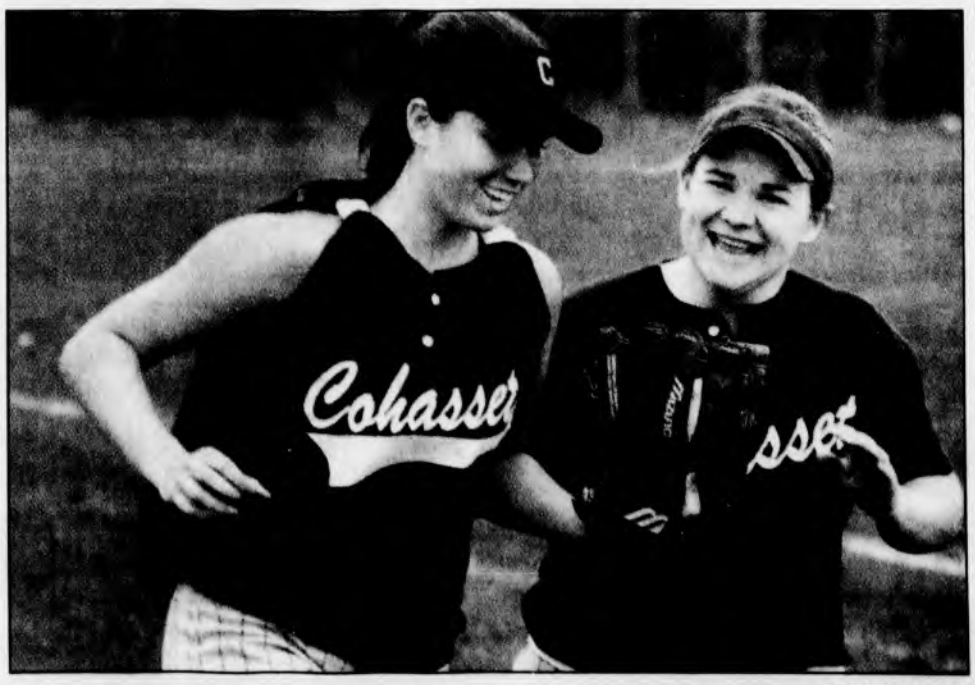
Dream teammate

Cohasset High's Crowley-Buck a true asset both on and off the field

Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Perhaps you have seen her diving for a line drive on the softball field. Or maybe you caught a glimpse of her scoring goals on the boys varsity hockey team. Or possibly you saw her stopping soccer balls like a brick wall for the varsity soccer team. Whatever you've noticed this young wonder woman doing, it doesn't take a particularly keen eye to see sophomore Melissa Crowley-Buck's natural athletic ability.

Melissa emerged as a backbone in the outfield for the varsity softball team this past season. Her total of 17 putouts (catches or throw outs) proves this point. Utilizing her superior communication skills and leadership qualities, Crowley-Buck proved key in holding together one of the toughest defenses in the South Shore League.



Melissa also excelled at the plate, finishing with an overall .295 batting average. She became known in the league for her clutch late game RBIs and high-speed line drives. As the season progressed, coach Deb Bostwick moved her from near the bottom of the batting rotation to lead off hitter.

Even with her natural ability in softball, Crowley-Buck has diligently worked through her life time to improve her skills. Her older brothers introduced her to the game of baseball at Melissa's age six. She continued to play the sport until softball became popular in Cohasset. Encouraged by her friends, Melissa has just finished her fifth year of playing softball.

With all this achievement, one is bound to get cocky. Yet Crowley-Buck has managed to maintain her self admiration at a very reasonable level. In fact, Coach Bostwick described Melissa as "a bit too hard on herself when it comes to improvement".

Crowley-Buck very much wants to sustain her high level of athletic competition in her upcoming junior year. Yet, she also wants to remain a well-rounded person. During the summer, Melissa enjoys sailing, golf, and tennis. She also

A switch in partners did not prevent Courtney Caron from earning her second straight selection as an All-Scholastic doubles player.

Boston Globe All-Scholastic...Boston Herald All-Scholastic...expects to play in several USTA tourneys, both locally and nationally, this summer, including this month's New England championships at Yale University... an excellent student who currently ranks third in her class with a 4.2 GPA...National Honors Society member...has won several academic awards for math and science achievement, including the Rennsalear Medal Scholarship and also the Smith Book Award...plays tennis year round...plays golf for the high school team and has previously played soccer as well for CHS...also enjoys skiing...Special Olympics volunteer...Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan: "There's no question Liz was physically stronger this year and that the work she did in the off season paid off, but the biggest gains were in her mental toughness and confidence. As an underclassman, sometimes she'd give players she was stronger than a window of opportunity to stick around in a match, and sometimes that could burn her. Not this year, though. She was ready every time out and took care of things quickly and efficiently."

Holly Graham – Senior
(Capt.)
Second Singles – Cohasset

Holly Graham

A steady singles performer the last three years who always seemed to be at her best in big matches...had several key wins as a singles player during the Lady Skippers marches to a state championship in 2003 and a sectional championship this spring... unbeaten in South Shore League play this season, playing most of her matches at second singles...South Shore League all-star...strong baseline player...posted a 16-5 record, including 3-2 in postseason...had a huge win over Medfield star Allison Carney, 6-4, 6-4, to clinch Lady Skippers sectional semifinals win... had non-league losses to number twos from Duxbury, Ursuline and Hingham's number two, but won her matches the second time around against those schools... beat Ursuline's number one singles player after losing to their number two earlier in season...Honor Roll student ...also a Mariner all-scholastic in soccer...was previously a member of school swim team...may play college tennis or soccer...will attend the University of Vermont...undecided on major... Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan: "There were a few matches this year that Holly probably would have won if we needed it as a team, but once we clinched the team win she knew there really wasn't a need. In those matches that we thought were going to be tight, that's when Holly was at her best. She'd regularly beat girls who might be more talented than her. She just had the ability to outlast people mentally and wear them down."

Alex Eckhardt -
Senior (Capt.)
First singles - Marshfield

A three-year varsity player for MHS, Eckhardt moved up the ladder from third singles to first this season...Was one of just a pair of seniors on the starting squad and was key to the Lady Rams going 13-3 in the Old Colony League to tie Falmouth for second place...The squad went 14-4 overall and qualified for the postseason tournament...A skilled and smart player, Eckhardt's highlight of the season came when she knocked off the previously unbeaten No. 1 player from Barnstable, the OCL champs and Div. 1 state finalists...As the goaltender for the MHS soccer squad, Eckhardt helped lead the Lady Rams to the Div. 1 South Sectional finals last fall...The OCL All-star plans to continue her soccer career at Stonehill next fall. Marshfield coach Roberta Daniele: "Alex has such great anticipation. She knows where to move before the ball is even hit. She was an excellent leader and really knows how to take charge. She's just an overall fine person."

Terry Duffy - Sophomore
Second singles - Marshfield

Quickly emerging as one of MHS's more talented young athletes, Duffy had a great season at second singles...Just a sophomore, Duffy was Marshfield's most reliable player, going 17-1 during the regular season...She also reached the second round of the State Individual tourney...Her play helped the Lady Rams tie Falmouth for second in the Old Colony League (13-3) and qualify for postseason play...One of the highlights of the season was when she defeated the previously unbeaten No. 2 player from Barnstable, the OCL champs and Div. 1 state finalists...Also a standout basketball player at MHS, the OCL All-star will captain the tennis team as a junior next spring. Marshfield coach Roberta Daniele: "Terry was so dependable. She learns strategy quickly and applies it to the match. She also sizes up her opponent well and plays to their weaknesses. She's the best singles player at coming to the net."

Meaghan Doyle - Junior
First singles - Hingham

A three-year starter at the No. 1 singles spot, Doyle is a three-time Patriot League All-star as well...Since breaking onto the PL tennis scene as a freshman, Doyle has established herself as one of the premier singles players...The junior had only one loss in league this season, splitting matches with Scituate's No. 1 player...Her solid play this season helped lock up a share of the Patriot League title (11-1), the team's fifth in as many seasons...Also competed well at the State Individuals...Hingham went 15-3 overall and qualified for postseason play in the Div. 1 South Sectional tourney. Hingham coach Deb Boles: "It was another solid season for Meaghan. She's very attentive and strong and does what she's supposed to do. She's extremely competitive and always does what she can to help the team."

Chelsea Grossman

This pair continues a legacy of excellence, making the fourth straight Cohasset first doubles pair to earn Mariner All-Scholastic honors...Grossman, a sophomore, replaced Julie Shea (Class of '03) as partner to Caron, a senior, this spring, and the pair went unbeaten in SSL play, their only losses coming in non-league play to Hingham and Duxbury... South Shore League all-stars...advanced to semifinals of state individual tourney, where they fell to Hingham's senior team of Jess Purcell and Diana Trebino, two time Mariner All-Scholastics, in a marathon three set thriller...both played key roles in Lady Skippers runs to Div. 2 state championship in 2003, Grossman filling in regularly at singles and Caron at second doubles, and in run to Eastern Mass. finals this spring...This is Caron's second selection as a Mariner All-Scholastic doubles player...an exceptional athlete who covers the court extremely well, has a powerful overhand shot and a bullet serve...she plans to attend Wilbraham & Munson Academy in Wilbraham, Mass. next year to improve her college options, but she is being looked at seriously by several college tennis coaches... plays tennis year round as a member at the Driftway Club and Weymouth Tennis Club...hoping to play tennis and possibly field hockey as well in college... a sensational field hockey player who led the Lady Skippers in scoring this past fall and was a Mariner All-Scholastic for that sport as well...Chelsea is the sister of three-time tennis All-Scholastic Lindsay Grossman (Class of '03), now at Colgate...Chelsea jumped back and forth quite a bit to third singles this season, and earned one of Skippers two points in Eastern Mass championship loss the Manchester...also like her older sister, Chelsea is a very good basketball player, earning the starting varsity point guard spot this past winter for the Lady Skippers...Chelsea, and Honor Roll student, hopes to play second singles next season and plans to play in several USTA tourneys this summer, as well as in the Bay State Games...plays tennis year round at the Weymouth Tennis Club and Cohasset Tennis Club...Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan: "Chelsea was a swing player for us a lot. We moved her back and fourth between singles and doubles, and she adjusted very well to that. She and Courtney developed a nice chemistry together as the year went on, and got some big wins for us. They were a lot of fun to watch together when they were really clicking."

returnees will be seniors next year, and Gallotta clearly expects them all to set the type of example he espouses here, beginning with Straughn and Blanco.

"I'm thrilled with the potential of Ted and Louis to lead and set a strong example," said Gallotta. "I'm looking for big things from both of them next year both on and off the field."

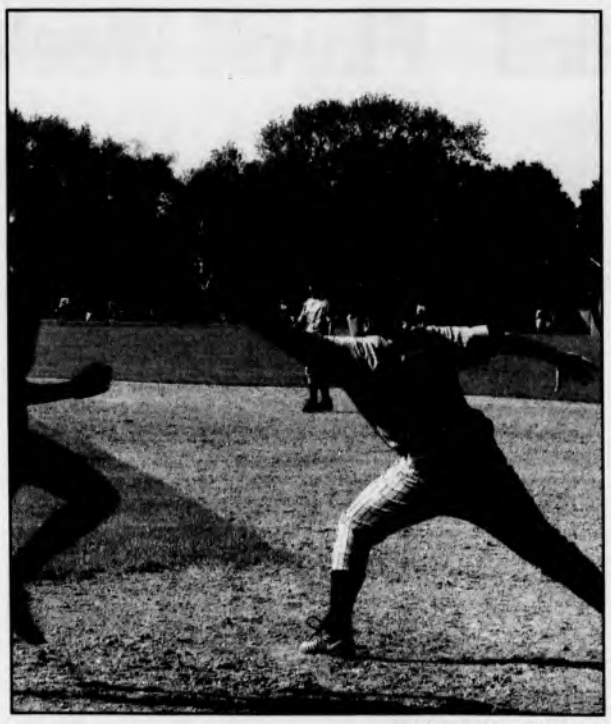
On the field, these two were arguably his most valuable players this season.

Blanco, the team's two-year starting catcher, was the team's lone representative on the South Shore League all-star team. He was far and away the team's leading hitter, batting .436 (24-for-55), with four doubles and three triples, and knocked in a team best 15 runs. Even more impressive, he struck out only one time all season.

"Louis reached a point six or seven games into the season when he just took off offensively and defensively," said Gallotta. "He's always had the raw talent, but he was a little undisciplined. That started to turn around this year. His determination and attitude really came a long way. I think once he started seeing some real success, his confidence started to soar, and he just took off from there. It was a very encouraging thing to see."

As mentioned, this carried over to his defensive responsibilities. Where once Louis seemed to take that part of his game a little for granted, he suddenly started requesting his coaches spend extra time with him working on defensive drills, such as blocking the ball and quick releases.

Straughn-- a serious year round baseball player, playing previously with various AAU teams and now a third year member of the Cohasset Post 118 Legion team—was the Skippers number one pitcher this spring. There were times he was simply overpowering on the mound, as witnessed by the 62 strikeouts in 35 innings pitched, but his lack of consistent control often made it tough for Gallotta to stick with him.



It's hoped he can pick up next season where he left off this one, as he finished with two straight strong outings on the mound, which included a no-hitter against Holbrook in the final week of the regular season.

"Ted takes the game seriously, and I'm sure he'll do all he can to get ready," said Gallotta.

Regardless of how he pitches, Straughn will be an all-star caliber performer in centerfield and should wield a big stick in the middle of the batting order as well. He hit under .250 this year, but the coach thinks that was probably the result of a cold start and then some over-thinking at the plate.

The other returnees are current juniors Matt Casey, Tim Pilczak and Jim DeGiacomo and sophomore Chris Bryan.

Casey turned out to be a pleasant surprise this year, batting a respectable .289 while playing solidly in the outfield.

Pilczak struggled a bit at the plate for the Skippers this spring, but he is presently tearing it up for the Cohasset Legion team, which generally faces top high school pitchers. He hit a home run over the fence at Scituate High, last week, and has been batting out of the cleanup spot the last several games. Of course, this does not sound like it surprises Gallotta as all.

"I think Tim is a good hitter and good baseball player," said Gallotta. "It just didn't come together for him this year at the plate. But I loved his versatility. I could put him in the outfield one day and third base the next, and you could pretty much count on a solid performance."

Pilczak seems likely to start at third next year, filling the void created by the graduation of Mike Dooley.

DeGiacomo shows promise as a hitter and played some first base this season.

Bryan was the team's third starter. Like Straughn, he did his best pitching toward the end of the season, an encouraging sign.

The players going the way of the caps and gowns are Dooley, Jon Downing, John Andrade, Tim Anton, Jeff Barrett, Dan Tarpey and Sean Connelly.

Andrade was a solid glove man at shortstop.

Dooley was the team's number two pitcher and regular third baseman, and finished third in the team batting race (.291).

Downing also saw some time on the mound and saw a good deal of time at second base.

Barrett was the team's starting first baseman.

Andrade, who had not played since his freshman year, was perhaps the team's most pleasant surprise this season, as he played solidly in the outfield and finished second on the team in hitting (.382).

Junior Jack Carroll, the team's backup catcher this season, will also not be back next season, as his family is moving out of town.

Seeming the likeliest to fill these voids, according to Gallotta, are junior Andrew Lovallo sophomores Brian Straughn (Ted's brother), Brendan Barrett (Jeff's brother) and Chris Ofsthun and freshman Nick Zappolo.

Barrett, a first baseman/outfielder, led the 7-7 JV team in hitting this spring, batting an even .500.

The slick fielding Zappolo may well compete for a regular spot on the left side of the infield and, if he succeeds, it certainly appears he has enough in his bat (.476) to keep him there.

Straughn was the ace of the JV squad. He was solid defensively at both first and third base when he was not on the mound and hit a very respectable .342.

Ofsthun hit .378 and performed well in the outfield.

Lovallo, who received a couple of varsity call-ups over the course of the season, likewise showed himself to be a good fielding outfielder.

"Obviously, we'll need at least a few guys to step up from the JV team," said Gallotta. "Maybe it'll be these guys. They look ready to step up, but there could be a few surprises in there. Maybe someone will really pick it up over the next several months. You just don't know."

Youth lady laxers finish season at Jamboree

The Cohasset youth girls lacrosse teams played six games at the first-ever South Shore Girls Lacrosse League Jamboree in Abington on June 19, coming away with three wins, two losses and a tie.

The 15-and-Under girls (grades 7-8) - playing shorthanded due to soccer playoffs - saw a two-year unbeaten streak end in the season's final game, with a comeback that fell just short.

In the opening contest, Gabriella Flibotte scored three goals and Paige Strecker two, the last on a direct-free position with moments left to secure a 5-4 win. Thomson Jaffe made three stops in the net to backstop the win.

Next, Cohasset played a winless Abington team, and after allowing the event hosts to stay close for the first third of the game, rolled to a 6-2 win. Katelyn Ryan, Katie Gaumer and Madeline Leahy each scored twice, with Gaumer also picking up an assist. Gabriella Flibotte played in the Cohasset nets, stopping five Abington shots and getting strong defensive help from Natalie Hunt and Liz Tetrault.

In the team's final game of the Jamboree and the season, Cohasset fell behind Braintree 3-0 early in the game, then dominated the rest of the way. Goals by Katie Gaumer and Katelyn Ryan made the score 3-2, and Cohasset proceeded to hit two goalposts, the crossbar and to have a score called back. Braintree finally broke free for a late goal to salt the game away 4-2. Flibotte - the team's leading scorer, but the day's substitute goalie - made two stops in the net.

Cohasset's 15-U team finished the season at 9-1-1, particularly impressive after most of the players from the team that went 11-0-1 in 2003 moved on to play high school ball.

Gabriella Flibotte led the team's scoring parade for the season with 33 goals and 4 assists for 37 points. Other scoring totals for the team this season include: Katelyn Ryan (12 goals, 2 assists, 14 points), Caitlin Mahoney (11-1-12), Katie Gaumer (10-2-12), Maura Barnes (9-3-12), McKenna Teague (5-4-9), Paige Strecker (3-3-6), Madeline Leahy (5-1-6), Grace Clougherty (2-1-3), Kaley Madge (2-1-3), Jenny Cahill (2-0-2) Rebecca Evans (2-0-2), Lesen Haracz (1-0-1), Sara Brown (0-1-1) and Thomson Jaffe (0-1-1).

Jaffe was the team's primary goaltender, stopping 42 shots against 34 goals surrendered for a .553 save percentage. Flibotte made 14 stops versus 7 goals against for a .667 save percentage, and Grace Clougherty and Madeline Leahy combined for two saves against four goals in extremely limited goaltending duty.

The 13-and-Under girls teams combined to play in the Jamboree and, like their older counterparts, were shorthanded due to soccer and all-star lacrosse conflicts. That did not stop the team from playing three spirited games, starting with a 4-4 tie against Abington, in which Hannah Burgess scored twice, with Lindsey Davis and Kaci Kucinski adding solo scores.

Next it was a tough and physical Braintree squad, and Cohasset's only goals game on direct-free positions - penalty shots - from Chelsea Silvia, Leigh Collins and Paige Smith. Olivia Murphy made three saves in the net, but Cohasset was unable to come all the way back and dropped the contest by a 5-3 score.

Finally, Cohasset took on Plymouth to close the season, with Sophie Bertolami scoring twice, Chelsea Silvia once and Whitney Jaffe blasting one home near the end to salt away the game. Leigh Collins, playing in the goal for the first time ever, made three saves to preserve a 4-2 victory.

The Cohasset Blue team finished the season with a 5-1 record, the White team ended 3-0-2 and the two teams played 5 games combined to a record of 1-3-1, for a total record of 9-3-3 on the year. The scorebook for those games shows Isabelle Franklin as the leading scorer for the 13-U girls with 24 goals and 1 assist for 25 points. Other scorers included Hannah Burgess (14-2-16), Amy Meikleham (12-2-14), Lindsay Allard (11-1-12), Maddy Altholtz (10-1-11), Sophie Bertolami (9-2-11), Kaci Kucinski (9-1-10), Chelsea Silvia (6-1-7), Olivia Sullivan (6-0-6) Whitney Jaffe (5-1-6), (Leigh Collins (5-0-5), Anna Michalowski (4-0-4), Paige Smith (4-0-4), Kaleigh Teague (3-1-4), Lindsey Davis (2-2-4), Kathleen Kelly (3-0-3), Bridget Cahill (2-1-3), Polly Murray (2-0-2), Elizabeth Saltonstall (2-0-2), Abby Faulkner (0-2-2), Lindsay MacNaught (1-0-1), Mimi Mahoney (1-0-1), Missy Seas (1-0-1), Katy Baker (0-1-1) and Lauren Blaze (0-1-1).

In the Cohasset net, Thomson Jaffe stopped 35 shots against 34 goals, for a save percentage of .507. Her younger sister Whitney Jaffe - splitting time in the net for the Blue team - made 20 saves against 16 goals for a .555 save percentage. Olivia Murphy stopped 11 of 28 shots for a .400 save percentage and Leigh Collins made her cameo appearance in the season's final game, stopping three of the five shots she faced.

Major League Baseball– Playoff Week

The playoffs began last week with some exciting action. The first place Mets earned a bye in the first round, so the action centered around the remaining six teams.

The Cardinals faced the Red Sox on Barnes field. Redbird John Kearney and Red Sox Jordan Berry locked horns in a classic pitching dual for the first three innings. With Kearney on the mound, and Berry at the plate, with two outs, Kearney challenged Berry with a fastball that Berry stroked beyond the fence for a two run home run. In the next inning, on a fielders choice, Kearney got an RBI as Todd Emanuello crossed the plate to score. The score was 2-1, Sox.

The Red Sox bats came alive in the next inning as they scored six runs. But, the game wasn't over. In the next inning, the Cardinals brought fifteen batters to the plate and scored ten runs to go ahead by two. Dan Sullivan came up with a clutch hit to lead the rally. Aggressive base running served the Cardinals well.

Todd Emanuello got the last Sox batter swinging leaving the bases loaded. The Cardinals earned a spot in the next round. Retiring Red Sox players Jordan Berry and Jodi Rosano leave a legacy of playing hard to win. Sean Ahearn, Shane Cummings, Terrence Durkin and Nick Cannon also are hanging up their little league cleats this year and will be missed for their dedication and team work. Jeff Cavanaro, Jack Carrier, Peter McKenna, Kyle Livingstone, Garret Canney, Luke Ernst and Sam Richardson will lead Red Sox Nation next year.

In other first round action, the Athletics had a decisive win over the Dodgers.

The A's broke the game open in the third inning with a Johnny Maher three run home run to extend the lead to 4-1. Brendan Doonan registered a grand slam home run in the bottom of the fourth inning to secure the win. For the Dodgers, veteran Justin Yeager pitched well for the men in blue against the hard hitting A's. Shortstop Dean McNary stopped many an A from getting on base with strong fielding. Tyler Judge was strong at the plate for the Dodgers. Chris Brown began the game behind the plate, catching for Yeager. Brownie kept control of the field of play, not allowing many A's to steal. Departing twelve year olds Chris Brown, Justin Yeager, Jake Wheelwright, Terry MacCormack, Tyler Judge, and Conner Queenan, will be missed for their leadership and hard work. Dean and Mitch McNary, Patrick McCormack, Johnny McGoldrick, Jay Salerno, Vincent Kennedy and Jeremy Cundall, will be the foundation for a strong and mighty Dodger team next year.

The last game of the first round was a Pirate-Ranger match up. Eamon Davis pitched solidly for the Rangers and had two doubles. Thomas Buckley pitched for the Pirates. The Rangers, through consistent play offensively and defensively won the game. For the Pirates, Alex Evans kept the scoring threat alive by getting on base three times for the black & gold. Austin Meyers anchored center field, while twelve year old Paul Guinee took charge of left field. Paul had back to back strong games for the Pirates, with solid play in their last regular season game and in this game. The Pirates retired several twelve year olds at the conclusion of this game, with the traditional run around the bases.

Derek Youngman, Sean MacCarthy, Paul Guinee, Christopher Hayes, Austin Meyers, Geoff Evans, Joe Leighton, Chris Walsh and Tom Buckley, each ran the base path to the cheers and support of players, fans, and parents. All of the retiring players will be missed for their contributions on and off the field. Leading the Pirates for next year will be Alex Evans, Robbie Hill, Patrick Lewis, and Travis Craven.

In round two of the playoffs, the A's met the Rangers in a best of three series. The Rangers are the only team to have beaten the A's twice during the regular season.

Solid pitching, defensive playing and strong hitting allowed the A's to win the series in two games. Veterans Brendan Doonan (six hits, three RBI's, one home run), Johnny Maher (five hits, four RBI's), and Jack Murphy (four hits, one RBI) led the charge. Great play in the field came from EJ Culhane, Jake Kissick, and Andy McKenna at short stop, Thomas Barrett made a great catch at second base in the second game to slow down a Ranger rally. Rookie Chris Murphy had a spectacular catch in right field.

Graham Stevenson and Jamie Faber shared pitching duties for the Rangers, with Chase Stebbins coming in relief in both games. Veteran Eamon Davis controlled the infield for the Rangers with his quick glove and precision throwing. Catcher John Giuggio didn't let much get by him, preventing the A's from stealing extra bases.

Dean Driscoll and Eric Wasel were in command in the outfield. In the first game, Driscoll made a picture perfect running two handed catch in left field to end an A's offensive threat. Eric Wasel grabbed a high pop up in deep right field that prevented a run from scoring. Graham Steveson on first base, turned a double play grabbing a line drive and then tagging the base runner out, who was off the bag. Charlie Neaves made a big league catch at third base in the second game, preventing the runners from advancing. Retiring players Eamon Davis, Dean Driscoll, John Giuggio, Graham Stevenson, Chase Stebbins, Ian Quinlan and PJ Pergola ran the bases at the end of the game, only to be joined by their team in a team Ranger run. Returning players for the Rangers include rookie sensation Jamie Faber, Christian Allard, Eric Wasel, Robbie Mahoney, Charlie Neaves, and Jeff Charles.

The Mets and the Cardinals took the series to three games this week. In the first game, the Cardinals came out on top behind a John Kearney grand slam home run. The mighty Mets won decisively in the second game, tying up the series 1-1. Mets rookie phenom Drew Cobin pitched shut out ball. The deciding game was played on a beautiful evening with balloons, signs and banners adorning Barnes field for both teams. Mets veteran Robby McCunney pitched five strong innings for the Mets, striking out eight. Robert Jones came in relief in the sixth inning for the save. In the first inning leadoff Cardinal Todd Emanuello planted the second pitch of the game just beyond the flag pole for a home run. Kevin O'Connell drove in a second run in the inning, as his hit dropped into short center field. John Kearney took to the mound for the Cardinals and pitched five solid innings, striking out eleven. Kearney also registered an RBI triple.

After Dorchester had cut that lead in half with four runs in the home half of the second, Ciulla scored the run that turned out to be the difference in the game in the top of the third. He opened the frame with a double and then came around to score on a two-out Duggan base knock.

After the tough second inning, Cohasset starter Greg Malley settled down to throw a scoreless third and forth, but Dorchester got it rolling again in the fifth and hung another four spot on him, making it a 9-8 game. O'Leary was brought in to put out the fire, though, and he came through with the last out.

O'Leary was also strong in the sixth and seventh frames, keeping Dorchester off the board to pick up a quality save.

Milton 9, Cohasset 2

Not that it much matters, but, throw out the first two innings, and this was a 2-2 game.

Jeff Radding was put into a tough spot when he was given the ball last minute to take the place of scheduled starter Joe Duggan, who had trouble getting loose in pre-game warm-ups.

Radding had trouble keeping the ball down, but the defense behind him didn't provide a whole lot of support. The end result in this Monday night game at Scituate High was a 7-0 lead by league leading Milton (5-0) after two innings.

"We put Jeff in a tough spot," conceded Duggan. "No one wants to go in an pitch in a situation like that, but he stepped up and took the ball. A few more plays defensively, and his showing wouldn't have looked all that bad on paper."

Duggan came on in the second to induce the final out after four runs had crossed, and then was solid the rest of the way. The former SHS star and current Mass Maritime sophomore-to-be gave up only two hits and one unearned run in his first four full innings of work before getting touched up for a run on three hits and a walk in the seventh.

Cohasset hitters made a lot of good contact in the game, but the defense they saw made it a whole lot easier to understand why Milton sits atop the Zone 6 standings. Pilczak and O'Leary twice hit the ball hard, but were left with nothing to show for it at the end of the night.

Cohasset finished with eight hits and walk, with second baseman Mike Barba (2-for-3) the only player to reach base more than once.

Only once all game did the Post 118ers string together multiple hits, and that resulted in both of their runs. Straughn, O'Brien and Barba opened the home half of the second with singles to load the bases. Kevin Signorelli plated Straughn with a fielder's choice to short, and O'Brien scored when he and Signorelli successfully pulled off a first and third double steal. That would make it a 7-2 game, but that would be it for the locals' offense on the night.

Duggan lined a shot off the fence in left in the third and Barba and Ciulla had hits in the fourth, as the hitters started to catch up to the Milton's hard throwing starter. That's when Milton's coach switched to a junkball hurler. The altered look seemed to give the Cohasset hitters trouble, at least the first time around the order, as they had just one hit over the final three innings.

The team had Tuesday's scheduled game at Canton postponed to this coming Tuesday. They were slated to host Weymouth at Milliken Field in Cohasset yesterday and will play at West Roxbury tomorrow under the lights at Billings Field. This will be followed by four games in four days: a hosting of Morrisette at Scituate High Sunday (5:45 p.m. start), a trip to Adams Field to take on Quincy Monday (5:45 p.m.) and then Canton on Tuesday (5:45), and finally back at Scituate High on Wednesday, with Stoughton coming to town (5:45).

Manager Scott Arnold-- who basically started the Post 118 team from scratch more than a decade ago and was largely a solo act for many years after that (both on and off the field)-- has not been able to make as many games this season as he would have liked, as he's recently started a new job as a restaurant manager.

Arnold continues to take care of the administrative end of things, though, and former team standouts Brian Woods and Mike Gulinello have come on board to help Duggan on the field.

Cohasset's Relay for Life raises $136K

Maddie Dillon, center (with hands together), is surrounded by some of the members of her team from Foster School in Hingham, the "Flipping Rainbow Horses" at the Relay for Life.

playing on the same side: the one fighting to put an end to the dreaded disease forever.

Maddie, who has leukemia, was one of hundreds of cancer survivors at the event that helped raise a total of $136,817 to support the American Cancer Society's programs of research, education, and service to patients and their families.

Young, old and in between, those at the Cohasset event now in its eighth year – all have a personal story to tell. Some have lost loved ones and friends, others are living with the disease but they all share the same determination of spirit.

For Gordon Behrer of Quincy, the relay is a community oriented support system not only for survivors but for family members as well. It's a cause that is close to Behrer's heart. He lost his mother to cancer some 30 years ago when there was no support system.

"The relay not only raises money but it shows those affected by cancer are not alone," he said.

In the months leading up to the Relay, participants collect pledges. The event itself revolves around team members taking turns walking laps for 24 hours. Luminaries — bags inscribed with a personal message and containing a candle — are sold for $5 each and are available to the entire community to purchase. This year 3,500 luminaries surrounded the track during a special ceremony Friday night. The event also includes a survivors' lap — with 60 taking part this year — and "Taste of the Relay" in which area restaurants donate their time and food for the event.

Mary Shepherd of the American Cancer Society said moving the Cohasset Relay from May to June this year increased participation. May was just too cold for the overnight event during which many stay over in tents installed on the middle-high school athletic field.

"I don't remember seeing so many people at the opening ceremonies and at the luminaria," Shepherd said.

Relays were also held in the spring in other South Shore towns including Braintree, Marshfield, Abington and Plymouth. About 25 Relays were held this year in eastern Massachusetts including Cape Cod and the islands.

Laurie Hall, who captained the Scituate Dream Team with her husband that raised about $4,000, wore a button with a photo of her friend and former teammate Mary Beth Anderson, 39, also of Scituate, who lost her courageous battle with cancer in May.

Hall said Anderson chose to say she was living with cancer and accepted experimental treatments and anything that came her way. "They ran out of medical options for her," Hall said.

Hall lost her dad to cancer in 1989 and her 34-year-old sister to cancer eight years ago. At 80, her mother, who is a breast cancer survivor, walked the Survivors' Lap.

"This is a cause I'm passionate about," Hall said.

The Scituate Dream Team's colors – red, white and blue – were Anderson's idea, Hall said. Hall's son, Justin, led the Scituate Teen Team that stayed all night and raised about $700.

"We're looking for the day when we don't have to come out and do this anymore," Hall said about her hopes for a cure.

The festival-like atmosphere included a DJ who encouraged everyone to join in the Macarena and Limbo when they weren't walking laps.

Pitching in for a student with cancer is not new at Foster School. Maddie Dillon walked the Survivors' Lap with Katie Egan, now a student at Hingham High School. When Katie was at Foster School she was diagnosed with cancer and the school came together with a Relay team for her, "The Yellow Polka Dotted Penguins."

Maddie's grandparents, Charles and Jean Kachin, both cancer survivors also walked. "Everyone here is fighting for the cure," said Connolly, the vice principal. Connolly said Maddie's team raised about $7,000.

The Relay results are as follows: Highest Individual Fundraiser was Ed Lappen of Cohasset (for the second year in a row). Highest Team Fundraiser was the "Impossible Dream Team" from Hingham. Highest Team Fundraiser (Average) was "Pilgrim Difference" (Pilgrim Cooerative Bank). This award takes each team total and divides by number of members to put everyone on a level playing field. Best Decorated Campsite was "Hopeful Steps" of Cohasset. Most Team Spirit was a tie between "The Happy Kids" of Hingham and "Flipping Rainbow Horses", also of Hingham.

Natalie Hunt, Grace Clougherty, Maura Barnes, Lindsay Hill, Madeline Leahy, Katie Gaumer and Sarah Goggins (in front) make up the Lobsters relay team that raised money to help fight cancer.

Ross Lieb-Lappen brings Relay to Middlebury College

Receives special award for effort

More than two years ago, while still in high school, he began volunteering on the "Relay for Life" committee in his hometown.

Ross Lieb-Lappen, of Cohasset, received a 2004 Middlebury College Public Service Leadership award at a special dinner during his spring term at the small liberal arts college in Vermont.

Of the record-breaking 56 students nominated for volunteerism by service agencies, schools and individuals in the Middlebury area, Lieb-Lappen and five others garnered special recognition for their service contributions on campus and in the greater community.

Lieb-Lappen was nominated for his service to the American Cancer Society's national fundraising campaign called "Relay for Life." More than two years ago, while still in high school, he began volunteering on the "Relay for Life" committee in his hometown. A first-year student at Middlebury this year, Lieb-Lappen decided to bring the event to college.

Serving as the co-chair, he and his committee of 20 college students, faculty and staff members put together 42 teams, comprised of members of both the college and town communities, to participate in the walkathon on campus April 30. The event was an overwhelming success, raising $80,000 for cancer research.

The Public Service Leadership Award prize was a $300 donation to be made by the college on behalf of each award-winner to a nonprofit agency to be designated by the student. Lieb-Lappen chose to donate his prize to the American Cancer Society "Relay for Life."

The College's public service leadership awards were initiated in 1993 by Patrick Durkin, a 1979 Middlebury graduate who continues to underwrite the award program. Each year in February or March, the call for nominations goes out to the community to begin the selection process for the awards. Decisions are based on students' demonstrated dedication to a cause, level of help toward making a positive change for an individual or for the community, and initiative toward increasing the awareness and involvement of other Middlebury College students in public service. Each nomination is returned to the College's Alliance for Civic Engagement Office and reviewed by a committee of College students, faculty, and staff.

Cohasset resident Ross Liep-Lappen, center, receives a Public Service Leadership Award from Middlebury President John M. McCardell, Jr., and Director of the Middlebury College Alliance for Civic Management Tiffany Nourse Sargent at the college's annual public service award dinner.

Retiring Redbirds are John Kearney, Dan Sullivan, Alex Kinneally, Todd Emanuello, Ian Porter, Sebastien Braga, and Kevin O'Connell. Alex Harper, Patrick Kearney, Vinnie Calorio, Ben Campbell, Brendan Horigan and John Collins will proudly wear the Cardinal red next year. Cohasset Youth Lacrosse Camp

This one-week camp for boys and girls is designed to work on fundamental lacrosse skills, so that young players are prepared to deal with game situations next year. Each day will include drills designed to improve a player's stick-handling abilities, foot work and positioning, conditioning and stamina and knowledge of the game.

The camp is designed particularly to work with new and less-skilled players, helping them to decide in a relaxed setting whether lacrosse is a sport they want to play during the school year.

This camp is for players entering grade 3 through 6 in the fall. While the program is run by the Cohasset Recreation Department, it is open to players from other communities.

Chuck Jaffe, who runs the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program, heads the camp. Jaffe started Cohasset's youth program in 1996 and coached boys' teams for six years until starting the girls' program in 2002. He has been a player and coach in a variety of programs around the country, ranging from his days as a player at the University of Michigan, through being an all-star player and coach with his Tampa Bay Lacrosse Club, the Lehigh Valley Killian's Red Lacrosse Club and more. He still plays regularly with the Brine/Atlantic Sportswear Club in some of the elite master's tournaments around the world.

Jaffe will be assisted by Jennifer Palmer of the Cohasset girls' program and several former Cohasset High School players. The camp's player-coach ratio will be no more than 10-1. The camp is held the week of July 19-23, and starts at 7:30 a.m. on all days. The camp ends at 10 a.m. on all days but Friday, when it runs until 10:30. The camp is held rain or shine — in all conditions except lightning — and parents should be prepared to retrieve children who have been playing in rain or rolling in mud.

Players need full equipment. For girls, this means a stick, goggles and a mouth-guard. For boys, it means a helmet (including mouthpiece), gloves, arm and shoulder pads and a stick.

Parents: The camp's director believes strongly in having properly sized equipment. For boys, that means sticks may be cut to 36 inches in length. Girls' sticks are sized based on their body size. Counselors will cut sticks for those players who need it, so parents providing their children with a stick borrowed from a friend, neighbor or relative should use tape to label the stick with the words "Do not cut," and should inform counselors. Players should bring their own water, juice or sports drinks to each day's sessions. Registration is $85. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109 for more information or to register.

Henry David Thoreau makes Cohasset stop on Saturday

By John Galluzzo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The visit by Thoreau is just the kickoff event for the 2004 Back Roads of the South Shore Open House Day.

More than a 150 years after he last left the South Shore, Henry David Thoreau is set to make his return.

On his way to visit Cape Cod in 1849, the Concord native wound his way down the coast from Hull, collecting his thoughts and observations for a book that would be posthumously published under the name of his intended destination, Cape Cod. As fate would have it, he passed through Cohasset in the aftermath of the town's worst ever maritime tragedy, the destruction of the brig St. John, which carried nearly 100 Irish immigrants to their deaths within sight of their new home after a transatlantic journey. Thoreau's observations of that day offer the most detailed account of the wake of that tragedy.

This Saturday, June 26, at 10 a.m.., Henry David Thoreau returns to Cohasset, in the form of living history interpreter Richard Smith of the Concord Museum, to bring back the memories of the tragedy of the St. John, through a reading of selected passages from Cape Cod. After the reading, Thoreau/Smith will lead a walk to the Cohasset Central Cemetery and the marker placed in memory of the St. John victims 60 years later by the Ancient Order of Hibernians, a Celtic cross overlooking the harbor where the tragedy occurred.

Then, the day is yours.

The visit by Thoreau is just the kickoff event for the 2004 Back Roads of the South Shore Open House Day, this year featuring maritime history sites from Hingham to Plymouth.

"We are very excited to be able to bring the Maritime Trail Open House Day to the people of the region," said Patrick Browne, executive director of the Duxbury Rural and Historical Society and chairman of the Back Roads of the South Shore operating committee. "Maritime history is one common thread that ties all of our towns together, yet each community made its own specific contribution that makes moving from museum to museum that much more interesting."

At 11 a.m.., maritime history sites in Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Duxbury, Kingston and Plymouth will simultaneously open, ad will remain open free of charge until 4 p.m..

Some sites are "naturals" for a maritime open house day. The Hull Lifesaving Museum tells the stories of America's heroic early Coast Guardsmen, the men of the United States Life-Saving Service and the volunteer lifesavers of the Humane Society of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The Cohasset Maritime Museum focuses on the community's sailing past and the story of Minot's Light, while holding a treasure trove of local artifacts. The Scituate Maritime & Irish Mossing Museum covers everything from shipbuilding to shipwrecks, with lighthouses, lifesaving and the gathering of Irish moss thrown in between. This year the Scituate museum features a brand new exhibit on the steamer Portland, designed and hung in coordination with the Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Duxbury's King Caesar House brings to life the stories of Ezra Weston and his shipping and shipbuilding empire on Powder Point, while Kingston's Jones River Marine Ecology Center, a budding and growing attraction on the South Shore, shines light on the early boatbuilding efforts of George Shiverick and others. The site overlooks the land where the brig Independence was built for naval combat in the American Revolution. The Ecology Center's mission is to repopulate the Jones River with both fish and boats, through scientific study of the river's condition and research into its historical past.

Other sites would be less likely to open on a Maritime Trail Open House Day at first glance, but instead offer some hidden stories. Hingham's Old Ordinary, while most logically thought of as a stagecoach stop and tavern, will reveal the story of the ill-fated bark Kadosh, wrecked off Hull in 1872. Due to a washout of the road to Hull Village, the victims of that wreck were transported to Hingham for burial. Marshfield's Winslow House and Kingston's Major John Bradford House, both 17th century dwellings, have seen a lot over the years, from seafarers to shipbuilders to money-making merchants. Pilgrim Hall, America's oldest continually operating museum, is the home of the 17th century keel of the Sparrowhawk and the story of the Mayflower.

"There's no doubt there's a lot to see on the South Shore," said Paula Fisher, marketing manager for the Plymouth County Development Council and Convention and Visitors Bureau. "The great thing about the Back Roads group is that they are showing us different ways to take the same road, Route 3A, and to not see the same thing twice. Last year it was house museums. This year it's maritime history."

"This has been a wonderful collaboration once again this year," said Norman Tucker, president of Kingston's Jones River Village Historical Society, stewards of the Major John Bradford House. "We hope that many people will take advantage of this year's open house day, and that they learn something they didn't know at every stop."

For more information on the Back Roads of the South Shore Maritime Trail, visit www.southshorebackroads.org or call Patrick Browne at 781-934-6106.

handbags, and pottery, and no two booths were alike.

Colorful beaded jewelry by EK Designs was on display, as well as pearl jewelry and Japanese rice paper jewelry. For the garden, there were glass hummingbird feeders, copper garden sprinklers, and cement castings in the shape of seahorses, sand dollars, and starfish.

There were many craft exhibits for children as well, ranging from clothing to hand-painted stools in the shape of fish, to stuffed animals and dolls.

Being an arts festival, there were many pieces of hanging art on display, many of which were created by Cohasset residents. Helen J. Gallop's piece, "Chimneys and Rooftops of France," won third place for watercolors. JoAnne Chittick's watercolor, "Beagle Dreams" won honorable mention.

Other Cohasset residents who participated include Anthony W. Lanier, who submitted a color photograph titled "Mill with Border Street Bridge." The photo depicted the scene at the Mill River Boatyard, including the dilapidated Eastwick building, from underneath the Border Street Bridge. Mary Lou Clark's oil painting, "Splash," was a mix of greens and blues behind one single boat.

On the other side of the art tent, a stage was set up for entertainment. Saturday afternoon, The Brown Sisters, including Abby,10, Sarah, 8, and Audrey,6 shared their musical talents while singing and playing guitar. The three sang many songs in perfect harmony, including "Amazing Grace," and the Alison Krauss rendition of "When you say nothing at all."

In the children's tent, young visitors at the festival were invited to participate in arts and crafts projects, including making coffee filter butterflies. Others left with brightly colored face paint adorning both cheeks.

Artwork created by area students was also on display. Osgood first grader Isabelle Dunne's creation, "Cat on a Stool" won first prize. Other young artists from Cohasset with pieces in the show include Osgood first grader Alexandra Raymond for her piece titled, "Monet's Pond," which featured a three-dimensional paper frog jumping off the page, and Deer Hill fourth grader Alec Hurd's sculpture of the Statue of Liberty.

There was an behind-the-scenes project at the festival this year as well, as it was the first time a recycling initiative had been started. "It went very well," said Kennedy, adding Secretary of Environmental Affairs and Cohasset resident Ellen Roy Herzfelder gave a speech Friday, about the grant the South Shore Recycling Cooperative received which made the recycling effort possible. Kennedy said the initiative wouldn't have been possible without the help of co-op chairman Merle Brown. Not only did he help initiate the project, "He brought down some Boy Scouts," who helped with the effort, said Kennedy, and overall it was a very easy transition to add recycling to the rest of the events of the day. She said younger residents also became involved as there was a recycling poster contest in the children's tent and it was "bustling."

Although the festival only wrapped up Sunday, Tuesday afternoon Kennedy said she and others at the Art Center were already discussing next year's events. With a 50th anniversary on the horizon, she said it's important to start writing down what worked this year, so it's not forgotten by the time next year's events roll around. Overall, she said the weather cooperated, there was a great turnout, and she couldn't have asked for more. "Everything went very smoothly," she said.

CAUSES OF HEARING LOSS

Hearing loss affects more than 28 million Americans. Among the main causes of these cases of hearing loss are at least one hundred hereditary syndromes. Another main cause of hearing loss is infections, such as bacterial meningitis and German measles. There is also acoustic trauma produced by sudden or long-term exposure to loud sounds, particularly common among construction workers, farmers, musicians, tree cutters, airport workers, and those in the armed forces. Acoustic trauma causes hearing damage to approximately 100,000 people annually. Prescription drugs, such as the antibiotics streptomycin and tobramycin, cause hearing damage to about 80,000 individuals per year. And presbycusis (age-related hearing loss) affects about one-third of people between 65 and 75 and nearly half of those over 75.

Fortunately, there are many ways to help people with hearing loss. Although only very few of the problems causing hearing loss can be improved by medication or surgery, most people do benefit from hearing instruments. By allowing a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER to examine you, you can discover the exact nature of your hearing loss and find out the recommended appropriate treatment. And although even the most advanced hearing instruments cannot restore hearing, they can improve your hearing considerably. See what we mean at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. PH: 781-337-1144.

P.S. Paint solvents and anti-cancer drugs such as cisplatin are responsible for nearly 80,000 cases of hearing loss in this country annually.

When Dewey Bunnell, Gerry Beckley and Dan Peek — founding members of the folk rock band "America" which plays the South Shore Music Circus on July 1 — first met in 1967, they were high school students growing up on a US Air Force base in England where their fathers were stationed. Living just outside London, the young men spent their free time at rock concerts. Just four years later, however, the trio had moved from the audience to the stage. Signed to a Warner Bros. recording contract, they charted their first number one single, with Bunnell's "A Horse With No Name," had a million-selling album, and won the "Best New Artist" Grammy Award.

"We all met at Central High School and started going to concerts by people like Jimi Hendrix and the Rolling Stones. We got a sense of the British scene in the clubs and concert halls and a feel for American music of the time on the base. We were really influenced by the Beatles and the Beach Boys and we started playing dance music in our own band, which was really more like a teen club act. We always enjoyed vocal harmony, so after trying to apply those harmonies to the pop songs we loved, we just started to write our own music," said singer, songwriter and guitarist Bunnell, 52, by telephone last week from a tour stop in Dubuque.

In just the next dozen years, what followed was a string of top-selling albums that featured two number one, seven top-ten, and eleven top-forty hits including "Sister Golden Hair," "Tin Man," "I Need You," "Ventura Highway," and "You Can Do Magic." In addition to their self-titled 1971 debut album, America's string of million selling records includes Homecoming (1972), Hat Trick (1973), Holiday (1974), Hearts (1975), History (1975), Hideaway (1976), and View From The Ground (1982). Although Bunnell and Beckley can take credit for writing most of America's 200-song catalogue, legendary Beatles producer, George Martin, was also key to the success of the group in the 1970s.

"We have had many great experiences over all these years and met many fantastic people, but perhaps the biggest thrill has been our opportunity to know and work with George Martin," recalls Bunnell. "We were very fortunate that our paths crossed when they did. We had recently finished our third record "Hat Trick" and although we were happy with the results, the actual job of producing was becoming harder and harder. George, having completed his excellent body of work with the Beatles, was looking for something new to get involved in. We flew to England to work on "Holiday" our first record together which had hits like "Tin Man" & "Lonely People" and we ended up doing seven studio albums with him."

When Peek unexpectedly departed the band in May 1977, Bunnell and Beckley decided against replacing him. "When Dan left, we went through a rocky period. Gerry and I have been a duo since then," Bunnell points out. "We pride ourselves on the fact that we have stayed together for so long. We're also very proud of our little place in music history, because we know our music spoke to a generation. It may not have been innovative, but we carried on the tradition of good song-writing. It was always worth it for us to spend more time on the music than on our image. A well-structured song, with good lyrics, will always last."

(America will perform at South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset July 1. For tickets and information, visit www.musiccircus.com <http://www.musiccircus.com> or call Ticketmaster at 1-617-931-2787.)

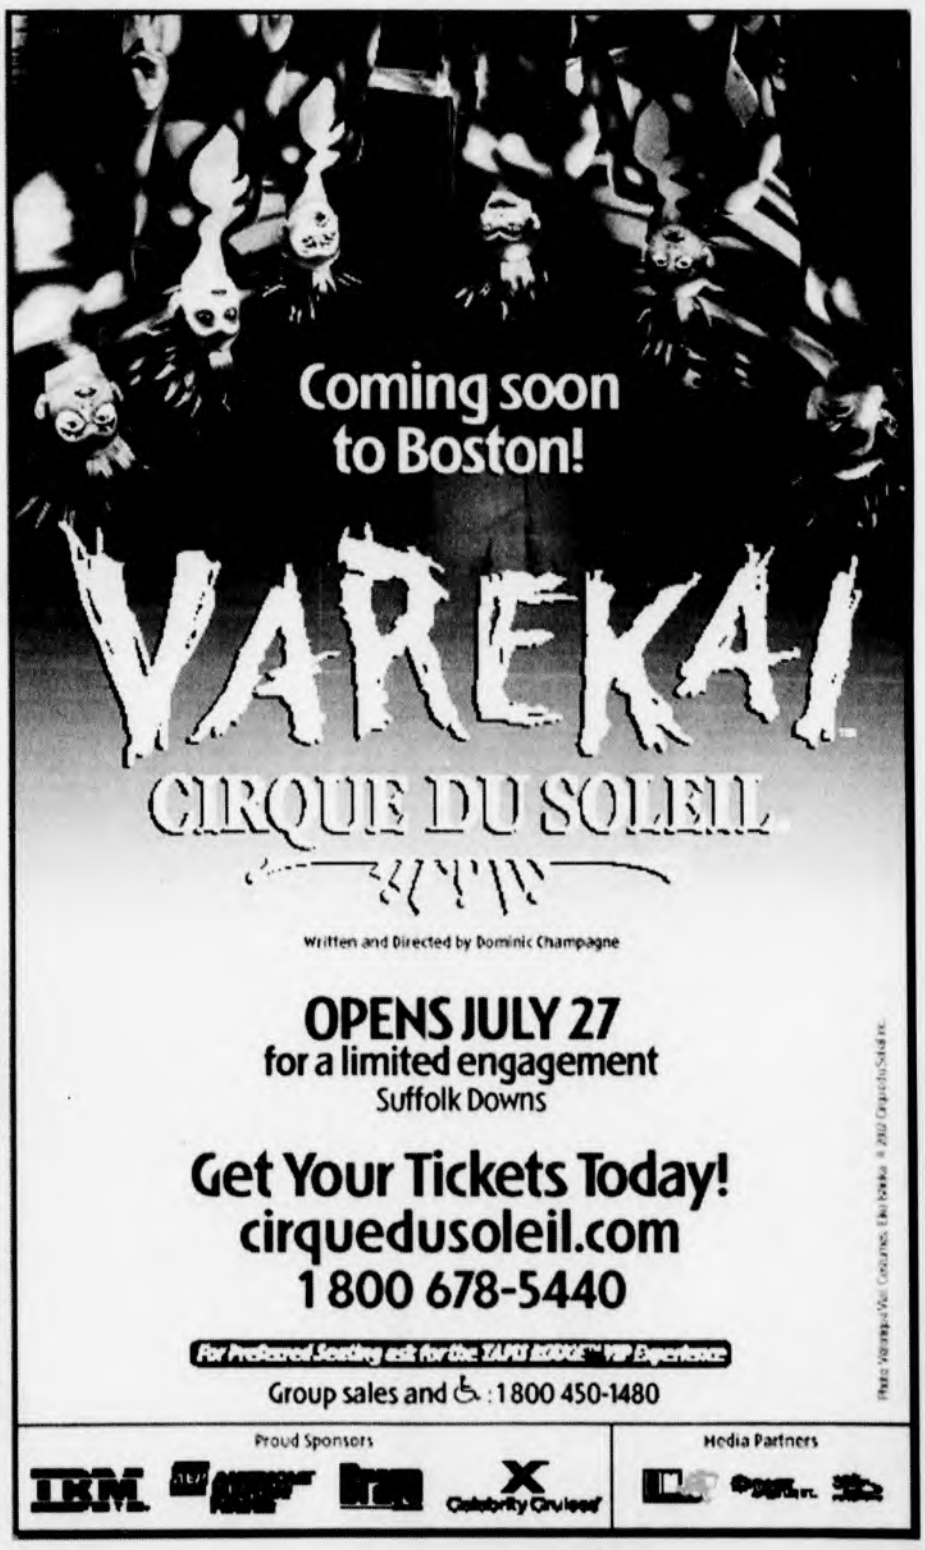
Celtic pri

MacMaster fiddles around at SSMC festival

Canadian fiddle phenomenon Natalie MacMaster grew up on Cape Breton Island, off the east coast of Nova Scotia, so it was no surprise that she first picked up the instrument at age 9.

"It was just something I grew up around at square dances and other events," explained MacMaster, 30, last week by telephone from a tour stop in New Mexico. "From the time I was a little girl, I knew I would always play the fiddle, but I never imagined I would make a living doing it."



MacMaster — who headlines a Celtic Festival featuring the Cape Breton folk quartet The Cotters at the South Shore Music Circus on Saturday — is the niece of famed fiddler Buddy MacMaster. She quickly became a name in her own right, however, thanks to contemporary albums like In My Hands, with vocals by Allison Krauss, as well as the more traditional My Roots Are Showing, which earned a 2000 Grammy nomination for Best Traditional Folk Album. An exhaustive schedule of live performances has led some to call MacMaster the busiest woman in the Canadian music business.

"Earlier in my career, I went out and played just about every venue possible. In those days, I was doing something like 260 shows a year. Then there came a point where it was just too much of a good thing. These days, I do about 100 shows. I have definitely become selective about where and when I work, and I enjoy it more."

With appearances on "Late Night With Conan O'Brien" and "Good Morning America" to her credit, MacMaster has branched beyond the music that brought her fame, but has no plans to put her fiddle away. "I absolutely love recording and touring. The spin-offs from that, like commercials and acting, just help to keep my life interesting. People always say 'never say never.'" MacMaster comments with a confident laugh. "Well, I'm saying never. I will never stop playing the fiddle."

(Natalie MacMaster will be at South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset on June 26 at 8 PM. For tickets and information, visit the SSMC box office or call Ticketmaster at 1-617-931-2787.)

Officers are back on the job in time for Fourth

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Most people are looking forward to some time off over the Fourth of July holiday – but that's not the case for two Cohasset police officers.

Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean want to get back to work after their "vacation from hell."

Like most "vacations," the two officers were paid their regular salary – but rather than relaxing on a tropical island somewhere – they spent the past eight months defending their reputations and trying to get their jobs back.

Now they are getting their wish. The officers were expected to return to duty today (Thursday).

While there will be familiar faces greeting the officers at the police department, there have been some major changes. A new police chief, James Hussey – who is on a leave of absence from the Boston Police Department to take the Cohasset post – is at the helm. And former Police Chief Robert Jackson and long-time officer Sgt. David Pomarico have retired.

"It's time to move forward and put the past behind us."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Hussey replaces Jackson, who stepped down amid the police controversy after two years leading the department and 25 years on the force.

In a prepared statement released yesterday, Hussey stated:

"I have met with Sgt. Quigley and Officer James McLean and I look forward to working with them and they look forward to getting back to work," Hussey stated. "I have determined there will be changes in police department operations.

"Sgt. Quigley will be assigned to days where I will work with him on enhancing our community policing philosophy. Officer McLean will return to his former duties," he stated. [Quigley had commanded the 4-midnight shift and McLean worked the midnight shift.]

"I am in the process of evaluating the department to determine the training needs of these officers and others in the department. I look forward to leading our police personnel in working with the Cohasset community in developing our community policing plan."

There was also a big change at town hall while the officers were out. Mark Haddad quit his post as town manager in May after seven years, which had the side effect of potentially nixing any plans to continue the police hearings on allegations the officers abused police power during some arrests and drank beer while on-duty following weapons training in May 2003. Haddad served as the hearing officer.

The town presented its case over three days but the hearings were cancelled to enter into a 45-day "cooling-off period" before the town finished and officers could present their side.

The officers continue to deny

Sewer commission seeks more power

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The sewer commission may be setting the stage to hook the Cook Estate project up to the town sewer and for potential bylaw changes to ensure other proposed developments are not granted sewer access.

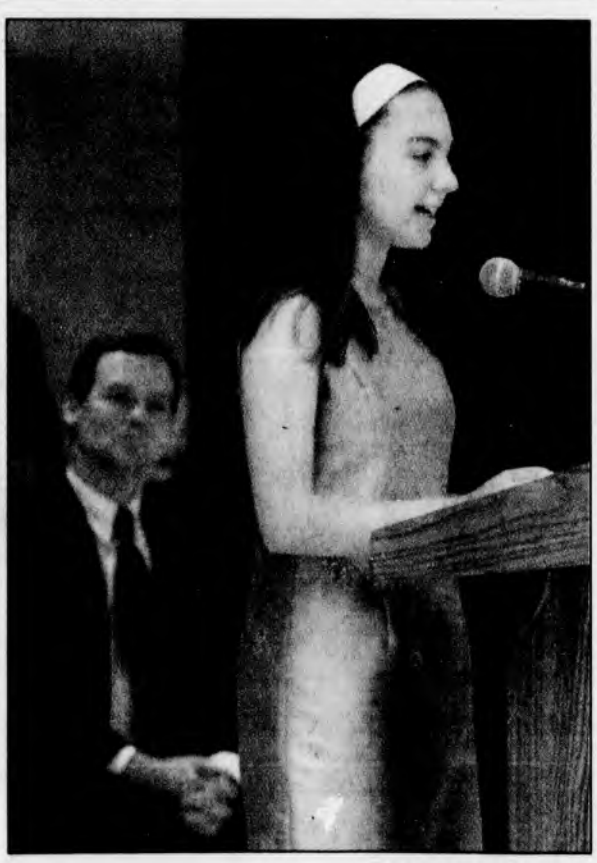
Two bylaw changes — which are slated for the special Town Meeting Warrant this fall and were drafted by the sewer commission — could give the board complete control over sewer issues in town.

In addition, there is potential for a selectmen's article that would allow the Cook Estate to become a part of the Cohasset Central Sewer District giving it sewer preference over the multi-unit Avalon and Cedarmere projects.

Soils at the Cook Estate cannot handle the wastewater expected to be generated from the development; engineers have looked at other areas around town to install a leaching field with a plan to pipe the wastewater off Cook site. A sewer connection would remove the cloud over the project, which is hamstrung without a wastewater solution.

While Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said no decisions have been made about the Cook Estate hookup article, the sewer commission discussed the possibility at length Monday night.

Sewer commission chairman Raymond Kasperowicz said he originally suggested the Cook Estate bring its case to Town Meeting and let voters decide whether they would like to see the property connected to town sewer.



However, the commission has said repeatedly that there is no excess capacity at the town's wastewater treatment plant and denied sewer applications for

Last sixth-grade class graduates

Deer Hill School holds ceremony

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Wearing ties and dresses, and bright smiles across their faces, the 137 members of this year's graduating Deer Hill class celebrated their promotion to the middle-high school as well as their part in history, as they will be the last sixth-grade class ever to graduate from the school.

As the students marched in to the music played by the fifth-grade band, flash bulbs went off in the audience, as parents, siblings and friends came to wish the class well. Just as the students took their seats, the crowd rose to its feet once more for the Pledge of Allegiance, led by Tyler Durant, and the Star Spangled Banner, sung by Savanna Young-Norris.

Principal Keith Gauley, who just finished his first year at the school, welcomed the guests to the new gymatorium, which was built as part of the renovations the students had to live through during their three years at the school. Now that renovations at both Deer Hill and the middle-high school have come to a close, the buildings are ready to accommodate more students, which means sixth grade will be housed at the middle-high school beginning next year. Deer Hill will therefore be sending two grades of students to Pond Street in September. Because fifth graders will be promoted as a result of the reorganization, they were given a small ceremony on Wednesday, June 24 as well.

But the fifth graders were happy to lend their talents to the sixth grade ceremony, as their chorus, under the direction of Jack McInnis, sang two graduation songs for the occasion.

Gauley recognized Keegan Flynn, who was chosen as one of two recipients of the Student

Town Manager Act under microscope

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In the months ahead a lot of people are going to be educated about the Cohasset Town Manager Act and what form of government other towns use at their respective town halls.

With the abrupt departure of former Town Manager Mark Haddad in early May, the seven-year-old legislation — that made a profound change in the way Cohasset runs — is now under scrutiny. A nine-member Town Manager Act Review Committee, appointed by selectmen, has been charged with going over the act and potentially recommending changes.

But just what, if anything, will change is an open question.

"If it ain't broke, don't fix it," said review committee member Barbara Power, who also sits on the Zoning Board of Appeals.

"But the debate is about whether something's broken, right?" replied member Dan Evans, a former member of the advisory committee, at the review committee's first meeting last week.

"We are looking forward not backward."
— Rob Spofford, review committee

The committee will ask Duxbury Town Manager Rocco Longo and Hingham Town Administrator Charles Cristello, and possibly others, to an upcoming meeting to discuss what powers and duties they have in relationship to their boards of selectmen. The committee will also examine the job descriptions of town managers, town administrators and executive secretaries in various communities.

Haddad, who could be a controversial figure, was essentially the first and the only person to serve in the Cohasset post which has the authority to hire and fire, among other duties. Town Meeting approved the Town Manager Act in March 29, 1997

Apartments at Pratt Building

Cohasset Historical Society's conversion of space at the Pratt Building into two apartments is proceeding at a fast clip. Both apartment areas have been carved out with the contractors dividing each apartment interior into living room, kitchen and dining area, bedroom, and bathroom. Wiring is done and sheet rocking will start this week. Each apartment has its own entrance at the rear of the building and will have new parking spaces for two cars at the front of the building.

The fully air conditioned apartments should be ready for occupancy on Sept. 1, and the Historical Society suggests applicants call 781-383-1168 or stop by at 106 South Main St., between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. weekdays for the necessary application papers. There will be no pets or smoking allowed. Priority will be given to Cohasset residents. Rent will be $1,500/month and tenants must be 55 years of age or older.

In August, the Cohasset Historical Society will have an Open House featuring its two new apartments.

Beach closing

The gates at the Sandy Beach parking lot will be closing at 11 p.m. every night, beginning Friday, July 2, preventing cars from entering or exiting the property. The gates will open again at sunrise.

Defibrillator gift fund is created

Acting Fire Chief Robert Silvia said there has been a wonderful response from residents who would like to help the department raise funds for Automated External Defibrillators, which can be used to shock a patient that has gone into cardiac arrest. In light of the response, an AED gift fund has been created. The goal of the department is to have as many AEDs in public buildings around town as is possible, as they are proven lifesavers.

Silvia said the department has already received two AEDs from the Executive Office of Public Safety, which it did not know it was going to receive, the board of health has plans to purchase another, a Homeland Security grant should pay for five more. Silvia said a few more residents are interested in donating funds for either AEDs or training. The cost for one AED and the alarmed cabinet to mount it on the wall is roughly $2,200.

For those interested in making a donation, checks made out to the town of Cohasset can be sent to the Cohasset Fire Department, c/o Captain Robert Silvia, 44 Elm St.

Planning Board office hours set

The Cohasset Planning Board Office is open Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. This revised schedule of hours will be in effect until Sept. 7. The Planning Board phone number is 781-383-3517.

All-facilities stickers on sale at Town Hall

The expiration date of the beach and Recycling Transfer Facility permits was June 30. The "all facility sticker" for the next fiscal year is on sale during normal business hours at the town hall and at the DPW garage on weekends from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and Monday-Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. An "all facilities sticker" will be $30, the second vehicle $30 and seniors is $15.

This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility, Sandy Beach as well as, include parking at all areas in town that require a sticker. In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at the Dept. of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town.

Community Conference room almost complete

Supt. Edward Malvey had hoped to have the Community Conference room, located near the superintendent's office at the high school, completed and ready to host School Committee meetings before his departure at the end of this school year. However, he said there is some equipment that has not arrived, which would prevent the meetings from being conducted on camera. Malvey said there will be a new banner arriving to serve as a nice-looking backdrop for when meetings are broadcast on cable television. "It is coming on line soon," said Malvey.

Transportation fee discussion continues

School Committee members Jamie Williams and Adrienne MacCarthy have formed a subcommittee to take a closer look at the transportation surveys sent out by former committee member Pat Martin, to further analyze the data collected. The two said before any discussion takes place regarding implementing of fees for children riding the school bus, it's important to take a look at what parents of the children want. The surveys deal with a much broader scope than just fees, and ridership issues, which could affect fees, will be looked at as well.

Master Plan review

The Planning Board has scheduled a series of public meeting to review the Draft Master Plan for the Town of Cohasset. The Draft Plan will be reviewed during regular Planning Board meetings held in the months of June, July and August and thereafter, if required.

Planning Board summer meeting schedule (subject to change) is as follows: at 7:30 p.m., July 7, July 21, Aug 4, Aug 18 in the basement meeting room.

Contact the Planning Board Office at 781-383-3517 to confirm meeting dates and agenda times as the summer progresses.

Printed copies of the Draft Master Plan are available for review in the Planning Board Office, Office of the Town Clerk and at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. An electronic version is available at the Town website, www.cohassetmass.org.

Members of the public are encouraged to attend and participate in the discussion.

Concerns brewing for abutters of proposed coffee shop

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While coffee-lovers might be thrilled at the prospect of a new Dunkin' Donuts drive-thru on Route 3A, abutters to the shop, slated for the Hair Affair building at 154 King St., are concerned a drive-up window will cause excessive traffic, noise pollution, and air pollution in an already crowded area.

Roughly 15 residents of Fairoaks Lane came to the planning board's public hearing last Wednesday, where developers discussed the possibility of renovating and conjoining KoKo Island and Hair Affair, turning the former into a family-style restaurant and the latter into a donut shop with a drive-up window. Fairoaks Lane is off of Sohier Street and abuts the 3A site to the east, directly behind the property.

The majority of abutters in attendance said if renovation plans did not include a drive-thru, they would not be concerned with the proposed changes to the site. However, the plans for the site have been designed around the premise that a drive-thru window will be a part of the renovations.

Abutters said they were concerned about the potential noise the speaker at the drive-up window could generate...

"I could live with a restaurant, but the coffee shop concerns me," said Paul Quintin, 239 Fairoaks Lane, adding it will generate constant activity on site between the traffic and noise from those ordering at the window. He added that this Dunkin' Donuts would be the third in a stretch of road less than a mile long, and questioned whether that is really a need the town has.

Michael Tack, a representative for the Nauset Group, which is looking to renovate the site, explained the plans were drawn under the assumption that the Dunkin' Donuts currently located in Cohasset Plaza will be moving from its current location to the 3A site, which would make for one less donut shop on 3A. He added the site has been designed to accommodate for the drive-thru and he would be willing to work with abutters to address their concerns.

John Cavanaro of John Cavanaro Consulting, the engineer for the project, said the parking lot was designed to help direct the flow of traffic, and roughly 17 cars could be accommodated in drive-up line. However, members of the board asked what happens if on the busiest day of the year, more than 17 cars want to get in line, and even worse, how will traffic get back onto 3A, without a traffic light to help provide a break in traffic. Members said currently, traffic prevents easy access onto 3A in either direction from Sohier Street, which is closer to the light at Stop and Shop than the KoKo Island site, and a coffee shop which generates a good deal of traffic during the commute would potentially cause a traffic disaster. Members said cars are more than likely going to have to wait when exiting, and any more than three cars in the left turn exit lane would cause a back up into the coffee line.

Sherry Sturino, 179 Fairoaks Lane, said she too was concerned with the potential for traffic, as well as pollution from cars. She noted Sand Castle Child Care is next door, which generates traffic on its own, but with idling cars in the Dunkin' Donuts line, it might not be healthy for children playing on the playgrounds to be breathing the fumes in.

Tack said the proposed Dunkin' Donuts would most likely hold the same hours of operation as other chains, which is 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. Abutters said they were concerned about the potential noise the speaker at the drive-up window could generate, as early risers may have to raise their voices to make their early morning orders, and that noise would carry into earshot of their homes. Tack said the option of looking into only having window orders for a certain timeframe in the morning, which would cut back on the noise, could be considered as an option.

However, no matter what the outcome of the site, Cheryl Lund, 193 Fairoaks Lane, said she will have a line of traffic 10 feet away from her home. "It absolutely devastates me," she said.

Planning board member Robert Sturdy said while it is always good to have abutters become a part of the process, the board only has jurisdiction over what is shown in the plans. "Whatever is said verbally has no bearing on anything," he said. He said any changes discussed at the meeting need to be submitted in revised drawings.

The planning board will continue the public hearing for KoKo Island and Hair Affair Wednesday, July 14.

Hair Affair plans miss window of opportunity

Donut drive-thru is too problematic

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Plans to include a drive-up window as part of the proposed renovations to the current Hair Affair building on Route 3A may have hit its first roadblock, as the planning board has recommended the zoning board of appeals not approve the special permit which would make that window possible.

The planning board is currently going through the site plan review process with developers who are looking to renovate and conjoin KoKo Island and Hair Affair, turning the former into a family-style restaurant and the latter into a donut shop with a drive-up window. Without the completion of the site plan review, the planning board doesn't feel the ZBA should grant the special permit, due to the fact that concerns regarding safety surfaced at the first public hearing, and plans for the site may need to be changed.

"There is a serious public safety issue here," said planning board member Robert Sturdy, in regards to the amount of traffic a drive-up window could potentially generate at that location on 3A. He added the planning board has been studying 3A traffic for the past 21 years, and this addition would only make the problem worse. Sturdy said he would recommend denying the project "without prejudice," which would allow the applicant to apply again for the special permit at a later date, which would give the planning board time to thoroughly go through the site plan review process.

Member Stuart Ivimey agreed with Sturdy and said the ZBA doesn't have enough information to make a decision, because the site plan review process has not been completed and the planning board needs to continue vetting the issue. He said he agreed with Sturdy that recommending the ZBA deny the application without prejudice would be the way to proceed. Member Peter Pratt agreed, as did Planning Board Chairman Al Moore, who said if the board decided to recommend granting the special permit, the timeline the ZBA must follow for special permits would force it to decide too early.

Any restaurant seeking a drive-up window must apply for a special permit with the ZBA. While the Hair Affair building is slated to become a donut shop — most likely a Dunkin' Donuts — granting the special permit for a drive-up window would allow any future business that moves to the site access to a drive-thru as well.

The ZBA will discuss the matter at its next meeting, scheduled for Tuesday, July 6.

Sewer commission looks to reign supreme on hook-ups

both Cedarmere off Beechwood Street and Northland Residential, developers for the Cook Estate.

Cedarmere, which is appealing the sewer commission's denial of a sewer connection, was the first project to file under the town's Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw and proposes 105-units of senior housing on 41-acres. That project, whose developers insist there is adequate capacity for Cedarmere and more, is currently stalled. Northland is working with the town to build senior housing on the Cook Estate site and has not appealed the commission's denial to hookup.

Developers for Avalon, a 40B project which came to town prior to Cedarmere, were told there was no capacity for the 200-unit project and therefore, did not file a sewer application but spent a considerable sum seeking wastewater disposal options for the site. The 200-unit Avalon project off Rte. 3A is seeking a groundwater discharge permit from the Department of Environmental Protection over objections from the water commission, which is concerned any septic treatment on site would degrade the Lily Pond Watershed. With a sewer hookup, there would be no need to fight the water commission and spend months working with the DEP for a groundwater permit.

Daniel Coughlin of Tutela Engineering Associates, the sewer commission's engineering consultant, said he thought it would be in the Cook Estate's best interest to look into getting into the central district "from the get-go," to ensure that if it is determined there is capacity, it will be eligible.

However, Kasperowicz said no matter what the outcome of the special Town Meeting, if capacity doesn't exist, the project will not be hooked up.

Regardless of the whether the Cook Estate is voted in or out of the Central District, the proposed bylaw changes would give the sewer commission complete control over town sewers, allowing the commission to make exceptions for property which would normally not be eligible. It could also prevent others from hooking up, even to the treatment facilities of other towns like Hull. While only one of the bylaws has been given unanimous support by the commission, the second will not receive a formal vote to move forward until the board receives an opinion from Town Counsel.

"Should we be assigning whatever capacity we can to developers of new projects when we have people who want it now?"

— Ray Kasperowicz, sewer commission

'Checker-boarding'

The board voted in favor of adopting a Home Rule Petition, which, if passed at Town Meeting, would amend the Cohasset Sewer Act to allow the commission to expand the sewer district, to encompass areas that would not otherwise be allowed to tie-in. The bylaw is very similar to a Home Rule Petition adopted by Provincetown, and allows for "checker-boarding" of sewer districts in areas where the sewer commission deems it is necessary.

Kasperowicz said the way he understood, enacting it would take care of any lawsuits, past or present. But member John Beck said he didn't think it would negate existing suits.

The Home Rule Petition, even if passed at Town Meeting, will need to come before the Attorney General and the Legislature, and it could be Fiscal Year 2006 before it could be enacted. "So, it doesn't really help us for a few years," said Kasperowicz.

"But it's the responsible thing to do," said Beck.

The board also entertained another potential bylaw change, which would amend Article 9 of the current General Bylaws. While Town Counsel will give final approval on the wording, the version the commission is working with reads, "No other sewers shall be constructed in any public roads or ways of the town which are not within the limit of such designated sewer districts and which are not under the control of the before mentioned Sewer Commission."

Kasperowicz said his interpretation of this bylaw would prohibit anyone outside the central district from tying in because the sewer commission would have control over public roads. "If you've got a district and they want to do something outside, they can't," he said. However, if the Home Rule Petition passes, the commission would be able to make exceptions at its discretion and allow property in the central district if it would like.

"Can we end up with a lawsuit?" asked Kasperowicz of the bylaw change, to which Beck replied, "Yes, " adding if the Cook Estate was included in the central district, he could not imagine others in town looking for sewer would not sue. Member Sean Cunning said the board could decide to allow both Cedarmere and the Cook Estate to become part of the central district, but that option was not discussed.

Kasperowicz said he had heard Avalon had been looking to run pipes to Hull, to tie into that town's treatment facility. "Are we protected with these (bylaw) changes from a developer making a connection to the sewer by the state highway?" he asked.

Cunning said maybe that is an issue that is not within the jurisdiction of the board because it is a state highway. "That's very wimpy of you," quipped Kasperowicz.

Kasperowicz said he would like to see the two sewer commission bylaw changes brought to Town Meeting. However, he said the question still remains, "Should we be assigning whatever capacity we can to developers of new projects when we have people who want it now?"

Cunning said the money charged to hook up larger projects could be used to help the people who want their homes hooked up. At around $15,000 per dwelling unit, a lot of money could be put aside to help with sewer issues.

However, Kasperowicz said, "In my mind, there is still an element of risk," because it has not been determined adequate capacity exists.

Officers are back on the job in time for Fourth any wrongdoing.

Haddad placed Quigley and McLean on paid administrative leave Oct. 20, 2003. The officers claim the town's disciplinary action was in retaliation for their actions relative to the police chief's family, although Haddad denied that had anything to do with the disciplinary action.

Quigley arrested Keith Jackson, the chief's son, the night of an alleged altercation at the Legion post and was on duty when Keith Jackson's former girlfriend and her father went to the station to file a complaint that Keith Jackson had hit her on several occasions.

McLean admonished then-Officer Brian Curran, the Jackson's son-in-law, for not following proper union procedures relative to an overtime grievance that resulted in Jackson stripping McLean of his collateral duty as fleet manager. McLean then notified the national police union about unfair labor practices.

The "Legion case" was included in the town's charges against Sgt. Quigley, who is suing Haddad and Jackson personally and the town for interfering with Quigley's employment as a police officer and invading his privacy. The town hired a private detective to look into Quigley's background.

Hussey, who declined to comment on the lawsuits, said there are still issues that need to be resolved but bringing the officers back sends a message that " it's time to move forward and put the past behind us."

In terms of working with the community, Hussey plans to conduct a survey to gauge what the problems are including concerns about crime and quality of life issues. "It will have a wide variety of questions to help us partner with the community," he said.

Hussey also wants to set up a Police Advisory Council made up of a cross-section of people in town who can work with the police department, "so we're not operating in a vacuum."

Quigley's civil attorney Kevin Powers said this development does not resolve the civil suit Quigley has pending but it deals with one of the important issues – the sergeant's return to work.

"It's an important first step and shows they (town) are trying to act in good faith to resolve this matter," Powers said.

Doug Louison, the officers' union attorney who represented them in the hearings, is on vacation and could not be reached for comment.

In March, the District Attorney's office notified the town it had looked into a series of police stops and arrests that then Chief Jackson provided and based upon the information furnished could not find any wrongdoing. But the DA said if the town had more information to send it along so the office could satisfactorily respond to Jackson's request for an investigation.

Reached by telephone Quigley would only say he was happy to be back.

"I'm looking forward to returning to work," he said.

Cost of police saga difficult to pinpoint

Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said earlier this month so far, the town has spent around $121,000 on the police controversy – not including the officers' salaries and police overtime — for Deutsch Williams, which serves as Town Counsel, the court reporter, and private investigator.

Buckley said the salary for Officer James McLean is about $966 a week, and for Sgt. William Quigley, about $1085 a week. The two continued to receive pay checks while they were on administrative leave and the department needed to cover their shifts while they were out. Officers filling in for Quigley and McLean received time and a half. Buckley said overtime costs while the officers were out have not been calculated.

Democratic Convention congestion is on the horizon

By Elizabeth Malloy
EMALLOY@CNC.COM

When it comes to the Boston commute during the Democratic National Convention next month, South Shore residents can be grateful for one thing — they're not North Shore residents.

While a number of roadways are being heavily restricted north of the city, including Interstate 93 south, Route 1, and Storrow and Memorial Drives, South Shore commuters will most likely only experience traffic troubles on I-93 north going into the city.

There will be traffic restrictions on I-93 north for the entire week of the convention, July 25-30. But the MBTA's southern trains and buses will be minimally effected, unlike those north of the Hub.

For the morning commute, starting in Braintree from Sunday, July 25 through Friday, July 30, there will be no HOV (carpool) lane on I-93. The highway will be reduced from five to three lanes and officials have told drivers to expect delays.

The worst of the commuter crunch south of the city will begin in late afternoon that week, with on-ramps to I-93 north closing beginning in Braintree. There will be no northbound access to the highway from Quincy, Milton or Dorchester from Monday July 26 through Thursday, July 29.

Off-ramps will remain open to exit 20 (the Mass Pike and South Station) where all traffic must exit.

Officials could not give a time estimate on when the on-ramp closures would occur, noting that it is both a matter of security, and based of traffic flow.

"We have certain times that cars need to be off certain stretches of the roadway for security reasons…we can't tell you those exact reasons, but those decisions will be made rationally," said Boston Police spokeswoman Mary Ellen Burns. "Clearly things in the city will be shut down last, from the outermost points they'll start restrictions."

If you live on the South Shore and you don't have to be in Boston, stay home and enjoy the ambiance."
— State Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield

During the convention, large commercial vehicles will be randomly searched on their way into the city, but there will be no random car searches, according to Boston Police Supt. Robert Dunford.

"The big thing that people in the city and coming into the city must remember is that if they give themselves additional time, and plan coming into the city, they shouldn't experience the significant delays that everyone has predicted," Dunford said.

Dunford warned that drivers may experience delays on back roads during the week as well, as traffic will be diverted from the highway to streets like Routes 128 and 3A.

Transportation officials are encouraging those coming into the city to use public transportation, which is where South Shore residents hold the strongest advantage over those on the North Shore.

While North Station had to be closed for the duration of the convention due to its close proximity to the Fleet Center, South Station will remain open, and the highways will remain open to MBTA buses, as well as emergency vehicles.

According to MBTA General Manager Michael Mulhern, the city's subway trains and trolleys will be minimally affected, except around North Station. In fact, the trains will run more frequently as they will be on a rush hour schedule at all times during the convention.

Some commuter rail trains from the South Shore will have minor schedule adjustments, but Mulhern said those have not been finalized yet. All commuter boat service south of Boston will run on schedule, with some possible minor adjustments at Rowes Wharf, as a number of U.S Senators will be holding meetings at the Boston Harbor Hotel.

According to Burns, a number of Boston companies, including John Hancock, Gillette, Putnam Investments and Fidelity Investments, have agreed to adjust their hours of operation, change their employees' work sites or make other accommodations in order to decrease the number of commuters on the roads and railways coming into the city that week.

"The convention is taking place exactly a month today so we're hopeful that this will be sufficient time in advance for people to make necessary adjustments," said state Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, the Vice Chairman of the Joint Committee on Transportation. "If you live on the South Shore and you don't have to be in Boston, stay home and enjoy the ambiance."

For additional information, residents are asked to look at either Boston's Web site at cityofboston.gov; the Convention Host Committee's website at boston04.com; the MBTA's Web site at mbta.com; or call Mayor Thomas Menino's convention hotline at (617) 635-2004.

Town's parting pact with Haddad released

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The town has released the amendment to former Town Manager Mark Haddad's employment contract, which spells out the terms of his resignation negotiated between by the board of selectmen and Haddad.

The document, dated May 5, lists 10 conditions as part of the amendment to the employment agreement.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said the board worked together and worked quickly to come to the agreement with Haddad after his resignation. "We, as a board, thought the agreement was in the best interest of the community," he said.

While Haddad's three-year contract with the town is considered a public document, acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said the resignation agreement — negotiated behind closed doors — had been subject to pending litigation, and was therefore, not immediately released.

The Mariner requested a copy of the employment agreement amendment under the state Public Records Law and the town complied.

In addition to the information selectmen had already released — including that Haddad was to receive $50,000 upon his departure and the town would continue to pay his health insurance for six months — the document states Haddad agrees to cooperate and assist with legal matters and assist the town in completing projects or business, which began during his employment with the town.

Haddad also gave permission for the town to make use of all his office furnishings and computer equipment at Town Hall, and agreed to release the town from any and all claims of action arising out of his employment with the town.

Haddad was given 21 days to fully consider the amendment. The agreement became binding and effective eight days after it was signed. Haddad's signature is dated May 5 and the selectmen's signatures are dated May 11.

Selectmen said Haddad, who was hired in July 1997 and started that August, abruptly resigned due to personal reasons on May 5 from the position he had held for roughly seven years.

Buckley said the cost on the town's side to cover Haddad's insurance is roughly $800 per month; Haddad will continue to pay 30 percent of the total cost, or roughly $345 a month. The $50,000 is being paid for accrued benefits, including vacation and sick time, and is roughly what Haddad would have received for six months of his salary. At the time of his resignation, Haddad's salary was roughly $110,000.

Haddad signed his most recent contract with the town on March 5, 2002; it was slated to expire on June 30, 2005. One provision of the contract stated he would agree not to seek or accept any other employment during the first 2-1/2 years, with the exception of the Town of Andover, should that position be advertised. Andover is Haddad's hometown and is not currently looking for a Town Manager.

Although specific steps to be followed were spelled out in Haddad's contract should he be fired, there was nothing in the contract outlining what benefits he would be entitled to in the event he resigned from his position.

Selectmen continue to be mum on any specifics about why Haddad quit, prompting some residents to question why Haddad resigned and why he received any compensation.

According to the contract, had Haddad been terminated by the town before the expiration of his contract and was still willing and able to perform his duties under the agreement, the town would agree to pay Haddad a lump sum cash payment equal to six months salary, plus the value of benefits and deferred compensation, earned sick leave, vacation, holidays, compensatory time and other accrued benefits to date.

Had he been fired for cause, the town would have no obligation to pay any severance.

Employment Agreement Amendment #1

The is the text of the employment agreement:

This Amendment #1 is made between the Town of Cohasset ("Town") and Mark W. Haddad ("Haddad") this 5th day of May 2004.

The Employment Agreement dated March 5, 2002 ("Agreement") by and between the Town and Haddad is dully amended as follows:

Haddad resigns from his employment with the Town effective as of May 5, 2004 in the form attached hereto as Exhibit A. The Town hereby' accepts Haddad's resignation, which shall be irrevocable.

The Town agrees to continue to pay Haddad his regular current salary as set forth in the Agreement, minus all applicable payroll taxes and deductions, until Haddad has received a total of $50,000.00.

The Town agrees to continue Haddad's health insurance, on the same terms as received by Town employees, for six months following the effective date of this Amendment #1.

Haddad agrees to cooperate fully in the defense of and to assist the Town with any and all litigation currently pending or hereafter arising in connection with Haddad's employment by the Town. Haddad agrees to cooperate reasonably in providing information or otherwise assisting the Town in completing projects or other business which began during Haddad's employment with the Town.

Haddad authorizes the Town to access, make use of and employ for any and all public purposes the office furnishings and computer equipment at Town Hall.

Haddad agrees to release the Town from any and all claims or causes of action whatsoever arising out of his employment with the Town.

The parties agree to reasonably cooperate in agreeing on a letter referencing Haddad's dates of employment, position held, job duties, accomplishments, and the fact that he resigned. In accord with Town policy, no other information will be released in response to inquiries regarding Haddad's employment with the Town.

The Agreement is otherwise amended to end on May 5, 2004, is concluded and cancelled, without any further rights, obligations, duties or recourse by and between the parties.

Haddad acknowledges that he was advised in writing to consult with an attorney and has had an opportunity to consult with an attorney prior to executing this Amendment #1.

Haddad understands that he is entitled to twenty-one (21) days within which to fully consider this Amendment #1. Following the date that he signs this Amendment #1, Haddad shall have a period of seven (7) days within which to revoke it. Any such revocation must be in writing and delivered to Peter Berry, Esq., Deutsch Williams, et al, 99 Summer St., Boston, MA 02110. Absent timely revocation, this Amendment #1 shall be binding and become effective eight (8) days after Haddad has signed it. If Haddad exercises his right to revoke this Amendment #1 all promises hereunder shall be null and void.

New committee puts Town Manager Act under microscope and it went into effect that July 1.

Haddad replaced interim Town Administrator Ed McCann, who actually served as the first town manager for a few weeks after the act went into effect on July 1 until Haddad came on board that August. McCann had replaced former Town Administrator Gregory Doyon, who resigned.

Some citizens say the combination of power and Haddad's aggressive personality went beyond the bounds of the Town Manager Act. Others think selectmen didn't exercise as much oversight as they could have under the act over some of Haddad's actions and decisions.

But at the first review committee meeting last Thursday(June 24), chairman Rob Spofford set the tone by stating the committee would focus on reviewing the act, staying away from politics and personality.

Reached by telephone Tuesday, Spofford said the was pleased with the tenor of that meeting.

"The spotlight is not on individuals but the Town Manager Act itself," he said. "We are looking forward not backward ."

He stressed the committee is not looking to do away with the town manager position but will examine the act line by line to see if it needs any tweaking.

During last week's meeting Selectman Fred Koed said the question is whether the Town Manager Act puts too much power in too few hands. He said he likes a separation of powers with strong elected and appointed boards.

"I'm opposed to consolidating for the sake of efficiency," he said.

Tom Callahan, a former selectman, was one of about 10 members in the audience last week. The meeting was also televised on cable-TV. Callahan said it was important for the review committee not to focus on titles but the actual authority of a town's chief administrative officer.

He pointed out there are eight or nine points on the continuum under state law regarding municipal government ranging from a weak executive secretary to a city mayor.

"People may be called a town manager but not have that much authority," he said. "...we [Cohasset] essentially had a weak executive secretary [in terms of authority] and did a 180 to the strongest form of town manager."

Review committee member Susan Kent, who is also chairman of the advisory committee, said the group may find the act is OK the way it is. "Maybe we are just not following it very well," she said.

The review committee is separate from the Town Manager Search Committee which has yet to be appointed. Spofford said the search committee should begin the process soon of finding a new town manager.

But Wigmore Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave., who was in the audience, cautioned a rushed review of the Town Manager Act would be in danger of becoming perfunctory rather than reflective.

"I'm not saying we should not take our time," Spofford replied. "But I think we can get the selection committee together to begin the process."

In addition to Spofford, Koed, Evans, Power, and Kent, the committee includes acting Town Manager Michael Buckley, water commissioner Glenn Pratt, former selectman Martha Gjesteby and Helen Daley, who has a masters in public administration and experience in city government management. Buckley, who is also the director of finance and before that was the town accountant, has worked in Cohasset for 12 years.

Any changes to the Town Manager Act would have to go before Town Meeting. Peter Pratt, who was in the audience and is a member of the planning board, said the act allows Town Meeting to make changes up to a threshold without having to send the revisions to the state legislature.

The consensus from some in the audience last week centered on whether the board of selectmen didn't have enough "backbone," as Murray Campbell, 217 Jerusalem Road, described it – not whether the act itself needs an overhaul.

Lou Harvey, 465King St., said the act gives selectmen broad powers that they weren't using.

"Much could be enacted by policy set by the board of selectmen," Harvey said. "That's a loophole through which you could drive a truck."

The review committee will likely meet again the week of July 12. Check the Town Clerk's office for date and time, 781-383-4100.

Greenbush ombudsman position is back on track

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With the departure of former Town Manager Mark Haddad, questions began to surface about what the role of the MBTA ombudsman should be, what she had been doing for the town, and what her role should be moving forward. To help iron out those issues, the board of selectmen and representatives from the Waterfield Design Group met Tuesday to come to an agreement about what each expected when entering into the contract.

Craig Miller of the Waterfield Design Group said his company signed a contract with the town that allowed it to appoint one of its employees to the ombudsman position. He said he understood the position would provide the town with a point person who could act as a liaison with the town and townspeople, and could field concerns, complaints, and gather feedback, and bring the information back to the MBTA. He said the ombudsman was to also serve as a liaison for former Haddad with the MBTA.

"He was a point person," said Miller of Haddad, noting Haddad had a lot of knowledge about the project and would direct Waterfield in its action. "We were the arms and legs for Mark," said Miller, adding his company worked very closely with Haddad on every MBTA issue that came up.

The selectmen asked Kristina Patterson, who was a landscape architect for Waterfield, and was appointed to take on the extra duties of an ombudsman for Cohasset as a part-time additional job, what the cases were that she worked on during her time as ombudsman. Patterson resigned from Waterfield, and subsequently from her position as ombudsman, in May to allow her to pursue a graduate degree back home in Canada, and her colleague Michael White will be taking over as the new ombudsman for the town.

Patterson said many of the calls she received dealt with abutters to the railway whose properties were very close to where the train will be. She said she informed Haddad of the calls when they would come in to her, but added, "He almost always knew about the problem," because most had come up before. She said the larger projects she was involved with included working out issues with the Town Parking Lot, the former ABB Optical building, and the town's quest for four-quadrant gates.

Patterson said if someone would call her with a complaint, she would call Haddad or the MBTA for background information if necessary, and she would facilitate a meeting between the MBTA and the abutter. "Basically I was a conduit to get the person in touch with the appropriate person," she said.

Patterson said she would also receive calls from residents who had tried to get in touch with the MBTA and had not been successful, and she would be able to help them get in touch with the appropriate person. Miller added the ombudsman position was very effective that way, because it enabled residents to be able to get in touch with the correct person in a large organization like the MBTA where their call could have easily been lost.

"I never had a meeting with the T where they didn't have 12 people," said Patterson, and her contacts enabled her to direct residents to the correct person.

Patterson told selectmen during her tenure as ombudsman, she fielded complaints from between 50 to 100 residents, and every complaint is filed in a database, of which the town has a copy.

Patterson told selectmen during her tenure as ombudsman, she fielded complaints from between 50 to 100 residents, and every complaint is filed in a database, of which the town has a copy. Miller pointed out, the ombudsman position was expected to be relatively small at the beginning, prior to construction, and once the MBTA began its work, Patterson was slated to be in Cohasset two mornings a week, at her own office in Town Hall.

Miller said since Haddad's departure, there has been some question of the nature of the ombudsman position. He said every complaint filed has been handled by the ombudsman, who has acted aggressively, but not against the MBTA. "We're an advocate, but we're not taking an overly aggressive approach," said Miller, adding that is the way his company has operated in the past, and it has worked out well during negotiations with the MBTA. "If that's what the town wants, you're not going to get that with us." Miller said in his company's dealings with the MBTA, if the organization says no five times, "We're probably not going to go back a sixth," and said if the town wants to change the tone of the position, "We should probably part ways because we're not interested in that." He added, "When Mark was here, we had outstanding success with the issues."

Technical questions

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he was under the assumption that the position was supposed to encompass more than it has. "You did have an obligation to provide comments to drawings," drafted by the MBTA, to make sure they reflected what the town wanted to see. Dormitzer read from the advertisement for the position the town posted, which Waterfield responded to, which said, "Responsibilities include serving as the town's liaison with the MBTA and its General Contractor by dealing with public questions and complaints; observing construction activities; reporting deviations from plans and specifications; monitoring construction progress against construction schedule; and providing weekly updates to the Town Manager and Board of Selectmen."

Miller said he hadn't thought the ombudsman needed to comment on drawings and he didn't "read it that way," and Dormitzer said he thought the ad was pretty straight forward.

"This is what you responded to," said Dormitzer, adding he thought the ombudsman should have been formally reviewing drawings at their 30 percent complete stage to their 90 percent stage. He said parts of the plans do not reflect what the town wants, and there needs to be someone who can be an advocate for the town in that capacity.

Patterson explained some of the plans may not have changes the town wants because the diagnostic team, which includes people in town, including the fire and police chiefs, must file their final report first, in order for plans to be completely finalized. If that report is not in, the plans will not reflect the town's decisions.

Dormitzer said while he understands, "broadly, it leaves me uneasy," to think of plans being 90 percent complete and still leaving out some very important information.

Miller said he agreed with Dormitzer and the town must have someone to watch to make sure the plans reflect what they are supposed to. However, "It was never our understanding the ombudsman was supposed to overlook drawings. It was not a part of the contract we have," he said. Miller suggested the town look for a technical person to be responsible for making those reviews to plans, because that role had previously been filled by Hadadd.

Miller said originally, his company was hired to serve as a technical eye for the Village Streetscape project, and was later hired to provide the ombudsman, and Haddad had set up an estimated $20,000 budget to pay for technical review services on an as-needed basis. Miller said he thought the work was included as an addendum to the streetscape project, but he wasn't exactly sure where the money came from. He suggested something similar be done by the town for this project as well.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said if someone needs to be hired to take on a technical role for the town, the money may need to come out of the ombudsman position at first, then be reimbursed at a later date, perhaps by the MBTA. Selectman Rob Spofford said before anyone is hired, he needs to know how much the position will cost, and asked Waterfield to draft a proposal of what they would charge for the work. The board will address the issue at a later meeting.

Ombudsman candidates kept confidential

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When the MBTA ombudsman position was advertised in July of 2002, the Waterfield Design Group was only one of many interested candidates for the position. However, the town is keeping mum as far as who the other applicants were even now, two years after the fact.

At the June 15 meeting of the board of selectmen, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he believed when the position was initially advertised, roughly 15 people applied from the town and as far as he knows, not one of them was interviewed. He said he believed Waterfield submitted its application for the position one day before they were due, and that company, which operates out of Winchester, was chosen rather than someone from the town.

The Mariner has made a verbal request under the state Public Records Law, and has been denied the names of the ombudsman applicants. Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said it has always been the town's practice to keep the names of applicants confidential, and normally only the names of the finalists for a position are ever made public. Buckley said as far as he knows, there was only one finalist for the position and Town Counsel has advised the other names not be released.

STANLEY CUP

Attention all hockey players and their fans: the Stanley Cup is coming to Cohasset. Steve Baker, a former goalie with the New York Rangers and scout for the Tampa Bay Lightning for the past eight years, would like to share the Stanley Cup with the public for about an hour from 11 a.m. to noon, Monday (July 5) at the Olde Salt House on Border Street.

The Tampa Bay Lightning are the current National Hockey League champions.

Youth hockey players especially are invited to stop by and take a photo with the cup!

Steve, a graduate of Archbishop Williams High School, played goalie for Union College and burst onto the national hockey scene as part of the first wave of American-born players who came into the NHL in the mid- to late-70s, thus changing the game forever from a league dominated by Canadians to a truly international league.

He joined the New York Rangers and lost only one game in his first nine starts. Steve's goalie mask features the red, white and blue of the Rangers and USA, and a stylized image of the Empire State Building. This was one of the first masks to honor the city for which a goalie played and is on permanent display at the National Hockey League Hall of Fame in Toronto.

So stop by Monday and meet Steve and see the Stanley Cup!

HOLWAY WINS BASS TOURNAMENT

Fifteen-year-old Conor Holway of Cohasset won the Sons of the American Legion's first annual striped bass tournament which was held from sundown Thursday, June 24 to 5 p.m. Sunday, June 27. His 29 in., 26-1/2 lb. bass caught Thursday night, topped a field of 50 entrants in the tournament. Conor is not a stranger to winning bass tournaments. Two weeks earlier he won the "Save the Bay" tournament and earned an inflatable dingy for the effort. Conor, his brother Patrick and uncle David also of Cohasset fished by boat right off the rocks near the entrance to Cohasset Harbor.

PERFECT TIMING

Steve and Cheryl Stelljes of Beechwood Street have perfect timing! Their new baby boy, Adam, arrived precisely at 10:12 p.m., Sunday (June 27, 2004) exactly four years later and almost to the minute after their daughter Lindsay made her debut at 10:09 p.m. June 27, 2000.

Adam weighed in at 8 lbs., 8 oz. and measured 20-1/2 in. long. Happy grandparents are Brian and Dee Wilkinson of Middleboro and Mike and Sally Stelljes of Rochester, N.Y.

Steve says Lindsay is happy to share her birthday. She didn't get to have her cake Sunday as planned but got the best present in the world – a new baby brother! Steve says when he and Cheryl learned the due dates (June 15) were the same, it was just a funny little story but they never thought Adam would actually arrive on the same date and time as his sister.

A proud dad, Steve, says everyone is happy and healthy! Congratulations!

B.C. HIGH HONORS

Hats off to Andrew J. Flynn, Class of 2005 and Alexander G. Hunt '07 of Cohasset achieved high honors for the fourth quarter at Boston College High School. For high honors a student must have at least a 3.80 quality point average.

Christopher P. Barber '05 achieved Honors, receiving a Q.P.A. of at least 3.2.

PHILLIPS ACADEMY

Congratulations to Alanna H. Hughes, daughter of Lauren Souza and Bruce Hughes, on being named to the honor roll for the spring term at Phillips Acadmey, better known as Andover. Alanna is a member of the Class of 2004.

BELMONT HILL GRAD

Gregory Michael O'Connell, son of Rosemary and Michael O'Connell, graduated cum laude from Belmont Hill School on June 7. Congratulations!

SPECIAL PRESENT

Annette Sawchuk is all smiles about the delivery and installation of her recent birthday present. Her husband Wayne located a British greenhouse manufacturer on the Internet, and had one shipped over, and then asked the distributor, Richard Sutton, of www.Greenhouses-UK.com, shown with Annette in front of her new gift, if he would fly over from England and install it for him. He agreed, and arrived last Wednesday night. The installation was completed by Saturday, and Richard returned back to Great Britain on Sunday.

ALOHA, LOBSTER LOVERS

Hungry for lobster? Then you won't want to miss the Cohasset Sailing Club's annual launch party Saturday, July 10 from 5-11 p.m. for the parents and adult members of the club. This year the club will be sponsoring a lobster dinner which includes clam chowder, steamers, corn, salad, hamburgers and hot dogs and soda. Please wear your best flowered shirt and/or grass skirt because the party is going Hawaiian. After dinner a live auction will be held to benefit maintenance and upgrades planned for the club. Auction items include Patriots tickets, fishing charters, sunset wine and cheese sail, jewelry and much more. Don't miss the party of the summer, aloha! Tickets are $40 person (BYOB) and are available by contacting Maureen McElgunn at 383-1465 or Karen Oronte at 383-6737.

DEAN'S LIST

Ethan Michael Begley, a May graduate of Assumption College and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kevin J. Begley of Beechwood Street, has been named to the dean's list for the spring semester. Excellent!

QUINNIPIAC GRAD

Congratulations to Cohasset's Alissa Conley on receiving her bachelor's degree from Quinnipiac University on May 16.

YARD-BAKE SALE

There will be a yard/bake sale at the Beechwood Church on Church Street on Saturday, July 10 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Brand-new items as well as good used treasures ranging from furniture to toys will be sold. Proceeds raised will benefit church projects.

CHEERLEADING VOLUNTEERS

Scituate/Cohasset Youth Football & Cheerleading needs two to three volunteers to help coach the eighth grade Sharks A Cheerleading team. This commitment will involve being at practices from Aug. 16, through Sept. 9, Monday through Thursday 5 to 7 p.m. and attending the weekend games from Sept. 12 through Nov. 14. Cheerleading experience is not necessary as you will have junior coaches working on cheers and dance with the squad. If you have an interest and can make the commitment, call Lorie Neil at 781-545-4526.

BACK PAIN SEMINAR

Jade Forest Kung Fu/Tai Chi will host Lawrence Gold for a weekend seminar on managing/eliminating back pain through the use of Somatics exercises. Somatics represents a revolutionary approach to optimal body wellness by eliminating somatic muscle amnesia. This is accomplished by reconditioning the brain/muscle connection to restore patterns that give the freedom of movement so necessary for a trustworthy back. The weekend seminar will be conducted on Friday evening, July 16 through Sunday, July 18. Cost to attend is $225. Contact John Loupos at 781-383-6822 for scheduling details or to preregister. Deer Hill graduation day

Sixth-grade moves up to the middle school

Achievement Award. Gauley said every year, two students — one boy and one girl — are commended for outstanding accomplishments during the school year.

Keegan thanked Gauley, his teachers, and the staff for the honor. "These three years have been wonderful," he said. He told his classmates to have a wonderful vacation and wished them good luck in the future.

Supt. Edward Malvey, who is retiring from the Cohasset School System, addressed the class, and said as the students move on to their new school, it will be a time of change, which he can relate to as his future is somewhat uncertain as well. "I don't know what's going to happen when I don't meet the school bus next year," he said. He told students if they get nervous about the transition, to remember, "There are people here who love you and will support you." Malvey wished the students all the best, and told them to have a fun summer, but to remember to make wise choices and come back next year safe and sound.

Representatives from Elizabeth Cisneros' class — Emily Bertovich, Abigail Faulkner, Thomson Jaffe, and Johanna Regan — then played a song on their flutes and clarinets. Their performance was followed by Gabrielle Rodman, who reminded the students that while they may have changed as they have gotten older, they are only becoming more sure of themselves. "The shy student has become more outgoing, the quiet boy has become more confident," she said. On their final day at Deer Hill, she reminded students to not only be tolerant, but accepting of others as they continue on their way. "Thanks to all of you for your support, guidance, and friendship," she said.

Representatives from Nancy Magnussen's class then paid their tribute to the class, which began with Charlotte Malone. She recalled how nervous she was when she began attending Deer Hill, because she didn't know what to expect. "I got over that, and I'm glad I did because i've learned more in these three years than I could have ever imagined," she said. She said the teachers at Deer Hill are not just liked, they're loved and they come to school each and every day to help their students succeed. "Instead of wondering what will become of us," she encouraged her classmates to step forward and choose what will become of them.

Charlotte was followed by Rebecca Dickinson and Emily St. John who sang "God Bless the USA."

Librarian Marjorie Murphy and teacher Joan Magoun receive retirement gifts from Lisa Pratt during last Thursday's sixth-grade graduation at Deer Hill.

School Committee member Jamie Williams gives Lauren Blaze her promotion certificate.

Representatives from Susan Horigan's class then addressed the audience, and Dominique Rioux encouraged her fellow classmates to "go out on a limb, isn't that where the fruit is?" She said as the class moves on, the challenges they face will become greater, but only those who dare to stretch their minds and take the good opportunities that come there way will be able to stay on "sturdy boughs."

Dominique was followed by Will Wise, who recited "Freedom Isn't Free," a ballad about segregation.

Megan Richardson, the second recipient of the Student Achievement Award then said a few words, reminding her classmates that over their past seven years of school, they have endured lots of tests, both in and out of the classroom. "We had to see if we were strong enough to be ourselves," she said.

Terry MacCormack and Sam Game then played the theme song for Harry Potter on their clarinet and saxophone, respectively, and Courtney Culhane played a song on the piano. All three are from Damian D'Angelo's class.

Paige Collins of Joann Magoun's class likened Deer Hill to a stepping stone that will bring each and every student another step higher on the staircase of life, and told classmates the memories of Deer Hill will always stay in their hearts.

Ian Porter, also of Magoun's class, said he cannot wait to go to a new school, because he has been prepared well. He said while there are still some uncertainties, including how much homework his new teachers will give him, whether the older kids will shove them into lockers or take their lunch money, he knows the class will overcome any challenges that come their way because they are prepared.

Reminding classmates it's nice to have an end to journey to, but in the end, it's the journey that really matters, Nicholas Lieberman of Victoria Sullivan's class reminded the sixth-grade class of all the fun times they've had over the years. Nicholas was followed by classmates Hilary Gaumer and Olivia Sullivan who recited the civil rights ballad, "Terrible Tragedy."

Gauley, the principal, then recognized all the teachers and staff at Deer Hill for their help throughout the year. He paid special tribute to two teachers who will retire at the end of this year, including Magoun, and the Deer Hill librarian Marjorie Murphy. The two were presented with watercolors of Deer Hill, painted by local artist JoAnne Chittick.

Students were then presented with their certificates of promotion and watched a video montage of the class participating in sports, during class, and just hanging out at recess. As the ceremony concluded and students wrapped up their last day at Deer Hill, Gauley praised the students who were the first to be promoted under his watch. " Congratulations and good job to the sixth-grade class. I will miss you very much."

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Change of heart needed

Pardon the pun, but we believe that the Legislature should have a change of heart when it comes to permitting a medical procedure that South Shore Hospital (SSH) wanted to incorporate into its services.

Last week, the State House shot down an amendment to the state budget, added by local legislators, which would have allowed SSH to perform angioplasty surgery on an elective basis.

At the moment under Department of Public Health (DPH) regulations, SSH is only allowed to perform such surgery on an emergency or primary basis when someone is suffering a heart attack.

In practical terms, if a patient arrives at SSH having a heart attack and needs immediate open heart surgery, he or she must be taken by ambulance to a Boston hospital which is licensed to perform the surgery.

This means that precious time is lost.

Without getting into too much detail, this type of surgery involves threading a balloon tipped catheter into arteries around the heart to clear blockages.

It has become a popular method in recent years to treat heart attacks and heart disease and is considered less invasive than traditional open heart surgery.

Angioplasty is a procedure in which a catheter is threaded through an artery, starting in the groin area, into the coronary arteries of the heart.

The catheter is equipped with various devices to perform repairs to the coronary arteries to clear blockages and restore blood flow. A stent is then placed in the artery to shore up the artery walls.

Over the last two years, we're told that the introduction of drug-eluting stents and more sensitive equipment for delivering these stents have made elective angioplasty the procedure of choice for many heart conditions which were previously corrected using open heart surgery only.

SSH has been seeking a cardiac surgery license for four years.

Six hospitals, including SSH, initially applied for three available licenses in 2001.

The DPH granted licenses to Cape Cod Hospital in Hyannis, South Coast Hospital in Fall River, and North Shore Medical Center in Salem. SSH was not chosen, but has actively sought approval ever since.

State Rep. James Murphy, D-Weymouth, who introduced the amendment to the budget proposal, argued last month that there is no reason why SSH should not be able to perform the surgery on an elective basis.

"It makes no sense that a hospital may perform this procedure when someone is suffering a heart attack, but cannot make an appointment two weeks from now to perform the same surgery to prevent a heart attack," he said.

This sounds logical to us, but evidently not everyone agrees.

According to Richard Pozniak, SSH's director of public affairs, the angioplasty surgery amendment was discarded during the conference committee's consideration of the budget.

He said it was his understanding that the committee "did not want to deal with health care issues" within the budget.

Understandably, Pozniak expressed dismay about the way things turned out.

"We're very disappointed, but we will continue to fight for approval of comprehensive cardiac services," he said.

Pozniak mentioned something about the decision which strikes us as "a puzzlement," quoting Yul Brynner in "The King & I."

The doctors who perform the surgery on an emergency basis in Weymouth are the same ones who do it in Boston on an elective basis, meaning that patients decide on the surgery as a means of preventing heart attacks and other failures.

Pozniak is confident that elective angioplasties could be done at the SSH with no problems.

"We can perform this surgery with the highest degree of safety and care," he said. "There is no clinical reason why we should not be offering elective angioplasty to the people of the South Shore."

Pozniak is convinced that patients should not have to travel to Boston to have this surgery performed.

"If doctors can do it in Boston successfully, why can't they do it here?" he said.

This is a legitimate question which deserves a satisfactory answer from the Legislature.

Transparency a must in review of TM Act

TO THE EDITOR:

An open letter to Chairman Rob Spofford and the Town Manager Act Review Committee:

Openness and free discourse prevailed at last Thursday evening's well-attended meeting where revisions to the Town Manager Act were discussed. Citizens were able to air their views and make specific suggestions regarding the act. It is my hope that this sort of cooperation between the committee, town officials and voters will continue.

To make the TMA revision work successfully, the process must always be simmering on the front burner and moving forward in full view. TMA Committee, selectmen and interested citizens must work together to make this happen. Transparency and two-way communication are essential here, and to that end comments by townspeople should always be welcome.

In order to preserve open records of "who said what", I support Rob's statement that he will accept written input from the public. However, I would go one step further. At this point in history, "written" must, as often as possible, take the form of copied e-mails. And ideally these messages should flow both ways! Thus transparency is established from the get-go, and no single person or group takes control over what the TMA committee sees and doesn't see, or what the public hears and understands. If I send a suggestion or objection to the committee, I will also copy it to others. If the committee chooses to adopt or ignore it, that becomes immediately known.

"Executive sessions" should play no part in the TMA revision endeavor. I disagree with any who suggest that expediency should be valued above accuracy, or that a steady march to consensus be sacrificed for a rush to finalize. (Remember Aesop's hare and tortoise!) Progress reports of the committee should be published frequently; public comments and suggestions should be invited at well-publicized open meetings.

This moment in time presents a perfect opportunity to benefit from Cohasset's recent mistakes. The process is, and should be, an open book. Citizens are watching carefully to see what unfolds, and we look forward to constructive participation.

See you on July 7.

Commonsense erupts on TM Act review board

TO THE EDITOR:

What a pleasant surprise to find that the attendees at the first meeting of the Town Manager Act Review Committee seemed to agree that their objective should be to enable the town manager to most effectively execute the policies and directives of the selectmen, and generally have the authority and responsibility to manage the affairs of the town through his office and through the various town departments. I had expected to hear a lot of counter-productive nonsense about curbing his powers, decentralizing decision making and control as being more democratic; but instead the emphasis seemed to be on effectiveness. That effectiveness, of course, we have had for the last several years and sorely need to continue to have.

But the Committee needs to expedite its work, despite the impressive agenda of consultations it is considering. We can't expect Michael Buckley to be both Director of Municipal Finance and Town Manager for very long; both jobs require much time-consuming attention to detail. The search for a new TM must start very soon, but any manager worth having will want to know before signing on just what is expected of him or her, and what are the limitations or powers that influence his or her ability to do the job.

Let us hope that the Committee will continue to concentrate on helping the TM be effective, and not go up the blind alleys of curbing his authority or diffusing the structure of decision making and control. The selectmen are not strengthened by emasculating the TM position, nor would the people's business be better conducted by setting up a loosey-goosey structure that no good private business would contemplate.

DPW workers effort praised

TO THE EDITOR:

The following letter to DPW Supt. Carl Sestito was in selectmen's correspondence:

I wanted to make you aware of the help that two of your employees provided to me last week that went above and beyond their normal duties.

I had just purchased a new boat a few days earlier and I needed to bring the boat and trailer back to the dealer for service. On the morning of May 29, I was leaving my driveway when the trailer with the boat attached came loose from the hitch and fell down to the pavement and under the car. A few minutes later as I was looking at the problem and trying to figure out what to do, Herb Marsh and Ken Thayer drove past.

Without any request on my part these two men stopped to see what assistance they could provide. Herb and Ken helped me move the trailer from the inclined driveway onto a flat space on Jerusalem Road so I was not blocking my neighbors. Herb and Ken then proceeded to help me jack up the trailer and using some "yankee ingenuity", reattach the trailer to the hitch.

Without the help of Mr. Marsh and Mr. Thayer I would not have been able to correct the problem on my own and would have had to call a marine towing service.

It is nice to know that the Cohasset Public Works Department has such helpful employees as Herb Marsh and Ken Thayer. Employees who will help a citizen even though this was not part of their daily job.

Art Center grateful for festival support

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Board of Directors and the staff of the South Shore Art Center, we would like to thank the many, many people who helped make this year's Arts Festival a tremendous success.

There are two individuals whom we truly "couldn't do it without." They are incredibly generous with their time and commitment — a million thanks to Mary Foley and Beverly Bielewicz and their families!

Thank you to Merle Brown for suggesting the Arts Festival as an event for a state sponsored recycling program, for bringing the right people together, and then being on-site to execute the recycling throughout the weekend. Also, thanks to the Board of Selectmen, Ellen Wynne, Dept. of Public Works, and Dr. Ted Malvey. Thanks to the many local businesses and individuals that make all the small details more manageable: Party by Design, Bruce Cameron, Tom Hamilton, Andrea and Joe Kinnealey and Kinnealey Meats, Lower Mills Seafood, Cohasset Harbor Marina, Peacock Press, Beacon Investment Management, LLC; Conway Insurance Company, First Parish Church, Second Congregational Church, Hingham Mutual Fire Insurance Co., Bernard's, Granite City Electric, Cohasset Collision Center, L.P. Carpenter Interiors, The Hurley Group, Lappen Auto Supply Co., Ritz Camera, Village Wine and Spirits, Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, Graham Waste Services, Reed's Country Way Nursery, Atlantic Bagel and Glenn Pratt and the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee.

More than 100 volunteers, artists, and students gave their time ensuring that the Arts Festival not only ran smoothly but continues to be regarded as one of the "best" shows our exhibitors participate in. Thanks to the many talented Cohasset musicians who participated: Caitlin O'Connell and Molly Trisler; the Rusty Skippers; Sachiko Isihara and the Suzuki School of Newton; Joe Armstrong; Ana Buckley; and Abby, Sarah and Audrey Brown. And a huge thanks to our Cohasset High School interns Peter Bunstein and Allison Dean—and Jack Buckley for sending them our way!

The Art Center's Platinum Corporate Sponsor Rockland Trust, as well as the many local businesses that support the Festival — particularly Community Newspaper Company and BMW Gallery, Norwell — make it possible for the Art Center to present a Festival that showcases art and celebrates the wonderful and creative community of the South Shore. See you for the 50th South Shore Art Center Arts Festival, June 17-20, 2005!

HEALTH NOTES

It's important to be prepared for health and other emergencies

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

When one thinks of an emergency, it's either a sudden illness, an accident like a fall or a car wreck, an attack such as a mugging or assault, or a natural disaster, such as a blizzard. We tend not to worry about some emergencies because of the low probability of their occurring, while for others we may take out insurance because we know that at some time something will happen.

A town like Cohasset has to be aware that such situations exist, but on a larger scale. Similarly, there is a debate going on at a national level about the response to events affecting many people, such as terrorism.

This is important to the town for two reasons: We need to be prepared. Also, Federal and State money has become available to help. For most of us, the possibility of being affected by events stemming from a terrorist attack is extremely small. Nevertheless, it is necessary for the country as a whole to respond to such a threat and prepare. This means planning and planning costs money.

Accordingly, the Federal and State government has allocated funds for such preparation. Our portion of these funds are very small when viewed as a portion of the national or even the state commitment. But because of the way the funds are allocated, we have a small pot of money which will be of significant assistance in some of our more mundane day-to-day threats. Of the some $17,000 given to the Town to prepare for emergencies, the board of health has received $5,000, much of which will be spent on medical equipment (among other things, a defibrillator).

The Town would not otherwise have considered this a good investment because of the low probability that it would be needed. Nevertheless, national statistics indicate that, where the right equipment has been available, and trained people available to use it, probabilities of survival from medical emergencies have increased dramatically.

Other equipment to be purchased under the present grant are radiation sensors to be used to alert emergency personnel of the presence of radiation at the scene of an emergency. These sensors till be used by selected personnel who have been trained to use them. In addition, an emergency response survey kit will be purchased which will have sensors to tell what type of hazard is being dealt with.

Further, you may know that the selectmen approved purchase of defibrillators for the fire department, to be paid for by a grant obtained by the department as well as funds raised by firefighters, who have volunteered to begin a fundraising campaign. Actually, sufficient funds have already been donated to purchase two defibrillators, as well as some training. Selectmen voted to establish an AED (Automatic External Defibrillator) gift fund for such purposes. If you are interested in supporting your fire department for a good cause, call the fire station and ask for Captain Robert Silvia to find out the details.

So even a small amount of money necessitates planning and organization, lest it be wasted. For example, where should the equipment be located, who should receive extensive training, and to whom should simple generalized instructions be given? For this reason, several events have been planned. Meetings of the Local Emergency Management Planning Committee are regularly scheduled to plan, discuss progress and disseminate information. The committee membership is flexible and may change as new needs are recognized and new expertise is needed, but the prime movers are chairman Arthur Lehr, associate chairman Glen Pratt, chief coordinator, Police Chief James Hussey, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln, health coordinator Joe Godzik and Judy Fitzsimmons, public health nurse. Training seminars are ongoing, and workshops are attended regularly by selected personnel.

For example last Wednesday Judy Fitzsimmons, Joe Godzik and I went to Boston to attend a conference on forensic epidemiology, a skill which would never have been considered necessary before recent events demonstrated a need.

It may never happen, but at least, thanks mainly to Glenn Pratt, the Town has changed from being one of the less well prepared communities, to having a responsible well coordinated emergency program; not perfect, but getting better every day.

Butter is key for classic all-American cupcake

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Cupcakes are more than "little cakes" since they need a bit more structure to be held in one's hand (otherwise they readily crumble and fall apart). At the same time, one wants a tender crumb and big flavor. So, with these competing goals in mind, we set out to resurrect the classic American cupcake, frosting and all.

After researching a half dozen cupcake recipes – many of which were so delicate that we couldn't even remove the paper cups without damaging them – we put together a working recipe that yielded an even dozen and included all-purpose flour, sugar, baking powder, butter, milk, eggs, salt, and vanilla. We first tested flours and finally settled on half all-purpose (on the tough side) and half cake flour (on the crumbly side). Granulated sugar was the winner here and 7/8 cup was just right. The amount of baking powder varied significantly from recipe to recipe, but we found that a mere 1-1/2 teaspoons was best. More baking powder did not producer either taller or lighter cakes.

Butter is key here but too much makes an oily, greasy cupcake. We played with amounts from six to ten tablespoons and eight turned out to be the magic number. A half-cup of milk was a winner in the dairy department, a bit of a surprise since buttermilk and sour cream often make great baked goods. As we often discover a mixture of whole eggs and egg yolks was best: In this case, one whole egg and two yolks was the right combination. (All yolks made the cupcakes too rich and all whole eggs left them dry and crumbly.)

The method is a bit unusual in that most cupcake recipes call for creaming the butter. We found a simple two-step process worked better. We simply added the dry ingredients to the bowl of the mixer along with the butter and some of the milk. After these are mixed, the balance of the wet ingredients are added in three batches.

The recipe makes 12 cupcakes but can easily be doubled. I found the cupcakes should definitely be made in papers. They are obviously easier to remove from the pan and it makes better sense for frosting and serving. As for frosting, we chose our Old Fashioned Chocolate Frosting, one of our favorites. For a variation, we filled the cupcakes with a Rich Lemon Filling. We cut out a disc from the top of each cake, filled the cavity with the lemon filling, placed the disc back onto the cupcake and then sprinkled with confectioners' sugar. If that is too fussy you can simply place a dollop of the filling on top of each cake and dust with the confectioners' sugar.

All-American cupcakes

This recipe yields 12 cupcakes, although it can easily be doubled. The cupcakes are best eaten on the day they are made.

1/2 cup whole milk
1 large egg plus two yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla
3/4 cup all-purpose flour
3/4 cup cake flour
7/8 cup granulated sugar
1-1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 stick unsalted butter at room temperature

1. Heat the oven to 350 degrees and adjust a rack to the center position. Line a 12-cup muffin/cupcake pan with paper liners. Whisk 1/4 cup milk (reserving 1/4-cup), the egg and yolks and the vanilla in a small bowl until well combined.

2. Place the flours, sugar, baking powder and salt in the bowl of a standing mixer fitted with the paddle attachment. Mix on low speed for 30 seconds to blend. Add the butter and remaining 1/4 cup milk and mix on low speed until dry ingredients are moistened, about 1 minute. Increase the speed to medium and mix until the batter comes together, about 30 seconds. Increase the speed to medium high and mix for two minutes, stopping to scrape down the sides of the bowl once or twice. Add the milk/egg mixture to the batter in three batches mixing for about 20 seconds after each addition. Scrape down the sides of the bowl and beat on medium high until batter is homogeneous and fluffy, about 1 minute.

3. Evenly distribute the batter between the paper-lined cups using a scant quarter cup for each. Bake until the cupcakes are golden brown and a toothpick or cake tester comes out clean, about 20 to 25 minutes. Let cool in pan for 10 minutes and then remove cupcakes from pan to cool on a rack to room temperature, an additional 30 minutes. Finish with either the Old Fashioned Chocolate Frosting or Rich Lemon Filling as described below.

Old fashioned chocolate frosting

The trick with this recipe is cooling the chocolate mixture until it thickens but is not stiff.

1/2 cup heavy cream
4 ounces bittersweet or semisweet chocolate, coarsely chopped
2 tablespoons light or dark corn syrup
8 tablespoons (1 stick) unsalted butter at cool room temperature, cut into 1-inch pieces
1/4 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/2 cup confectioners' sugar

1. Place the cream in a small saucepan over low heat until it is just simmering and small bubbles are forming around the edges of the pan. Remove from heat; add the chocolate, and whisk mixture until homogeneous, shiny and smooth. Transfer to a mixing bowl and cool until the mixture thickens but is not stiff. You may refrigerate the bowl to speed up the cooling process, checking about every 15 minutes. Do not allow the mixture to harden.

2. To the bowl add the corn syrup, butter and vanilla and beat with an electric mixer until well-combined, about one minute. Add the confectioners' sugar and beat on low to combine. Increase the speed to high and beat for about 5 minutes more or until the mixture has lightened in color and the texture is spreadable.

3. Spread a generous 2 to 3 tablespoons of frosting on top of each cooled cupcake and serve.

Rich lemon filling

The key to any cornstarch-thickened pudding/filling is to whisk gently. Over- whisking can lead to a thin texture.

1/3 cup plus 1 tablespoon granulated sugar
1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
Pinch salt
1/2 cup less 1 tablespoon cold water
1 large egg yolk
3 tablespoons lemon juice from one lemon
1 teaspoon lemon zest
1 tablespoon unsalted butter
Confectioners' sugar for dusting

1. Whisk the sugar, cornstarch, salt and water in a 2-quart non-reactive saucepan. Bring the mixture to a simmer whisking frequently but gently. When it starts to turn translucent and simmer, add the egg yolk and whisk to combine. The filling will be very thick at this point. Add the lemon juice and zest (the filling will thin out) and bring the mixture back to a simmer, stirring constantly until bubbling and thickened. Remove from heat; stir in the butter until melted. Cool to room temperature.

2. Using a paring knife, cut a disc from the top of each cupcake. Starting from about 1/2 inch from the outer edge, stick the knife into the cupcake at about a 45-degree angle down toward the center and work your way around the cupcake. Remove the disc and place a heaping tablespoon of lemon filling into the cavity and place the cake disc back onto the filling. Repeat with remaining cupcakes and dust with confectioners' sugar before serving. Alternatively, you may simply place a dollop of lemon filling on top of each cupcake and dust with confectioners' sugar.

Choosing a candidate

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I tell you it's an emerging problem finding good candidates to run for political office in these "let it all hang out" days of the Internet, Rush Limbaugh, and Larry Flynt.

Why, I'm told that just the other day a recruiter for a major political party conducted the following interview with a potential candidate — and, if it didn't happen, it surely should have.

"Let's see now, you want to run for president," said the recruiter. "Is that right?"

"Yes."

"I'm afraid I'll have to ask you a few questions."

"Go ahead. I have nothing to hide."

"When did you kiss a girl for the first time?"

"Oh, I was about six."

"Did you force yourself on her?"

"Of course not. My mother made me do it. She thought it would be cute."

"Is the girl likely to talk about it on the Howie Carr show?"

"For crying out loud, we were only six. I haven't seen her in years. I can't even remember her name."

"They have ways of finding out those things. But I guess we'll have to take a chance. Did you ever smoke marijuana?

"Well, there was this one time . . ."

"Did anyone see you?"

"Sure. There was a whole bunch of people and we all torched a toke together."

"Don't ever use that language around Matt Drudge, or you'll be branded a druggie all over the Internet. Kabeesh?

"Righto."

"Do I detect a note of sarcasm? This is serious business. Don't you know that two prospective Supreme Court justices were turned down because they had once smoked marijuana?"

"Sorry."

"Did you inhale?"

"Yes."

"If anyone asks you, say, 'no.' No one can prove it either way. That's how Bill Clinton saved his job. Did you ever use any other drugs?"

"I've had a martini or two in my time."

"Ever arrested for drunken driving?"

"Well, there was this cop who pulled me over on the freeway one time . . ."

"Did he give you a ticket?"

"He wrote something down and I had to . . ."

"Never mind. If you ever do become a candidate, you'll have to own up to that right away. George W. Bush kept his arrest secret until somebody discovered it at the last minute, and it nearly cost him his job."

"I'll remember that."

"Are you a veteran?"

"Yeah."

"Win any medals?"

"A couple, and a couple of Purple Hearts, too."

"We'll have to keep that secret. After what they did to John Kerry's war record, it doesn't pay to talk about it."

"That's all right with me."

"Well, I guess that's it. Send in the next candidate, will you?"

"That's it? Aren't you going to ask me how I stand on the war in Iraq, health care, and the environment?"

"Someone else will be in touch with you about those things. I only handle the important stuff."

SSH, an asset to our community

TO THE EDITOR:

I'm a volunteer of the South Shore Hospital and like many others, my service was inspired by the extraordinary care that my family received. In my years with the hospital, I've met many of the most skilled, dedicated and caring nurses and doctors to be found anywhere. They're our neighbors and like us, they rely on the same hospital to care for their families.

Anyone who gets a newspaper in this country knows that a staggering number of hospitals have been forced to close. Many people are in jeopardy as a result, yet in light of the same daunting challenges our South Shore Hospital has grown. We can be proud of its affiliations with the likes of Children's Hospital and Brigham & Women's, and applaud the introduction of critical programs not generally available at the community level — ones that save more lives every day.

It's certainly disturbing to hear about mistakes in the ER. God forbid we should be one of those statistics, yet I trust that improvements will come of this learning experience. Meanwhile, we0re hurting ourselves if we take recent incidents out of context. Twelve complaints in a year out of more than 70,000 — the second or third busiest ER in the commonwealth, doesn't seem reason to flagellate the hospital and lose sight of its achievements.

The hospital's future depends on visionary management in league with solid community support. To take too much for granted demoralizes those visionaries who have elevated the standard of care far beyond what was previously available. In this time, we should not lose sight of the fact that the South Shore Hospital is one of our most vital community assets and it needs our utmost support and encouragement.

Has questions about sewering Cook Estate

TO THE EDITOR:

I watched the Selectmen's meeting of June 22 with great interest. It seems now the only solution to the development of the Cook Estate is town sewer. Now that we have spent nearly $140,000 on the pre-development work (there are substantial unpaid costs and fees) we are being told it is likely we need to sewer this property if this project is to proceed. It has been suggested that we use existing capacity for Cook and build a satellite treatment plant for Little Harbor. Will this be free? I think not.

At town meeting when this project was approved, it was with the understanding that an on-site wastewater treatment facility was required. We were told this was our best chance to get additional housing suitable for seniors because Cedarmere and Avalon had wastewater treatment problems and couldn't proceed until a solution was determined. There was no availability to tie into town sewer due to the need to sewer Little Harbor, so it was very possible both of these projects would fail.

We were threatened with the specter of a 40B development on the Cook Estate which could put several hundred units on the property unless we acted immediately. The reality is that if the land will not support 95 units proposed by Northland, it will not support several hundred units proposed by another developer, regardless of whether they apply under 40B. The fact is that if we sewer this it may cost us a substantial amount to replace the capacity we have designated for Little Harbor.

The truth is that Avalon, Cedarmere and Cook are all private developments with the same issues, wastewater treatment. If you remove the emotional component of the town doing something for our seniors and look at it objectively, each of the three developments in question would provide some of our seniors with another housing option. None of these developments would be ideal for all seniors and the desirability of each depends on individual opinion. With the appreciation of property in Cohasset, there is no guarantee the market rate units at Cook would remain within the target price range for seniors who want to buy them in the future. While Cook and Cedarmere would be limited to those 55 and older, Avalon might provide an option for seniors who don't want to live in an age segregated community or those who want to rent. All of these developments would be privately owned and operated.

Avalon and Cedarmere were denied sewer access prior to the town reaching any agreement with the Cook Estate. They have filed a lawsuit against the town for sewer access. Giving sewer access to Cook, the third project in the pipeline, while continuing to deny the first two may make it more likely their lawsuit will succeed.

There are questions that must be answered before we move any further with this project. Can we really sewer the Cook without the risk of losing the Cedarmere/Avalon lawsuit? If we are forced to sewer all three developments, does this put in jeopardy the ability to sewer Little Harbor? Is a satellite treatment plan really a viable solution? How much capacity would be gained? Who will benefit? If we have enough capacity for Little Harbor right now, are we discussing building a new treatment plant just for private developers of new housing units? Who will pay for this? If the town is being asked to pay, how much will it cost us?

What seemed so straightforward at town meeting: the developer pays for the wastewater solution, the town makes a profit on the sale of the town owned land and we gain some new housing for our seniors, is now anything but simple. Yes, we need senior housing in town, but at what cost? We should not be so tied to this privately owned development that we sell out the rest of the town.

Fight over filling Sen. Kerry's seat is highly partisan

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

By Michael P. Norton

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

With only four weeks left to advance controversial bills, lawmakers made laws at a much quicker pace, but it was one of their major new policy proposals, which has the potential to tip the balance of power in the US Senate, that put the emotions in motion on the Hill.

Believing US Sen. John Kerry may knock off President George W. Bush in November, Democrats in the Legislature are intent on changing state law to prevent Republican Gov. Mitt Romney from appointing a successor, and to instead require an expedited special election, one they strongly believe a Democrat will win.

Before, during and after a 32 to 8 party line vote to take away Romney's appointment power, Senate Republicans railed against what they called a blatant political power grab. The Democrats, Republicans said, want to set up a shotgun election in which only a handful of incumbent Democratic congressmen, or some other very wealthy candidates, would be able to muster the modern-day financial might necessary to win a US Senate seat.

In short, Republicans said, Democrats would rig the election cycle, hoping to tip the balance in a divided US Senate, because they fear a Republican appointee might resonate with voters in the two years prior to a November 2006 special election that would be held if the laws were left alone. Kerry's current term runs through 2008.

Democrats argued that was so much Republican nonsense and made their own feelings plain. What could be fairer than letting voters statewide decide who serves them in the US Senate, they argued. Other senators said it's both personal and political. No, they don't trust Romney. And yes, they do want Kerry's seat to remain in the D column. And if that end requires the means of taking gubernatorial powers away, then so be it, they said in sum.

Anticipating a Romney veto and mindful that they will need time to override it before completing major business to attend the Democratic National Convention in late July, the House indicated it plans to push the special election bill through next week. Republicans in the House were so opposed to the bill that they blocked it from being admitted, forcing Democrats to resort to a seldom-used circumvention of traditional process. But as in the Senate, the House Republicans are far too few in number to stop the Democrats from doing anything they want, whenever they want.

While party lines in the sand were drawn over the special election bill, bipartisanship is ruling on other matters.

• Romney to decide fate of weapons regulations bill — A weapons regulation bill stalled for six years sprung like a bullet onto Romney's desk. The legislation would prevent the possibility that a 1998 state ban on assault weapons would lapse without Congressional action this fall. But gun rights activists say that provision is secondary to a host of reforms aimed at making laws work better for gun owners, including everything from wallet-size license cards to grace periods for license renewals and a new board to review license requests from applicants with misdemeanors on their records.

• Senate approves bill to spark school construction boom — The Senate joined the House in approving legislation aimed at generating new construction jobs and building better classrooms in schools statewide. A bill approved would clear a backlog of school construction projects by 2007 by dedicating a penny of the state's five-cent sales tax to help municipalities afford the expensive projects. The bill also devotes $150 million from this fiscal year's surplus to jumpstart the new School Building Authority.

• Environmentalists, governor in continuing struggle over open space funding — For the second straight year, environmental groups urged Gov. Romney to restore capital budget spending for open space purchases to the recent 10-year average of $50 million. The governor cut the item back to $18 million last year. Environmentalists say more substantial state funding levels are a powerful supplement to outlays by non-profit and private groups interested in preservation. Administration officials countered that the governor hopes to spend $55 million from this fiscal year's surplus to upgrade the state's park system. The administration will soon announce its updated capital spending allotments. The administration, not the Legislature, determines which capital projects get funded each year, picking from a large multi-year menu of approved legislative proposals.

• Sagamore bill creates quandary for Romney — The House and Senate are finally in sync on one of Gov. Romney's top legislative priorities. Both branches have now approved identical bills allowing state land takings needed to reconfigure the Sagamore rotary, separating local traffic from motorists coming on and off Cape Cod. But lawmakers have attached a rider to the bill that makes the legislation thorny for the governor. The rider directs the MBTA to begin doing everything it takes to fast track commuter rail extensions to Fall River and New Bedford. Romney believes that project is unaffordable, but if he doesn't go along with the rider, he may alienate voters in a region long looking to pump up its economic prospects.

• House okays biggest changes to child labor laws in 60 years — The House voted 145 to 10 to approve a bill allowing minors to work until 11:30 p.m. on non-school nights, giving them a half hour to drive home before they are banned from the roads under the state's junior operator law. Minors could continue to work until 10 p.m. on school nights. The bill also prohibits anyone under 18 from working in a job requiring a firearm and requires minors on the job to be supervised after 8 p.m. by someone 18 or older. And for the first time, the laws will be enforced because the bill provides for civil, not just criminal remedies. "Currently the truth is minors can work any hours because nothing is being enforced," said Commerce and Labor Committee co-chair Rep. Michael Rodrigues. The bill now heads to the Senate for its consideration.

• Romney testifies in Washington for federal marriage amendment— Gov. Mitt Romney testified in front of a US Senate committee in favor of a proposed federal constitutional amendment defining marriage as between a man and woman only. Romney told Congress that Massachusetts was exporting gay marriage to the rest of the nation, and said the high court in Massachusetts thought only about adults' rights and not about children. "Same sex marriage doesn't hurt my marriage, or yours," Romney said. "But it may affect the development of children and thereby future society as a whole." Romney critics said he is pandering to the right wing and perpetuating discrimination.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Cohasset Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.
THE HOUSE AND SENATE: BHRC records local representatives' votes on two roll calls and local senators' votes on five roll calls from the week of June 21-25.

CHILD LABOR LAWS (H 4891)
House 145-10, gave near final approval to and sent to the Senate a bill making changes in the state's child labor laws. Current law allows 16 and 17-year-old minors to work only until 10 p.m. on non-school nights but includes a special provision permitting them to work until midnight at racetracks or restaurants. The bill would allow all minors to work until 11:30 p.m. on non-school nights. Other key provisions require minors working after 8 p.m. to be supervised by an adult over 18 and prohibit minors from working in a job that requires a firearm. The measure also gives the attorney general the power to issue civil citations to businesses that violate the child labor laws including up to a $500 fine for a first offense, $1000 for a second offense and $5000 for subsequent offenses. Current law only allows the attorney general to initiate criminal proceedings. Supporters said the bill would treat all minors the same regardless of the industry in which they are working and argued that allowing civil fines would result in more prosecutions because the attorney general rarely initiates criminal proceedings in these matters. They noted that the 11:30 p.m. deadline is important because these minors cannot legally drive without their parents after midnight. Some opponents favored an 11:00 p.m. deadline and argued that the 11:30 p.m. one would not give these minor drivers sufficient time to drive home safely after work. Others said that the they preferred that a minor worker's supervisor after 8 p.m. be 21 years old rather than 18. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it).

CHILD LABOR LAWS AMENDMENT (H 4891)
House 69-86, rejected an amendment to the bill making changes in the child labor laws. The amendment allows all minors to work until 11:00 p.m. instead of 11:30 p.m. on a non school night; requires minors working after 8 p.m. to be supervised by an adult over 21 instead of 18; and allows the department of labor to grant a special exemption to permit minors to work at racetracks after 11:00 p.m. on a non-school night. Another change would require employers to treat a high school student over 18 as a minor worker, despite his or her age, unless the student and school superintendent sign a waiver. Amendment supporters said the earlier 11:00 p.m. deadline would give these minor drivers sufficient time to drive home safely after work. They noted that allowing 18-year-olds to be supervisors after 8 p.m. would often result in a high school student being supervised by a fellow high school student who is only a few days older. Some amendment opponents said one-half hour is sufficient for minors to drive home and noted that these drivers would not go directly home if they left work at 11:00 p.m. Others objected to the special exemption for racetracks while some noted that prohibiting an 18-year-old from being a supervisor would unfairly prohibit the job promotion of people who graduate high school and are not going on to college. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it).

FILLING U.S. SENATE VACANCY (S 2404)
Senate 33-7, gave initial approval to and then 32-8, gave near final approval to and sent to the House a bill that takes away the power of the governor to appoint a temporary replacement for any U.S. Senate seat that becomes vacant in Massachusetts. Under current law, the governor appoints a temporary replacement when the seat becomes vacant and the voters elect a senator at the next general state election or at the following general election if the vacancy occurs less than 70 days prior to the primary election. The bill calls for a special election to be held between 145 and 160 days after the incumbent senator files a letter of resignation, even if the actual resignation occurs at a later date. Supporters said the current 100-year-old system is archaic and takes power away from the voters by allowing a governor to unilaterally make this crucial appointment that could last more than two years. They argued that the temporary appointee would also have an unfair advantage as an "appointed incumbent." Opponents said the bill is sponsored by Democrats who fear Gov. Romney would have the opportunity to appoint a Republican to fill Sen. John Kerry's seat if Kerry wins the November presidential election. They argued that the measure is a political ploy designed to preserve the seat for a Democrat. They noted that holding a U.S. Senate election in a very short period of time would give an unfair advantage to incumbent Democratic congressman with huge war chests and make it difficult for lesser-known, underfunded citizens to mount an effective campaign. (Both roll calls are listed. A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it).

SAGAMORE ROTARY PROJECT (S 2377)
Senate 37-1, gave near final approval to a House-approved bill allowing the state to take 1.3 acres of open space land from the town of Bourne and in exchange give Bourne more than four acres of land, a new firehouse and a visitor's center. The measure also requires that the state complete all permitting necessary and take other specific actions for the extension of commuter rail services to New Bedford and Fall River. Supporters said this land-swap is necessary in order to begin construction on the $58 million so-called "flyover project" that would eliminate the existing Sagamore Rotary, replace it with a direct connection from Route 3 to the Sagamore Bridge and provide a new underpass for local traffic. They argued that the current rotary often causes up to ten-mile traffic backups and many accidents during the tourist season. They noted that the language for the New Bedford and Fall River extension was added to the bill in order to gain the support of South Coast legislators who were threatening to hold up the bill. Opponents said the Romney administration and the Legislature are unfairly putting these two projects ahead of other important construction projects including a commuter rail extension between Lynn and Boston. The measure needs only final approval in each branch prior to going to Gov. Romney. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it).

CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECKS ON CAMP EMPLOYEES (H 4610)
Senate 24-15, gave final approval to and sent to Gov. Romney a bill allowing summer camps, during their operational season, to conditionally hire employees and volunteers prior to the receipt of the state-mandated criminal offender record information (CORI) on the applicant. These conditional workers would be prohibited from unsupervised contact with children until the CORI results are received. Current law prohibits any hiring until the CORI information is received. The measure also requires the Department of Public Health to establish guidelines for camp operators to use in conjunction with the CORI results when determining whether to hire an applicant. Supporters said the bill would ensure that camps have adequate staff and noted that some camps lose potential employees because applicants are not willing to wait for the results of the CORI check and often choose to take a job elsewhere. They said the bill is a reasonable compromise that allows the hiring of conditional employees but prohibits their unsupervised contact with children. They also noted that the bill would help camps by establishing guidelines to help determine whether to hire certain individuals. Opponents said this temporary exemption would weaken a system designed to protect children. They argued that conditional hiring could result in ex-felons and other dangerous ex-offenders being allowed to work with vulnerable children until the camp receives the results of the CORI check. They argued that no one should be allowed to work in a supervised or unsupervised capacity with children until the CORI results are received. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it).

SCHOOL BUILDING ASSISTANCE (S 2398)
Senate 39-0, gave near final approval to a bill making major changes in the state's program that provides funding for cities and towns to renovate old school buildings and build new ones. The proposal takes the program away from the state's education department and creates a new independent authority, chaired by the state treasurer, to administer it. It also phases in over seven years the dedication of a penny of the state's five-cents per dollar sales tax to fund the building projects and places a three-year moratorium on any new projects that are not already approved. The authority would be funded by an initial $150 million in state funding and $1 billion in state borrowing through the issuance of bonds. Supporters said the current program is an underfunded failure that has created a huge backlog of over 400 projects on a waiting list. They argued that this long overdue reform would benefit local communities and their students, clear the waiting list in 3.5 years and create many construction jobs. The House has approved a different version of the measure and the Senate version now goes to the House for consideration. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

It's gonna be close! Post 118 catcher Terence O'Brien tries to block a throw in the dirt as Morrisette's Jeff Tam begins his slide into home in Zone 6 action at Scituate High on Sunday. Post 118 coach Mike Duggan looks on.

Down on their luck

Post 118 baseballers drop another pair

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

When it's going bad in baseball it sometimes seems there's no such thing as a good break.

The Cohasset Post 118 Legion baseballers snatched defeat from the jaws of victory on Sunday at home.

Sure, it's a cliché, but how else would you describe a 6-4 loss that saw the locals out-hit Morrisette by a 10-2 margin?

Ted Straughn, a senior-to-be at Cohasset High, wove a gem on the mound and clearly deserved a much better fate than he got. The hard throwing righty went the distance on the mound, striking out 11 while scattering five walks and the two hits.

The locals jumped out quickly on their home Scituate High field, as the first four hitters—Jeff Ciulla (2-for-4, double), Scott Carroll (2-for-4, double), Jack O'Leary (3-for-4, rbi) and Joe Duggan (1-for-4, rbi)-- all singled to open the game.

There wouldn't be a whole lot of offense after this, however, despite good days at the plate from second baseman Mike Barba (2-for-2) and catcher Terence O'Brien (2-for-3).

Cohasset carried a 4-2 lead into the sixth inning, but a missed third strike on what would have been the third out and a subsequent error allowed the visitors to score their third and fourth runs to tie the game.

The Quincy lads then capital-

Complacency was never an issue in girls tennis team's attempted state title defense

By Mark Goodman

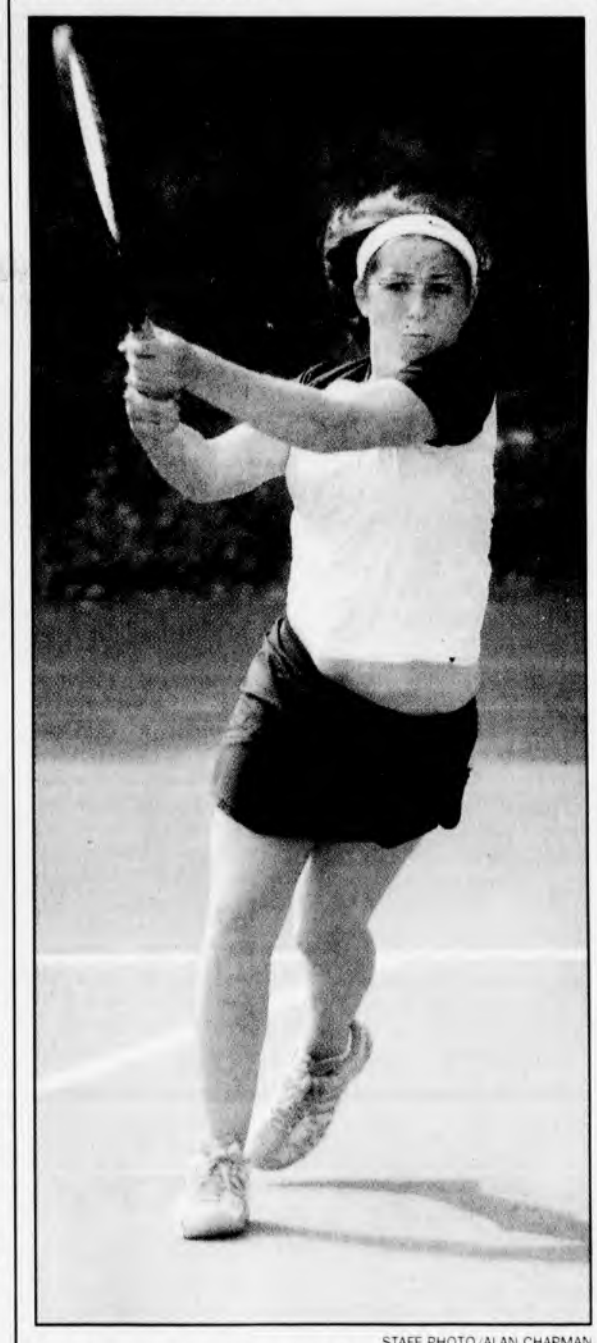
41-2.

That is the record of Cohasset girls tennis over the last two years.

The team had a lot to live up to this year. Following a 22-0 state championship season in 2003, the girls hardly had an easy road of it in 2004, with everyone giving everything they had to knock them off.

And yet Cohasset lost only once during the regular season, and won their second straight Div. 2 South sectional title. Their run this year ended with a state semifinal loss to Manchester-Essex. As was the case with their regular season loss to Ursuline, the score was 3-2, with the deciding match going three sets.



Another bounce here or there, and we might be talking about another state title. But that is not the gauge by which head coach Gigi Meehan will judge the year.

"It was a wonderful season. It went better than I ever expected," she said. "I am so pleased that we went as far as we did."

The 12-year coach said that after last year's success, it would have been easy for her team to play with less enthusiasm or to play "not to lose." With this team, however, that was not the case.

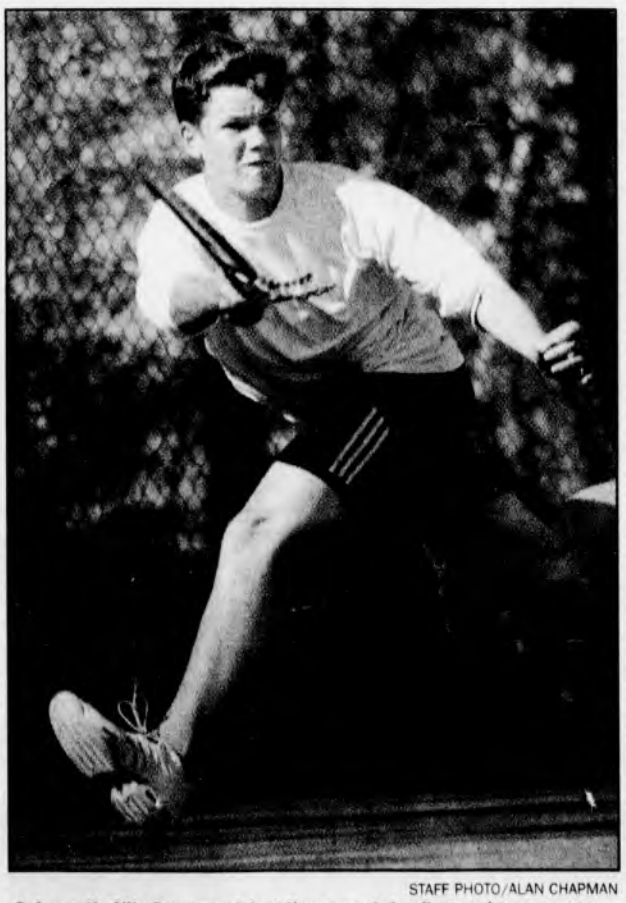
Senior Courtney Caron, a two-time Mariner All-Scholastic selection as a double player, will certainly be missed next year.

All-Scholastic boys tennis team

Cohasset's Sceery named among area's elite

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.



In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just seven singles players and three doubles teams, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top male tennis players in Marinerland for this honor:

Nils Sceery- Sophomore
Second Singles- Cohasset

Nils Sceery

Nils put together an outstanding sophomore year for the Skippers, compiling a team best 14-4 record out of the second singles spot to help get his team into the postseason and tie for second place in the South Shore League…only losses came to fellow Mariner All-Scholastics Ryan Sweeney and Tim Cahill, falling to them twice each…lost to Sweeney 3-6, 5-7 the second time around and both losses to the senior Cahill were three set thrillers…came from behind to beat B.C. High's number two in the state individual tourney, but then lost to Framingham's number one in the second round…had a 3-0 first set lead in that one when he broke his racquet and was forced to use a new one…SSL all-star…plays tennis year round at Cohasset Tennis Club and the Hanover YMCA…rangy, 6-foot-2 athlete covers court well and hits a very "heavy ball"…saw some time with the CHS varsity soccer team this past fall, and is expected to see a much bigger role as a junior…High Honor Roll student…an Appalachia Service volunteer…Cohasset coach Kent Parrot: "Nils' record speaks for itself. He had a very good year. He's a very strong player with a lot of natural ability. He has the potential to become a very good player over the next few years."

Max Schenkein - Senior
First singles - Norwell

Max Schenkein

Decided to matriculate from baseball to boys tennis after his sophomore year, and never lost a match in South Shore League play…this is Max's second selection to our tennis team, and fourth selection overall as a Mariner All-Scholastic (he also made our golf team the past two seasons)…played second singles as a junior and in the first spot this spring, proving key in extending the Clippers streaks in SSL play to 114 straight wins and 11 consecutive titles…Clippers went 12-1 overall this year (10-0 in SSL)…an extremely intense competitor who seems to be at his best in big matches…was the only player to beat Harwich's Craig Druschella in SSL play, doing so in both of their meetings, both of them thrilling marathon matches…considered best win of season a three set thriller over Hanover's Pauri Pandian, a fellow two-time All-Scholastic and a player he'd lost to a few times in off season play at the Hanover YMCA…the lefty utilizes a strong serve and a powerful backhand, which he follows to the net very effectively…two time SSL All-Star…finished with two year record of 28-4 (including 20-0 in SSL)…made it to the third round of the state individual tourney, where he lost to Brookline's Alex Rastorgouev, who went on to advance to the semifinals…beat state champion Wellesley's second singles standout, Dan Verhais, in the second round…also a very good student…takes

A's Repeat as Major League Champions

Led by some clutch hitting and the pitching of Brendan Doonan and Johhnny Maher, the A's defended their Cohasset Little League Major League title, this week, winning a best-of-three series over the Mets.

Tuesday showdown for all of the marbles between the first place Mets and repeat-minded A's was a nail biter.

The Mets took an early lead, 5-1, but Doonan an Maher stopped the bleeding and the A's bats came alive to carry the day for a come-from-behind championship clinching win, 7-5.

Veteran Tom Condon pitched all six innings for the Mets. Condon has shown tremendous poise and strength for the Mets all season, controlling the field from his usual catcher's position.

The Mets came ready to even the score in game two. With fans and parents cheering on, the Mets stands were adorned with balloons and banners.

Johnny Maher took to the mound for the A's and gave up a one run home run to Mets slugger Robby McCunney in the first inning. EJ Culhane made a fabulous running catch in right field off a Max Maccleave hit to end the inning. Rookie sensation Drew Cobin took to the mound

He just refuses to lose. On top of that, he's a very bright kid, so when you talked strategy with him, he just locked onto it."

Pauri Pandian - Senior (Capt.)
First singles - Hanover

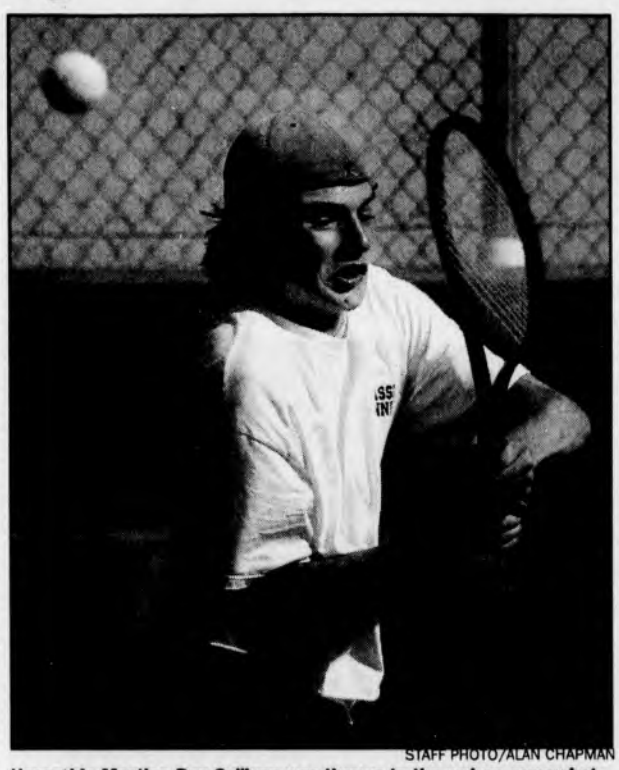
Pauri Pandian

A three-year starter at the No. 1 singles spot, Pandian was once again a player to watch in the Patriot League… Pandian had a stellar senior campaign for the Indians, leading the squad to a second place finish in the PL (8-2) behind only unbeaten Duxbury…Pandian dropped only two matches in league, falling twice to Duxbury's No. 1 player, despite taking him to three sets…He also split matches with Norwell's No. 1 player…Pandian helped power Hanover to a 10-4 overall record, its two non-league losses coming against South Shore League champs Norwell, and qualified for postseason play in the Div. 2 South Sectional…There, the Indians dropped a tough 4-1 loss to Holliston…Pandian is a three-time Patriot League All-star and year round tennis player…He plans to attend Wesleyan College in the fall where he hopes to continue his tennis career. Hanover coach Monika Schmidt: "Pauri has come a heck of a long way. He's an awesome role model for the rest of the team and has worked hard to put Hanover tennis back on track. He was a great leader and a great captain."

Ryan Sweeney- Freshman
Second Singles- Norwell

Ryan Sweeney

Emerged onto scene in a big way, going unbeaten in South Shore League play to help the Clippers extend their streaks in SSL play to 114 straight wins and 11 consecutive titles…an extremely consistent player who seems able to hit winners from virtually anywhere on the court…will almost surely move into the first singles spot being vacated by two-time SSL All-Star and Mariner All-Scholastic Max Schenkein…biggest wins in league came over fellow SSL all-star Nils Sceery, both in straight sets…went 14-1 overall (10-0 in league), including 2-0 in postseason…only loss came to number two player from unbeaten Duxbury…only regular season loss was to unbeaten Duxbury number two Rob Groezinger…won one match in state individuals before falling to Newton North's vaunted number one Doug Fleischer, though he did have a 4-3 first set lead on the high seeded Tiger…played Schenkein very close in the showdowns for the Clippers number one designation…plays tennis year round at the Hanover YMCA and Weymouth Club…playing in several state and regional USTA tourney this summer…was also a member of NHS golf and freshman basketball teams…has also played football and is an accomplished ping pong player…Honor Roll student wroks quite a bit with computers and is an avid reader…Norwell coach Jay Swartz: "The thing that strikes you about Ryan is his intelligence on the court, and a savvy that makes it hard to believe he's just a freshman. He adjusts his game based on what his opponent is showing him and he finds way to use his opponent's strengths against him."



Brad Anderson- Junior
First Singles- Scituate

Brad Anderson

A powerful player who posted a very respectable 12-6 record in his first year as the Sailors top singles player… two losses each came to Duxbury's unbeaten Dan O'Connell and fellow Mariner All-Scholastic Pauri Pandian, of Hanover, though the first meeting was a thriller (6-2, 6-7, 2-6)…split his season series with Hingham's Brandon Luttinger, winning the second time around (6-4, 6-7, 6-0)…Patriot League all-star…went 14-2 as a sophomore at second singles, with both of his losses coming to Duxbury counterparts…also twice bested Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mention Dan Sullivan, of Cohasset High, in straight sets… possesses a strong serve and powerful forehand and covers the court well… plays tennis year round at Scituate Health and Racquet Club…also a key member of SHS golf team…hopes to play tennis in college…Scituate coach Rob Leary: "Brad is just a real competitive kid who doesn't like to lose. He's a strong server and has a real heavy return. Getting him back next year is huge."

Tim Cahill - Senior
Second singles - Scituate

A human backboard who simply outlasts his opponent on many points…put together a team best 15-3 record (10-2 in Patriot League) for 13-5 Sailors… Two time Patriot League all-star had two losses to Duxbury's second singles player and the other in the state tourney loss to Wellesley—the team that went on to win the state title…twice beat fellow All-Scholastic Nils Sceery, of Cohasset, in three sets…also twice bested a tough Hingham number two… posted an 8-6 record playing number one singles as a junior, earning Patriot League all-star and Mariner All-Scholastic honors here as well…split decisions with fellow Mariner All-Scholastic Pauri Pandian last year…also a two-year member of the varsity soccer team…younger brother of two-time Mariner All-Scholastic soccer player Ryan Cahill (SHS Class of '03), who plans to play soccer at Westfield College this fall…Tim will follow his brother to Bridgeton Academy prep school this fall in the hopes of improving his college prospects…would like to play tennis in college…leaning toward majoring in Education…Scituate coach Rob Leary: "Playing against Tim is a lot like playing against a backboard. He gets to just about everything and gets it back over the net. He's very strong mentally. He doesn't get upset and he's very strong fundamentally. He wears people down."

STAFF PHOTO/ALAN CHAPMAN

Honorable Mention Dan Sullivan was thrown to the wolves somewhat, this spring, playing out of the first singles spot for the Skippers against some premier competition, but that kind of experience can only help the sophomore down the road.

Tim Cahill

Evan Williams

Evan Williams - Senior (Capt.)
First singles - Silver Lake

This is Evan's second straight selection as a Mariner All-Scholastic…worked hard on his game in the offseason, as well as his conditioning, putting on 15-20 pounds of muscle between his junior and senior seasons… put together a very solid 12-6 season against top competition, including wins in both of the Lakers postseason contests, keying the Lakers 12-8 season…went 9-3 in OCL play, with two losses coming to Barnstable's Jacob Bear and one to Falmouth's Sean Pease, with whom he split two decisions—both of them fellow league all-stars…twice beat OCL All-Star Matt Cayer, of B-R…had a lead on Bear in state tourney when the Barnstable coach opted to default the match, with the team decision having already been decided…made it to second weekend of play in the state individual tourney, but fell in the third round to Coyle Cassidy's Andrew Burnilia…considered best win a victory over Taunton's top player—"going on fumes", as he said, in his fifth match in five days…two time OCL all-star… a four-year varsity starter, playing first doubles as a freshman, second singles as a sophomore and first singles the last two years…winner of Silver Lake's Outstanding Male Athlete Award for the spring…was a member of the Silver Lake wrestling team in his first two years at the school, but gave that sport up to devote more time to tennis in the winter…has been ranked previously by USTA-New England…plays tennis year round at the Kingsbury Club in Kingston, where his father (Mark) is a club pro …a High Honors student who graduated with a 4.0 GPA, taking primarily AP courses…also an award winning artist…will major in Communication Design at Syracuse University…Silver Lake coach David Rix: "Evan really dedicated himself to this season, starting with all the work he did on his conditioning and game in the off season. He set a great example for all of his teammates. He was .a true leader, mostly by example, but he was vocal when he had to be. He was there every day in practice and in all matches totally into what he was doing. He was our anchor."

Doubles

Kyle Swartz / Chris Pisarkiewicz-
First Doubles - Norwell

Kyle Swartz

These new senior partners looked like a longtime pairing, as they whipped through all comers this season, to finish with a 12-1 record (including a perfect 10-0 in SSL play)…this is the third All-Scholastic selection for Kyle, the first two coming with Mike Allen (who went unbeaten as the Clippers third singles player this season)…Pisarkiewicz was a regular at second doubles the last two years…an odd couple that worked well together, Kyle covering more of the court and playing a power game and Pisarkiewicz playing a strong tactical game and working the angles well…the pair of college bound players did not participate in the state individual tourney…only regular season loss came to Duxbury's unbeaten top pair…

Kyle, who also ran cross country and winter track at NHS, will attend the University of Connecticut and hopes to play Club tennis…undecided on major…Honor Roll and National Honor Society student…ran cross country…did winter track two years before but hurt…Chris will attend Fairfield College…Norwell coach Jay Swartz: "Even though this was only their first year of playing together, Chris and Kyle were extremely consistent playing together. I think the experience they had as doubles players obviously was a huge factor. Really, they just kind of overpowered most of the teams they played."

John Elstermeyer / Kyle Opie-
First Doubles- Braintree

John Elstermeyer

This duo was the real bright spot for a team that won just four matches, as they finished with a 13-4 record in the ultra-competitive Bay State Conference, which includes several perennial state powers…two strong ground-strokers who often threw other teams off their game by playing primarily from the baseline…BSC All-Scholastic Honorable Mentions…top win of year was a 6-4, 2-6, 6-2 win over state champion Wellesley's top doubles team, avenging an earlier loss… also had a big win over powerhouse Brookline's first pairing…

Kyle Opie

Elstermeyer, a senior, who earned a Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mention nod last year for his play at second singles for the Wamps, was the winner of this year's Lawrence Getting's Memorial Award, given to Braintree High's top male tennis player…switched from baseball to tennis in his junior year…was also captain of the BHS soccer team… member of SADD…the regular Honor Roll student plans to major in Business at Bryant College…may try to play soccer and/or tennis at Bryant

A sophomore, Opie also plays soccer and basketball at BHS… comes from strong athletic stock, with older brothers Brad and Scott also multi-sport standouts at BHS…plays tennis year round at the Weymouth Club…teaching tennis this summer in Bourne…hopes to play tennis in college. Braintree coach Matt Freeman: "This was the one point we could count on in just about every match. John and Kyle worked well together. They never got too up or too down, and they played several top teams extremely tough. They were both very good groundstrokers, and the defensive posture I think worked well against a lot of the more aggressive teams they played."

Tom O'Donnell / Walt O'Donnell -
First Doubles - Hingham

This band of brothers was a force on the court for the rebuilding Hingham squad…As two of the more reliable players on the Harbormen team (5-8 overall, 4-6 Patriot League), senior captain Tom and younger brother Walt teamed for a 6-4 Patriot League record, twice falling to Duxbury's No. 1 unbeaten pair…The O'Donnell brothers were the only doubles team in league to take the Green Dragon duo to three sets…The team also played tough against Norwell's No. 1 pair in a non-league loss to the perennial South Shore League champions…Both were voted Patriot League All-stars for their efforts this season.
